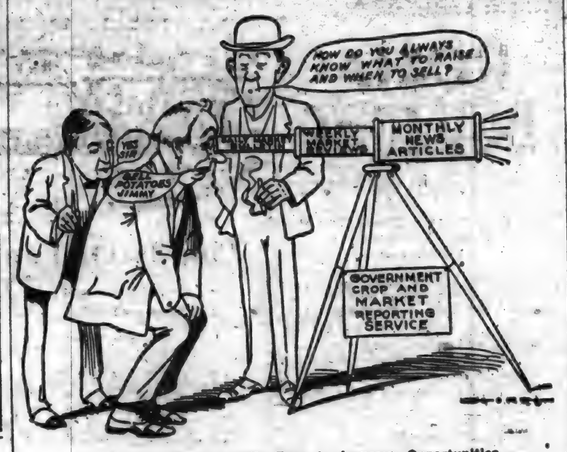
PRODUCE GROWERS KEPT IN TOUCH WITH CONDITIONS BY GOVERNMENT SERVICE



Using the Government's Eyes to Improve Opportunities.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Shaping one's course by faith rather than by sight is doubtless good practice, spiritually speaking, but produce growers used to find it mighty disastrous in business. Of course, some of them are still following the faith system of growing and marketing, because they have not seen fit to use the eyes furnished them by the government in the crop and market reporting service of the United States department of agriculture. These are still planting, gathering, and marketing more or less at random, but a constantly increasing number are looking around and ahead, seeing what other sections are doing, finding where any shortage or surplus is likely to be produced, ascertaining special advantages or disadvantages in consuming centers, and generally getting a forecast of the market from crop and other conditions the country over.

The farsighted southern potato grower no longer plants blindly or by rote. He takes into account the volume and probable movement of the northern crop and the quantity of the old crop likely to come over till spring. The northern grower watches the development of the southern crop. If the southern acreage is reduced, if there are late freezes, if anything happens to bring about a material reduction of the crop in the South or in any large potato-growing section of the North, the wide-awake northern grower is in position to make money by putting in a late acreage and top-dressing it. The Texas onion grower, before time for planting, takes into consideration the quantity of old northern stock in storage and the rate at which it is going to market.

Worth $500 to This Grower.

In a score of lines the same system is being followed. Take, for illustration, the case of a grower of hothouse lettuce in the neighborhood of one of the large eastern cities. Ordinarily he grows to meet a fairly late market, after the Florida and South Carolina crops are off. But if he receives news of a destructive freeze in the South, he promptly regulates his seed beds and moisture in such way as materially to advance the maturity of his crop to take advantage of the shortage soon to occur. One such grower of hothouse lettuce says that the government crop and market reporting service is worth $500 a year to him in that way.

Here is another concrete illustration: During the past season there was a short crop of potatoes in Virginia and Maryland. The crop and market reporting service informed potato growers over the country of that fact in time for them to take advantage of it. As a result, some southern growers held their potatoes for a few weeks, while some northern growers dug and marketed theirs a little earlier than usual, thus not only obtaining better prices, but filling in a period when there would have been otherwise a shortage of new potatoes.

Shows Market Advantages.

The service indicates, to the grower who uses it intelligently, temporary and local market advantages. A city that this week is an extremely poor market for a particular commodity may be the best market for that commodity next week. The grower who has followed the reports and correctly interpreted conditions is thus in position to ship in such way as to get his produce on that market at the beginning of better prices.

The results are beneficial alike to producer and consumer. The producer takes advantage of the market where prices are best. The consumer has a more regular supply and usually without extreme fluctuations in prices. Of course, such application of benefits is not yet universal. The service is comparatively new and many people have not yet learned to avail themselves of it. However, the 32 permanent branch offices of the bureau of markets and the numerous temporary stations in shipping areas bring within reach of practically all shippers the information furnished in the form of daily market bulletins, weekly market reviews and monthly news articles.

EFFECT OF WEATHER CONDITIONS IS FELT

One Market May Go Up While Another Goes Opposite Way.

Crop and Market Service of Department of Agriculture Keeps Both Shipper and Consumer Posted on Situation.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Any given weather condition—cold, rain or heat—may affect one market one way and another market in the directly opposite way. A period of rainy weather, for instance, might put peach prices away up in New York or Chicago and away down in Atlanta or Augusta. The effect of any particular weather condition is likely to be different in the big consuming market from what it is in producing sections. In the case cited, the rain might delay gathering. Then at the beginning of fair weather, great quantities of more or less damaged peaches would come in at once, instead of being distributed over a period of weeks, and prices would go down sharply. At the same time, a shortage would have been caused in some of the large cities and prices would go up. Another set of conditions might reverse the process, making prices high in producing sections and relatively low at consuming markets. The crop and market reporting service of the United States department of agriculture, carrying full information on weather and crop conditions, keeps both the shipper and the consumer posted as to such conditions and, in a general way, works to smooth out such discrepancies.

Cowpeas Are Really Beans.

Cowpeas really are not peas but beans. They are the kind of beans most commonly cultivated for food in the old world. In our country they are used mainly as a pasture crop.

Splendid Spring Pasture.

If stock is turned on sweet clover in the spring before it has had a chance to become woody, it makes a splendid pasture.

MARKET TERMS

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The market is FIRM—

when, for the commodity under consideration, prices are holding fairly from day to day and from week to week, with the values more prompt than the declines and values gaining only a few cents when compared with the week or fortnight before.

when the advances are fairly sharp and the declines slight and quickly overcome.

The market is WEAK—

when the declines are sharp and persistent, continually reaching low points and making only slight and short recoveries. The degree of weakness is measured by the frequency and extent of such movements.

The market is DRAGGING—

when prices sag almost imperceptibly, simply falling a little short of the previous top quotations from time to time so that the decline is scarcely noticeable except by comparison with the level of the previous week or month.

Reports of the condition of the crop, the shipments, the weather, are factors in determining what may be expected to follow a firm, strong weak, or dragging market. The progressive produce grower studies all of these conditions and markets his produce accordingly.

DANDRUFF MAKES HAIR FALL OUT

A small bottle of "Danderine" keeps hair thick, strong, beautiful.

Girls! Try this! Doubles beauty of your hair in a few moments.

Within ten minutes after an application of Danderine you can not find a single trace of dandruff or falling hair and your scalp will not itch, but what will please you most will be after a few weeks' use, when you see new hair, fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair—growing all over the scalp.

A little Danderine immediately doubles the beauty of your hair. No difference how dull, faded, brittle and scraggy, just moisten a cloth with Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. The effect is amazing—your hair will be light, fluffy and wavy, and have an appearance of abundance; an incomparable lustre, softness and luxuriance.

Get a small bottle of Knowlton's Danderine for a few cents at any drug store or toilet counter, and prove that your hair is as pretty and soft as any—that it has been neglected or injured by careless treatment—that's all—you surely can have beautiful hair and lots of it if you will just try a little Danderine.—Adv.

IT'S NOT YOUR HEART; IT'S YOUR KIDNEYS

Kidney disease is no respecter of persons. A majority of the life afflicting people today can be traced back to the kidney trouble.

The kidneys are the most important organs of the body. They are the filterers of your blood. If the poisons which are swept from the tissues by the blood are not eliminated through the kidneys, disease of one form or another will claim you as a victim.

Kidney disease is usually indicated by weariness, sleeplessness, nervousness, despondency, backache, stomach trouble, pain in loins and lower abdomen, gall stones, gravel, rheumatism, sciatica and lumbago.

All these derangements are nature's signals that the kidneys need help. You should use GOLD MEDAL Haarlem Oil Capsules immediately. The soothing, healing oil stimulates the kidneys, relieves inflammation and destroys the germs which have caused it. Go to your druggist today and get a box of GOLD MEDAL Haarlem Oil Capsules. In twenty-four hours you should feel health and vigor returning.

After you feel somewhat improved continue to take one or two capsules each day, so as to keep the first-class condition and ward off the danger of other attacks.

Ask for the original imported GOLD MEDAL brand. Three sizes. Money refunded if they do not help you.

Jubilee! Jubilee!

In the general rejoicing over the National Amendment outlawing intoxicating liquors, we see great needs facing us on every hand. At every Jubilee meeting over the ratification of the Federal Prohibition Amendment glowing tributes have been paid to the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, referred to by speakers as "Our MOTHER" in the Prohibition Work.

The mighty faith and heroic self-sacrifice of the women of the CRUSADE swept over the nation like wild fire and was he fore-runner of the organization. Every woman joining pledged herself to total abstinence, to the temperance training of children and to constant agitation against the liquor business.

Within a few years in every hamlet and city in the United States was organized this praying working band of temperance women. The children of the communities were gathered into Temperance Legions with the derided motto: "Tremble, King Alcohol, We Shall Grow Up."

In 1879 a resolution was adopted in the National Convention making the introduction of Scientific Temperance Instruction in the public schools a department of work. Under this department the W. C. T. U. was instrumental in securing in every state and territory of the United States the passage of compulsory scientific temperance instruction laws.

Through the appeal of Francis E. Willard, a quarterly temperance Sunday School lesson was placed in the International course, when even christian men believed it would do no good and would prove an unpopular and irritating lesson.

Thus, in its earliest years, the W. C. T. U. trained the children in the home, in the school and in the Sunday School. These children are now a great body of total abstainers voting in the states and in Congress for National Prohibition.

The W. C. T. U. blazed the trail for moral and temperance legistation in legislative halls and in Congress In February, 1875, Frances E. Willard presented to Congress a huge petition asking for National Constitutional Prohibition and never has that work been slackened.

Had the W. C T. U. only the one objective—total abstinence and the abolishment of the saloon, its work could not yet be discontinued. The principals of total abstinance must still be emphasized; special stress must still be laid upon the teaching of scientific temperance in our schools; the foreign born must have special attention that they may have contentedness in National Prohibition.

The W. C. T. U. must now raise a million dollars and secure a million new members. Every state, including Alaska, has been given its quota of the one million dollars to be raised in the drive, beginning March 20 and continuing until May 31.

Home For Every Child

A Home for Every Homeless Child is the slogan for the various social agencies in Indiana which are making an effort to protect and conserve the childhood of the state. A Home for Every Homeless Child is the crying need of the children who, because of neglect, have become dependent and have been denied some of their natural birthrights.

There are being maintained in the orphans' homes of the state about 1,900 children for whom good family homes are desired. We believe that for every homeless child that is physically and mentally normal there is some good home ready and able to receive it and give it the love, care and training of which it has been deprived through no fault of its own. Many of them are of the impressionable age—between 5 and 12 years old. They want homes. They want kind, sympathetic, patient foster fathers and mothers who will help them to grow into useful citizenship. The citizens can render a most useful service by helping secure homes for these unfortunate children.

Figures in the office of the Board of State Charities show that many thousand children have had advantage of foster homes in past years. About 3,200 of them are in family homes at the present time under supervision, while many others have been legally adopted. These children are having restored to them their right to normal life and training and in return are bringing happiness to many foster parents.

The 1,900 children in orphans' homes are longing for a like opportunity. Will you help them? Will you take some boy or girl into your home and find other families who will take them? If you want to render a useful service to the children and to the state communicate with the board of children's guardians in your county, the orphans' homes or the Board of State Charities, Room 93 State House, Indianapolis, for desired information.

AMERICAN PEOPLE READY TO COMPLETE THE JOB

Victory Liberty Loan Must Succeed to a Degree In Keeping With Success of Former Loans.

By CHARLES H. SCHWEPPE, Director of Victory Liberty Loan Campaign, Seventh Federal Reserve District.

Despite the fact that hostilities have ceased and preliminary steps to the signing of a peace treaty been taken, our big war job is not finished. The job will not be completed until the war bills are paid and the slate of the nation is clean. Those of us who remained on this side of the water still have work to do to polish off the great victory won by our soldiers and sailors, and the work before us is as patriotic and essential as that already accomplished.

The Victory Liberty Loan must succeed to a degree in keeping with the success of the four previous loans. This success can be attained only through the efforts and enthusiasm of the entire people. Liberty Loan organizations must put into their efforts the same vim and fire that characterized their work in the previous loans. The people must do everything within their powes to aid the organizations in performing the task that is as much theirs as in the time when the nation was warring.

The spirit of thanksgiving should permeate the American atmosphere—should dominate the heart of every citizen, for if it had not been for the extensive preparation to fight the central powers until victory perched upon our banner the war would have been prolonged indefinitely, with a consequent loss of thousands of lives that otherwise were saved to us when the German general staff acknowledged the futility of continuing the struggle for world domination. The great victory was achieved very largely through the shells that were never exploded, through the soldiers that did not go across, and through the general preparations in other directions. The American people can give expression to their thanksgiving by subscribing to the limit of their ability in making the Victory Liberty Loan an overwhelming success.

The fullness of the great victory will not be realized until the war bills are paid and all the boys brought home. The expenses of the war have been huge, but America set out to win the war at any cost, and now, with victory secure, the American people stand ready to complete the job assigned to them—providing the money necessary to win the victory.

Mrs. Emma Bearss very pleasantly entertained a number of the ladies of the W. C. T. U. Friday afternoon, the topic, Press and Home Economics, was an interesting one. Opening song, "We're Coming Dear Leader." Mrs. DeLora Curie conducted the devotional reading from 2 Timothy 3, and offering prayer. In the absence of Mrs. Eva Sheffer who was to have had a parliamentary drill, Mrs. Ota George read "The Little Union Signal" Mrs. Ella Patterson conducted an interesting discussion on "Need of Simplicity, in home life, in dress and in entertaining, also read a story entitled "Clothes" which showed that one could be more elegantly dressed if made simply and that one looked better dressed if the extremes of fashions were not followed. Mrs. Jennie Sechler read a leaflet and Mrs. Daisy Woodcox a poem both on the Union Signal. Secretary's report and roll call followed. A short business session was held and meeting dismissed by all repeating Lord's Prayer.

High School Musical.

The public was indeed, well paid for their attending the musical, last Friday evening at the Widney Opera House, staged entirely by the high school pupils, under the efficient leadership of C. A. Woodcox, director of music. The program as published in last week's NEWS was carried out with a slight change, and to give the general expression of the audience, it was superb and far beyond expectations. There is something in every child along the musical line that needs attention, and be made to give expression to it as early in life as possible and now the corriculum prescribes instruction in music and under such leadership as we have for our children, marked progress is being made. Music appeals to the finer qualities in human nature and is one of the most elevating influences that anyone can come in contact with. The High School is to be congratulated upon their success and are deserving of more interest in their work from the parents and others of the community Nearly $50.00 was received at the door.

Shot Thru Abdomen.

Saturday about noon, Thurman Miller, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wallie Miller living about four miles southeast of Spencerville, accidentally shot himself in the left side with a revolver. The bullet passed thru the lungs and almost to the surface on the right side.

Saturday afternoon he was taken to the Snyder Hospital at Hicksville where he lingered until Sunday noon when he passed away.

The young man had his revolver out in the field with him in the morning shooting crows. At noon he said he would not take it along with him anymore and went to his room to clean the gun and put it away. A few minutes later the shot was heard and he came out of his room and sat down.

Although the family phoned to several towns, it was several hours before medical attendance could be secured.

After the accident, he said he thot he had taken all the shells out. The bullet entered less than inch below the heart and took an upward course. Both lungs were penetrated.

He was twenty-one years of age and one of the highly respected young men of that neighborhood. The remains were taken to the home Sunday afternoon, and funeral was held on Wednesday afternoon of this week, at the East Springfield Church, with interment at Scipio.

S. L. Widney is suffering a relapse as a result of the flu. He was taken very seriously ill Sunday evening, but is today some better. He came to the home of his son, last week, to attend the meeting of his church on Monday, but was unable to do so. Mr. Widney has been extremely well for a man of his years and his sudden illness was a shock to his many St. Joe friends.

Mrs. Lizzie Reasoner and three children, of Elkhart, came Saturday evening to be the guest of her mother, Mrs. Ann Dilley, until Wednesday. Frank Baker and family were also Sunday guests.

WHY YOUR MONEY IS NEEDED—HOW IT HELPS

This Brief Questionnaire Gives Interesting Information on the Victory Liberty Loan.

The government already is exploiting the Victory Liberty Loan, which will be floated in April, in order that the people may start saving for the purpose of investing in bonds of the "Victory issue." The following brief questionnaire should tend to clarify the mind of any reader regarding the Victory Loan:

Q. The war being over, why is there need of another great popular war loan?

A. The proceeds from the Fourth loan, according to Secretary of the Treasury Glass, were exhausted last December, and the government must have billions more with which to maintain our forces overseas, bring the victors home and carry out its reconstruction plans.

Q. If Uncle Sam's strong-box is empty, how is he paying his after-war expenses?

A. This is being done with money borrowed from the banks at the rate of $600,000,000 every two weeks, short-term anticipation certificates of indebtedness being issued in return.

Q. As long as the banks are advancing the money, why not let them continue to do so?

A. Because in order to continue to extend credit to the business interests big and little of the country the banks must get back this money—amounting to 20 per cent of their entire resources—when it falls due, as only thus can the prosperity we now enjoy be continued.

Q. Will the Victory Loan be offered to the people on a commercial basis, or will their patriotism again be appealed to?

A. Secretary Glass says the patriotism of the American people will be relied upon to send the loan triumphantly "over the top." It, however, will be made particularly attractive as to rate of interest and period of maturity.

Q. What are the monthly war expenditures of the government at the present time?

A. The latest official figures show that Uncle Sam is expending money at the rate of more than $2,000,000,000 a month.

Q. Suppose I bought bonds of preceding issues and feel I can't afford to buy any more Liberty bonds?

A. Uncle Sam has to pay his bills, and you must afford it, even if you have to continue for a further time denying yourself luxuries and apparent necessities. Unless the Victory Liberty Loan is a success the government will be compelled to raise the money it needs by direct taxation, and there are no interest coupons on tax receipts.

Falls from Step Ladder.

Saturday was an unlucky day for two of our citizens. Mrs. Hillary Shuff fell from step ladder at the school house, while assisting Mr. Shuff in cleaning the school house. Mr. Shuff had gone to the upper room to sweep while Mrs. Shuff was washing the hall windows down stairs, when he heard a noise and run down stairs to see what had happened, when he found her lying on the floor on her back, severely bruised. He attempted to get her up but was unable to move her. A phone call for Dr. Sheffer brought some assistance and Mrs. Shuff was taken home. Upon examination it was found that no bones were broken, but that she was severely bruised. Due to her age, a fall of this kind is very hard to recover from and she can hardly turn herself in bed. A few weeks will see her about again.

The second accident of the day was that of Daniel Oberholtzer of the west part of town. He and Al Hull were hauling manure from the Sam Kees barn and was standing on the load. He drove under a clothes line and it caught his hat, pulling it off, and in making a quick move, he became overbalanced and fell to the ground, lighting on his back. He was bruised considerably and is now able to move about in bed a little.

America's Immortals

Most striking instances of gallantry for which the Distinguished Service Cross has been awarded

It was a difficult task to select from the thousands of acts of unusual bravery performed by American soldiers in France a few that stood out above all others. General Pershing's staff undertook the task, however, so that the most exceptional cases might be given the publicity they deserve. Below are the stories of the feats that won for some of the American fighters the coveted Distinguished Service Cross.

HARRY GROVER O'CONNOR,
Sergeant, Headquarters Detachment, Personnel Office, 78th Division.

Sergt. O'Connor was decorated for conspicuous bravery in action near St. Juvin, France, October 15, 1918. Sergt. O'Connor volunteered and went from his division headquarters to one of the regiments in line to obtain much needed information and to arrange for liaison. He covered the distance of six kilometers through shell fire three times before the unit was found; and, while returning with the information, was seriously wounded by a shell which mortally wounded two companions. He gave water and first aid to the two men and dragged himself down the road until he met a soldier whom he sent for an ambulance. After reaching the hospital and having his wounds dressed, he left the hospital without the knowledge of the attendants and delivered the information to his division headquarters in person.

RICHARD H. HILTON,
Sergeant, Company M, 116th Infantry.

Sergt. Hilton was decorated for conspicuous gallantry at Brancourt, France, October 11, 1918. While Sergt. Hilton's company was advancing through the village of Brancourt, it was held up by intense enfilading fire from a machine gun. Discovering that the fire came from a machine gun nest in a shell hole at the edge of the town, Sergt. Hilton, accompanied by a few other soldiers, but well in advance of them, pressed on toward this position, firing with his rifle until his ammunition was exhausted, and then with his pistol, killing six of the enemy and capturing ten. In the course of this daring exploit, Sergt. Hilton received a wound from a bursting shell which resulted in the loss of his arm. Sergt. Hilton's home is at Westville, S. C.

WILBUR E. COLVER,
Sergeant, Company A, 1st U. S. Engineers.

For conspicuous gallantry in action near Verdun, France, October 9, 1918, Sergt. Colver was awarded the Distinguished Service Cross. Volunteering, with two other soldiers, to locate machine gun nests, Sergt. Colver advanced on the hostile positions to a point where he was half surrounded by the nests, which were in ambush. He killed the gunner of one gun with a captured German grenade and then turned this gun on the other nests, silencing all of them before he returned to his platoon. He was later killed in action. Sergt. Colver lived with his father, William H. Colver, at 202 Helen avenue, South Ozone, L. I., N. Y.

BERGER LEMAN,
Private, Company H, 132nd Infantry.

Private Leman was decorated for conspicuous gallantry in action near Consenvoye, France, October 9, 1918. When his company reached a point within 100 yards of its objective, to which it was advancing under terrific machine gun fire, Private Leman voluntarily and unaided, made his way forward, after all others had taken shelter from the direct fire of an enemy machine gun. He crawled to a flank position of the gun and after killing or capturing the entire crew, turned the machine gun on the retreating enemy. His mother, Mrs. Anna Leman, lives in Chicago.

SIDNEY HOLZEMAN,
Private, Machine Gun Co., 132nd Infantry.

Private Holzeman was decorated for extraordinary heroism in action in the Bois de Foret, France, October 10, 1918. After six runners had been killed or wounded in attempts to get through heavy shell fire with an important message from the regimental commander of the 39th infantry to the regimental commander of the 59th infantry, Private Holzeman, with Private James J. Snyder, responded to a call for volunteers, and succeeded in delivering the message.

LLOYD M. SEIBERT,
Sergeant, Company F, 364th Infantry.

Sergeant Seibert was awarded the Distinguished Service Cross for conspicuous gallantry in action near Eptenonville, France, September 26, 1918. Suffering from illness, Sergeant Seibert remained with his platoon and led his men with the highest courage and leadership under heavy shell and machine gun fire. With two other soldiers Seibert charged a machine gun emplacement in advance of their company, he himself killing one of the enemy with a shotgun, and capturing two others. In this encounter he was wounded, but he nevertheless continued in action, and when a withdrawal was ordered he returned with the last unit, assisting a wounded comrade. Later in the evening he volunteered and carried in wounded until he fainted from exhaustion. His father, George Seibert, lives in Salinas, Cal.

JOSEPH W. SMITH,
First Lieutenant, 116th Infantry.

Lieutenant Smith was decorated for conspicuous gallantry in action near St. Baussant, France, September 12, 1918. Finding that his platoon would be under heavy fire from six enemy machine guns in crossing the Rupt de Mad, Lieutenant Smith plunged into the stream ahead of his men, and crossing to the opposite bank, exposed himself to fire from the guns in order to ascertain their exact location. He then led his men in a flank attack on the enemy position, capturing the guns and nineteen Germans, this officer himself carrying a rifle and using it with telling effect. Lieutenant Smith's quick judgment and disregard for personal safety enabled the entire line to advance without being separated from its barrage. His mother, Mrs. Ritta L. Smith, lives in Austin, Tex.

MATEJ KOCAK,
Sergeant, Company C, 5th Regiment U. S. M. C.

Sergeant Kocak (deceased) won the Distinguished Service Cross for gallantry in action near Soissons, France, July 18, 1918. When the advance of his battalion was checked by a hidden machine gun nest, Sergeant Kocak went forward alone, unprotected by covering fire from his own men, and worked in between the German positions in the face of fire from enemy covering detachments. Locating the machine gun nest, he rushed it, and, with his bayonet drove off the crew. Shortly after this Sergeant Kocak organized 25 French colonial soldiers, who had become separated from their company and led them in attacking another machine gun nest, which was also put out of action.

THOMAS E. O'SHEA,
Corporal, M. G. Co., 107th Infantry.

Corp. O'Shea was awarded the Distinguished Service Cross for conspicuous gallantry in action near Le Catelet, France, September 29, 1918. Becoming separated from their platoon by smoke barrage, Corp. O'Shea, with two other soldiers, took cover in a shell hole well within the enemy lines. Upon hearing a call for help from an American tank, which had become disabled thirty yards from them, the three soldiers left their shelter and started toward the tank, under heavy fire from German machine guns and trench mortars. In crossing the fire-swept area, Corp. O'Shea was mortally wounded and died of his wounds shortly afterward. He lived in Summit, N. J.

JOHANNES S. ANDERSON,
First Sergeant, Company B, 132nd Infantry.

Sergt. Anderson was decorated for conspicuous gallantry in action at Consenvoye, France, October 8, 1918. While his company was being held up by intense artillery and machine gun fire, Sergt. Anderson, without aid, voluntarily left the company and worked his way to the rear of the nest that was offering the most stubborn resistance. His advance was made through an open area, and under constant hostile fire, but the mission was successfully accomplished and Sergt. Anderson not only silenced the gun and captured it, but also brought back with him twenty-three prisoners. His home address is Chicago.

HERMAN DAVIS,
Private Company I, 113th Infantry.

Private Davis, whose home is with his mother at Big Lake, Ark., won the Distinguished Service Cross for unusual bravery in action at Molleville farm, France, October 10, 1918. While acting as company runner Private Davis single-handed attacked a German machine gun nest which was harassing the left flank of the company and preventing its advance. He killed four of the enemy and captured the gun, thus allowing the company to continue forward.

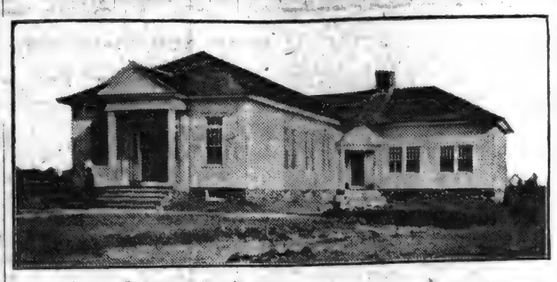
JOHN CALVIN WARD,
Private, Company D, 117th Infantry.

Private Ward was awarded the Distinguished Service Cross for conspicuous gallantry in action near Estrees, France, October 8, 1918. During an advance Private Ward's company was held up by a machine gun which was enfilading the line. Accompanied by a non-commissioned officer, he advanced against this position and succeeded in reducing the nest by killing three and capturing seven of the enemy and their guns. His mother, Mrs. Laura Ward, lives in Morristown, Tenn.

CHARLES D. PRIEST,
Chaplain, 356th Infantry.

Chaplain Priest (deceased) was decorated for extraordinary heroism in action near Les Huit Chemins, France, September 29, 1918. Chaplain Priest disregarded personal danger by going six hundred yards beyond the front line, and with the aid of a soldier, carrying back a wounded man to shelter. Chaplain Priest's home was at 830 North La Salle street, Chicago, Ill.

CENTRALIZED COMMUNITY BUILDINGS ARE PROMOTERS OF NEIGHBORHOOD ACTIVITIES



A Typical Community Building at Bolton, Conn., Shortly After Completion.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The community club provides the "get-together rendezvous" for the rural neighborhood. A country club of this character is not only a clearing house of sociability and rural uplift, but, during the recent war, it supplied excellent quarters for emergency work of the Red Cross, local branches of the council of national defense and other war activities, as well as fostering home economics and farm demonstration operations.

County communities in 100 different localities now enjoy the community club. Rest rooms are provided for the farmers and their families when they visit town, while usually the county agent and the local nurse have offices in the building. The equipment of the building varies with the agricultural prosperity of the territory; from plain furniture and fittings of distinctly utilitarian simplicity to elaborate furnishings, including moving-picture machines, pianos and talking machines.

How Clubs Are Formed.

Not long ago the rural organization project of the bureau of markets, United States department of agriculture, conducted a comprehensive investigation of the community buildings, their activities, organization, and management. Usually the persons owning stock in their community building association organize an incorporated company. Nonstock holders desiring the privileges of the building are associated as social members, both classes paying dues. Generally, the control and management of the buildings are under the direction of the board of trustees and various committees, which centralize their powers in the authority delegated to the house secretary. In some instances where the community building is secured through private or industrial donation, control is placed in a select board named by the donor and possessing power to appoint his successors. Township and state buildings are managed by the usual public officials.

Maintenance Expenses.

As a rule, the annual maintenance expenses range from 5 to 10 per cent of the initial cost, being in the simpler buildings chiefly for light and heat and in the larger ones inclusive of salaries of secretaries, physical directors, caretakers and librarians. Funds to maintain the organizations are secured through membership dues, rentals, receipts from entertainments, moving pictures, bowling, billiards, and similar sources of revenue. According to the report of the government specialists, 32 of the community buildings now in use are owned, controlled, financed, supported, and used by their respective communities. Money is secured by issuing stock, as well as by general contribution, this income being supplemented often by receipts from sales, games and entertainments, or by securing loans with the building as security, the loan being repaid later when sufficient funds accumulate for such purpose.

Aims of Clubs.

Twenty-nine of the clubs studied are the product of local organizations with restricted aims, such as a women's club, athletic club, or a farmers' club, which constructs a building for its private use as well as for the general social use of the community. Twenty of the community buildings now in use have been donated by private individuals, who generally operate and maintain them, while 18 of the clubhouses have been provided by the township or town which maintains the buildings through revenues earned by the buildings themselves. There are seven of these community buildings which have been erected as social centers for the use of the employees of some local industry, as well as for the community in general.

PLAN OUTLINED FOR PLANTING ORCHARDS

Soil Where Trees Are to Be Planted Should Be Prepared.

Important to Take Precautions to Prevent Roots of Trees From Becoming Dry—Where Planting Is Delayed "Heel In."

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

If the prospective orchardist prepares the soil where his trees are to stand as thoroughly as he does his garden before planting vegetables, the growth of his trees will amply repay him. If the orchard site is in sod, it is advisable to cultivate it during one season, at least, after the sod is plowed under, in order that the grass roots may decay before the fruit trees are planted. If the trees are to be planted in a yard where the owner desires to retain his lawn, the soil over an area of several feet where the tree is to stand should be spaded thoroughly. This plan, however, is a compromise between a lawn and a fruit garden, and the results are not likely to be so satisfactory as where the ground is thoroughly cultivated.

Every possible precaution should be taken from the time the trees and other plants are taken from the nursery, until they are planted to prevent the roots from becoming dry. If the plants are to be set at once on being received, the roots may be covered with wet gunny sacks, an old blanket, or some other material that has been thoroughly moistened, until they are ready to be put into the ground.

If it is necessary to delay planting for a considerable time, the trees should be "heeled in." This is done by untying the bundle of plants, loosening and separating the roots and placing the plants in a trench and packing the soil about the roots to prevent drying.

The trees should stand an inch or two deeper when planted than they stood in the nursery, and the holes should be broad enough to receive the roots without bending them from their natural positions. This applies also to raspberry, blackberry, currant, and other small-fruit plants with the exception of strawberries. The last named should be planted at such a depth that the crown of the plant is even with the surface. If they are planted deeper than this they are likely to smother, while if planted more shallow the roots are likely to dry out.

The broken ends of roots should be cut off and any long, slender roots should be shortened to correspond to the main root system. Small-fruit plants should be treated in about the same way, though in actual practice little attention is given to trimming the roots before the plants are set out.

In filling the holes after the trees are placed in position care should be taken to work finely pulverized fertile soil among the roots. This can be done with the fingers better than in almost any other way. After a few shovelfuls of soil have been placed about the roots, it helps if the tree is slightly raised and lowered once or twice. This will tend to work the fine soil in among the roots. As the filling progresses the soil should be firmed about the roots with the foot or by some other effective method. Of all the operations connected with planting, the firming of the soil about the roots is perhaps the most important, and it should be done with great thoroughness. Finally, the holes should be filled even with the surface.

In connection with the planting or immediately following it, the branches of fruit trees should be cut back with a view to giving a desirable form to the top as it develops.

In planting raspberries, blackberries, currants, and gooseberries, the tops should be cut back to a height of about 6 inches. If currants and gooseberries have particularly strong root systems, the tops are sometimes left 10 to 12 inches high.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

(By REV. F. B. FITEWATER, D. D., Teacher of English Bible in the Moody Bible Institute of Chicago.)

(Copyright, 1919, by Western Newspaper Union.)

LESSON FOR APRIL 13

CHRIST OUR SAVIOR.

LESSON TEXTS—John 1:35-51; Matthew 20:27, 28; John 3:16; Romans 8:31, 32.

GOLDEN TEXT—God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth on him should not perish, but have everlasting life.—John 3:16.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus our friend and savior.

JUNIOR TOPIC—What Jesus does for us.

INTERMEDIATE TOPIC—Our Lord and savior.

I. Who Jesus Is (John 1:35-51).

It is absolutely indispensable that every pupil regardless of age should know clearly who Jesus is and what he came into the world for. It should be the ardent desire of every teacher to make so clear the person and work of Christ that the pupils may accept him as their Saviour. Nothing short of his Deity and vicarious atonement will avail for salvation. What he is set forth to be is through personal testimony. For the most part that which he was found to be is through personal investigation.

1. The Lamb of God (v. 36). John testified that he is the Lamb of God—the world's sin bearer. The word used and the idea conveyed carry us back to Isaiah 53 and forward to Jesus on the cross, bearing our sins in his own body. Christ had been definitely pointed out to John by the Holy Spirit (vv. 33, 34).

2. The Messiah (v. 41). At the invitation of Jesus, the disciples went and abode with him for a day. As a result of that day with Jesus they testified that he is the Messiah. He is that one whom God had anointed to be the Saviour of men.

3. The Son of God. (v. 49). Nathanael was interested through the testimony of a friend. Philip told him that he had found Jesus of Nazareth, of whom Moses had written. He knew that Nazareth was not the birthplace of the Messiah, therefore he inquired: "Can any good thing come out of Nazareth?" At the invitation of Philip he made a personal investigation. As a result he testified that Jesus was the Son of God, the King of Israel.

4. The Son of Man (v. 51). This is Christ's own testimony. It shows that he is the Messiah who, according to Daniel's prediction (Dan. 7:13), would appear in divine glory and establish a universal and eternal kingdom. In this testimony of Jesus is foreshadowed the union of man and God, and through him the establishment of a medium of communication between earth and heaven. This is the reality of Jacob's vision at Bethel (Gen. 28: 12).

II. His Mission in the World (Matt. 20:27, 28; John 3:16).

He came to give his life a ransom for many. The world was lost in sin—about to perish. Christ voluntarily gave his life—died instead of the sinner.

1. The world is dying like the Israelites, because bitten by the serpent of sin.

2. Christ, like the brazen serpent, has been lifted up upon the cross as the remedy for sin (John 3:14, 15).

3. As the Israelites must look up to the uplifted serpent, so those who would be saved must believe on Jesus Christ (John 3:16). While looking by faith to the crucified Christ saves from the death-sting of the serpent, a neglect or refusal to believe on him means to perish.

4. This provision was made by God. It emanated from his love (John 3: 16). "For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son."

III. What He Gives (Rom. 8:31, 32).

God gave his Son to save a dying world. Those who accept his Son have God on their side. He that spared his Son will freely give all things to those who receive him. He even makes all things work together for good to them who love him (Rom. 8:28).

Obedience Required.

The Bible rings with one long demand for obedience. The key word of the book of Deuteronomy is "Observe and do." The burden of our Lord's farewell discourse is, "If ye love me, keep my commandments." We must not question or reply or excuse ourselves. We must not pick and choose our way. We must not think that obedience in one direction will compensate for disobedience in some other particular. God gives one command at a time; if we obey this he will flood our soul with blessing, and lead us forward into new paths and pastures. But if we refuse we shall remain stagnant and waterlogged, make no progress in Christian experience, and lack both power and joy.—F. B. Meyer.

God's Love.

Those who love God are encompassed with gladness on every side, because in every passing moment they see and feel a Father's love, and nothing of this world can take it away or lessen it.—Lear.

Every Man.

Depend upon this truth, that every man is the worse looked upon, and the less trusted, for being thought to have no religion; in spite of all the pompous and specious epithets he may assume.—Chesterfield.

HOW CAN YOU TELL YOUR FAVORITE TOBACCO?

As Plain as the Nose on Your Face—Just Smell It

Smokers do not have to put tobacco in their pipes to find out if they like it. They can just rub the tobacco between the palms of their hands and smell it. The nose is an infallible guide to smoking enjoyment.

All smoking tobaccos employ some flavoring "to improve the flavour and burning qualities of the leaves", to quote the Encyclopædia Britannica. Naturally, there is considerable difference in the kind of flavorings used, and the nose quickly detects this difference. TUXEDO Tobacco uses the purest, most wholesome, and delicious of all flavorings—chocolate. And the almost universal liking for chocolate in a great measure explains the widespread popularity of TUXEDO Tobacco.

Carefully aged, old Burley tobacco, plus a dash of pure chocolate, gives TUXEDO Tobacco a pure fragrance your nose can quickly distinguish from any other tobacco. Try it and see.

The Usual Thing.

"Eh-yah! Spring is almost at hand," admitted the landlord of the Petunia tavern. "Those gents over yonder on the sunny side of the court house are engaged in garden talk. They are advising each other as to what vegetables are the most profitable and the surest to yield abundantly, those that are the least affected by dry weather or long wet spells, and those which will soonest produce food for the table."

"Ah! Then there will be a great deal of gardening done this spring?" commented the spectacled guest.

"No. They will do a great deal of talking about doing a great deal of gardening until it is too late to do any gardening this spring, and then reluctantly put it off until next spring."—Kansas City Star.

AS YOUNG AS YOUR KIDNEYS

The secret of youth is ELIMINATION OF POISONS from your body. This done, you can live to be a hundred and enjoy the good things of life with as much "pep" as you did when in the springtime of youth. Keep your body in good condition, that's the secret.

Watch the kidneys. They filter and purify the blood, all of which blood passes through them once every three minutes. Keep them clean and in proper working condition and you have nothing to fear. Drive the poisonous wastes and deadly uric acid accumulations from your system. Take GOLD MEDAL Haarlem Oil Capsules and you will always be in good condition. You will feel strong and vigorous, with steady nerves and elastic muscles. GOLD MEDAL Haarlem Oil Capsules are imported direct from the laboratories at Haarlem, Holland.

They are a reliable remedy which has been used by the sturdy Dutch for over 200 years, and has helped them to develop into one of the strongest and hearthiest races of the world. Get them from your druggist. Do not take a substitute. In sealed packages—three sizes.—Adv.

Back to the Ranks.

At one of the officers' training schools a young candidate for shoulder bars had a company of new men out drilling. After calling some easy squad formations he suddenly yelled for a company maneuver and in executing it threw the men out of formation. After vainly trying to straighten them out he finally shouted, "As you were ten minutes ago." And he wonders why he failed to get his commission.

One bottle of Dr. Peery's "Dead Shot" will save you money, time, anxiety and health. One dose sufficient, without Castor Oil in addition. Adv.

Agitation.

"I wish they'd quit saying prices will go down," said the thrifty woman. "It's well meant."

"No doubt. But every time the announcement is made it seems to scare all the people I deal with into making hay while the sun shines."

To keep clean and healthy take Doctor Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. They regulate liver, bowels and stomach. Adv.

Result of Work.

"Maud Ketcham's hands do not show any signs of toil." "The one with the engagement ring on it does."

WOLVES of the SEA

By RANDALL PARRISH

COPYRIGHT BY A. C. McCLURG & CO.

Safe—for a Time—on the Deck of the Namur.

Synopsis — Geoffry Carlyle, master of sailing ships at twenty-six, is sentenced to 20 years' servitude in the American colonies for participation in the Monmouth rebellion in England. Among the passengers on board the ship on which he is sent across are Roger Fairfax, wealthy Maryland planter; his niece, Dorothy Fairfax, and Lieutenant Sanchez, a Spaniard, who became acquainted with the Fairfaxes in London. Carlyle meets Dorothy, who informs him her uncle has bought his services. Sanchez shows himself an enemy of Carlyle. The Fairfax party, now on its own sloop in the Chesapeake bay, encounters a mysterious bark, the Namur of Rotterdam. Carlyle discovers that Sanchez is "Black Sanchez," planning to steal the Fairfax gold and abduct Dorothy. He fights Sanchez and leaves him for dead. In a battle with Sanchez' followers, however, he is overpowered and thrown into the bay. In a desperate effort to save Dorothy, Carlyle decides to swim to the Namur.

"Him? Oh, Jose an' me carried him inter the for'cassel, an' shoved him inter a berth ter sleep off his liquor. Thet wus the last I ever see er hear o' him fer 'bout six hours, when this yere feller must a woke up in the for'cassel sum crazy. He cum a chargin' out on deck, whoopin' like an Indian, wavin' a knife in his hand, intendin' fer ter raise h—l. Well, it happened thet the fu'st feller he run up against wus LeVere, who wus cumin' forrard fer sumthin', an' fer about a minute thar was one h—l ov a fight. It was so dark I couldn't tell whut did happen, but it wus fists mostly, till the mate drove the poor devil, cussin' like mad, over agin the rail, an' then heaved him out inter the water 'longside. I heerd the feller splash when he struck, but he never let out no yell."

"What did LeVere do?"

"Him? He didn't do nuthin'. Just stared down over the rail a bit, an' then cum back, rubbin' his hands. Never even asked who the feller wus. Thar ain't nuthin' kin skeer that black brute."

"He ain't got no human in him. It's h—l when English sailormen hes got ter take orders from a d——d nigger, an' be knocked 'round if they don't jump when he barks. He's goin' ter get a knife in his ribs sum day."

"Maybe he is; but yer better hold yer tongue, Tom. Sanchez don't stand fer thet talk, an' he's back o' LeVere. Let's go in; them gaskets will hold all right now—cum 'long."

I could now perceive now clearly the character I was destined to assume when once safely aboard the Namur. Such an assumption would involve but slight danger of discovery. It was as though a miracle had opened the way, revealed to me by the unconscious lips of these two half-drunken, gossiping tailors. The story told fitted my necessities exactly. Had I planned the circumstances myself nothing could have been better prearranged. No one on board had seen the missing man by daylight; he was believed to have sunk without a struggle. Yet no one knew positively that this was so, because no one cared. The death of the lad had simply been taken for granted when LeVere had failed to see his body rise again to the surface. Yet it was quite within the realm of possibility for the fellow to come up once more in that darkness, beyond LeVere's range of vision, and even to have remained afloat, buoyed up by clinging to the anchor hawser, until strong enough to return on board. At least there was no one aboard the Namur able to deny that this had been done.

Satisfied by this reasoning of being able to pass myself off as the dead man, I began slowly and cautiously to drag myself up the taut hawser. I had chosen a fortunate moment for my effort; no one heeded the little noise I made, and, when I finally topped the rail and was able to look inboard it was to discover a deserted fore deck, with the watch all engaged at some task amidships. I crept down the forecastle ladder and worked my way aft beneath the black shadow of the port rail, until able thus to drift unnoticed into a group tailing onto a mainsail halyard. The fellow next to me, without releasing his grip, turned his head and stared, but without discerning my features.

"Whar did yer cum frum?" he growled, and I as instantly recognized Bill Haines. "Been sojerin', have yer? Well, now, lay to an' pull."

Before I could attempt an answer a tall figure loomed up before us, the same high-pitched voice I had noticed previously calling out sharply:

"There, that's enough, men! Now make fast. We can head the old girl out from here in a jiffy, if it really begins to blow. Jose, you stand by at the wheel, in case you're needed; some of the rest ship the capstan bars, and remain near for a call."

"What are ye swingin' the yards fur, anyhow, LeVere?" asked Haines insolently. "Just fer exercise?"

"Because I am a sailor, Haines," he replied angrily. "Anyhow it is none of your business; I was left in command here. Those clouds don't look good to me; there is going to be a blow before morning."

Haines growled something and LeVere wheeled sharply about to go forward. This movement placed him face to face with me.

"What are you loafing here fer? Who are you?"

"Joe Gates, sir," I answered quickly, mouthing the first name which came to my lips.

"Gates—Joe Gates?" peering savagely into my face but unable to distinguish the features. "I never heard of anybody on board by that name. Who is the fellow, Haines?"

The Englishman gripped me by the sleeve to whirl me about, but as his fingers touched the soaked cloth of my jacket he burst forth with an oath.

"He's wet enough to be the same lad you chucked overboard an hour ago. I believe he is. Say, mate, are you the gay buck we hauled aboard drunk, and dumped into the for'cassel?"

"I dunno, sir," I answered dumbly, believing it best not to remember too much. "I couldn't even tell yer whut ship this is, ner how I signed on. Last I seem ter remember I wus ashore frum the schooner Caroline; but this yere is a bark."

"What Are You Loafing Here For?"

Haines laughed, already convinced of my identity, and considering it a good joke. Then he proceeded to tell me all about it.

LeVere broke in with a savage snarl.

"What's all that? Do you mean, Haines, that this is the same d——d scamp who tried to stick me?"

"No doubt of it. But he never knew what he was doin'—he wus crazy as a loon. There's nuthin' fer yer ter fuss over now. Tell us about it, Gates—the bath must have sobered yer up."

I watched LeVere, but he remained motionless, a mere shadow.

"I suppose it must have been that, sir," I confessed respectfully, "if things happened as you say they did. I haven't any memory o' tryin' ter slash nobody. Leastwise I seemed ter know whut I wus about when I cum up. I don't remember how I got ther; furst I knew I wus slushin' 'round in the water, a tryin' ter keep afloat. It wus so blame dark I cudn't see nuthin', but sumhow I got grip on a hawser, an' hung on till I got back 'nough strength ter climb on board. I knew this wa'n't my ship, so I just lay quiet awhile, figurin' out whar I wus."

"Yer English?"

"Born in Bristol, sir, but I wus workin' on the Caroline—she's a Colony schooner, in the fish trade. At sea since I wus twelve. What's this yere bark—Dutch, ain't she?"

"Once upon a time; just now we are flying whatever flag comes handy. We ain't got no prejudice in flags."

"Is that a gun forrard, covered with taupalin?"

"Yes, an' yer might find another aft, if yer looked fer it. Mor'n thet, we know how ter use 'em. Now see here, Gates; thar's no reason why we should beat about the bush—fact is we're sea rovers."

"Sea rovers—pirates, sir?"

"Bah! what's a name! We take what we want; it's our trade, that's all. No worse than many another. The question is, are yer goin' ter take a chance 'long with us? It's the only life, lad—plenty of fun, the best of liquor and pretty girls, with a share in all the swag."

"What is the name of this bark?"

"The Namur—out o' Rotterdam till we took her."

"Who's the captain?"

"Silva Sanchez."

"Gawd! Sanchez—not—not 'Black Sanchez?'

"That's him; so yer've heerd of 'Black Sanchez?' Well, we're sailin' 'long with him, all right, mate, an' yer ought ter know whut thet means fer a good man."

I hesitated, yet only long enough to leave the impression I sought to make on them both.

"Likely thar ain't no sailor but what has heerd o' him," I said slowly. "It don't look like thar wus much choice, does it?"

LeVere appeared amused in his way, which was not a pleasant one.

"Oh, yes, friend, there is choice enough. Bill, here, had exactly the same choice when he first came—hey, Bill? Remember how you signed on, after we took you off the Albatross? This is how it stands, Gates—either go forrard quietly yerself, or the both of us will kick you there. That will be enough talk. Go on, now."

It was a curt dismissal, coupled with a plain threat, easy to understand. I obeyed the order gladly enough, slinking away into the black shadows forward, realizing my good fortune, and seeking some spot where I could be alone.

The crew had disappeared, lying down no doubt in corners out of the wind. And this wind was certainly rising. I wondered that LeVere hung on so long in his perilous position, although, in spite of the increased strain, the anchor still clung firmly. It seemed to me that no hawser ever made could long withstand the terrific strain of our tugging, as the struggling bark rose and fell in the grip of the sea. To him must have come the same conviction, for suddenly his high-pitched voice sang out from the poop:

"Stand by, forrard, to lower the starboard anchor; move lively, men. Everything ready, Haines?"

"All clear, sir. Come on the jump, bullies!"

"Then let go smartly. Watch that you don't get the line fouled. Aloft there! Anything in sight, Cavere?"

From high up on the fore-top yard, the answer, blown by the wind, came down in broken English:

"Non, m'sieur; I see nottings."

I joined the watch forward. The number of men on deck was evidence of a large crew, there being many more than were necessary for the work to be done. Most of them appeared to be able seamen, and Haines drove them mercilessly, cursing them for lubbers, and twice kicking viciously at a stooping form. Then the great rope began to slip swiftly through the hawse hole, and we heard the sharp splash as the iron flukes struck the water, and sank. Almost at that same instant the voice of Cavere rang out from the masthead:

"A sail, m'sieur—a sail!"

"Where away?"

"Off se port quarter. I make eet to be ze leetle boat—she just round ze point."

CHAPTER XI.

The Return of the Boat.

The crew hurried over to the port rail. Beyond doubt most of those aboard realized that this had been an expedition of some importance, the culmination of their long wait on the coast, part of some scheme of their chief, in the spoils of which they expected to share. Moreover this boat approaching through the darkness was bringing back their leader, and however else they might feel toward him, the reckless daring, and audacious resourcefulness of Sanchez meant success.

I was made to comprehend all this by the low, muttered utterances of those crowding near me, spoken in nearly every language of the world. Much I could not translate, yet enough reached my ears to convince me of the temper of the crew—their feverish eagerness to be again at sea, under command of a captain whom they both hated and feared—a cruel, cold-blooded monster, yet a genius in crime, and a natural leader of such men as these. Black Sanchez! I listened to their comments, their expectations, with swiftly beating heart. I alone knew what that boat was bringing. What would be the result when the dead body of their leader came up over the rail?

With dangers threatening from every hand, Carlyle faces a problem. Shall he save himself while there is yet time, or shall he face the danger, kill and perhaps be killed? Shall he take the one desperate chance of aiding the girl who fills his thoughts or shall he play the craven coward?

BOYS AND GIRLS WHO JOIN PIG CLUBS AND FOLLOW INSTRUCTIONS MAKE MONEY

Opportunities Offered to Learn Swine Industry

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The beneficial effects of pig clubs on the improvement of swine in the United States will be due in large measure to the knowledge of breeding principles that members receive in early life. Progress in animal breeding is limited necessarily by the factor of time, and those who early become interested in the work have the best opportunity to reap the full fruits of their efforts.

In calling attention to these and other merits of the pig-club work, encouraged by the United States department of agriculture, E. Z. Russell, specialist in swine husbandry, clearly points out the difference between the constructive live stock breeder and the so-called breeder who really is a live stock speculator. The comparison is of general interest.

"In the hog business, for instance, the name 'breeder,'" Mr. Russell explains, "is applied commonly to any one who has purebred swine for sale. A large proportion of the men now engaged in this business, however, had better be termed 'speculators,' for to a greater or lesser extent they are engaged in buying and selling breeding animals. Sometimes they keep the animals—which include both sexes—to produce litters and offer them for sale, but more often they simply buy and sell.

Close Students of Breeding.

"We have a limited number, however, of those who may be termed 'constructive breeders.' Persons belonging to that class have in mind a type of hog which as breeders they are trying to produce, and they study not only the animal itself, but its ancestors. In brief, constructive breeders are close students of individuality and pedigree. A number of so-called breeders of today commenced their hog-breeding activities late in life and did not have the time to take up the business in the way it should be studied from a breeder's standpoint. Consequently, if their activities are extensive, they are likely to be speculators rather than breeders. Many, however, are in speculative lines because of the lack of knowledge of fundamental ideas and principles of breeding. This information is readily obtainable from the department and from many other sources."

Indefinite, careless methods in all farming lines, according to Mr. Russell, are injuring those who use such methods. On the other hand, the man who meets with the most success in the future will be the one who studies from every angle the problems concerning his particular field of work.

In some parts of the United States hog breeding is still in its infancy, and it is noteworthy that many of these localities are even in the oldest settled states. Farmers in those localities in the past apparently have paid very little attention to live stock growing of any kind. In other localities, especially during the last two or three years, owing to the increased price of grains, live stock on the farm has been reduced materially. Yet every year demonstrates more fully that successful agriculture can be accomplished only by having a certain number of live stock on the farm.

Recognizing these facts, the department of agriculture has given assistance to the farmers in as many ways as possible. One of the most practical means of establishing live stock production on a firm foundation is the encouragement of boys' and girls' pig clubs. Members of these clubs have the opportunity to obtain expert knowledge and advice in selecting and growing their pigs. To attain success in any line a person must like his work, and it is human to like work that is profitable. Boys and girls who join these pig clubs and follow instructions given them nearly always make a profit out of the venture, and consequently they like the business. In fact, records show that a large percentage of the boys and girls, who started in the work by feeding a single pig, fed a sow and litter the second or third year. Later many of them became specialists in hog work.

Success From Small Achievements.

Although the total hog production in the United States is large, it has become so not by doing big things in a big way, but rather by doing a lot of little details when they should be done. Club members are doing these many little details and, being young, energetic, and willing to learn, generally succeed. Men and women who start later in life to acquire knowledge of the hog business often fail because they feel that many of the little things are unnecessary. Inexperienced feeders, by lack of knowledge, can very easily cause the death of a litter of pigs.

It is gratifying to the department of agriculture that in many of the localities throughout the United States where the business of hog growing has been seriously neglected large numbers of boys and girls are now joining pig clubs, and the department is confident that in years to come those boys and girls will help materially to increase the wealth of various states because early in life they learned how to select and care for a pig.

ASSISTANCE NEEDED FOR NEW-BORN CALF

Strong, Healthy Cows Require Little Attention.

Young Animal Should Get Colostrum, Which Acts as Mild Purgative—It Should Make Fast, Continuous Growth.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

If breeding cows are in strong, vigorous, healthy condition at time of calving they will likely need little if any assistance. While it is true that most calves born need no assistance whatever, yet it is also true that many of those that die would have lived had they had assistance at the proper time. As soon as the calf is born the foetal membrane should be removed at once from its nose and mouth. Unless the calf is strong and vigorous, insert finger into the mouth and give the tongue a slight pull. Pressure on the ribs may sometimes be necessary to stimulate breathing. Allow the cow to dry and care for the calf alone. It may then need some assistance to find the udder. The calf should get the first milk—the colostrum—which acts as a mild purgative, unless the cow's udder is feverish.

The calf should make fast, continuous growth from time of birth. A common expression among beef cattle growers is "Keep the stomach of the calf full of milk and grain at all times. Give it all the milk from its dam, for a short period at least, unless the amount of milk produced is excessive. Calves should be fed grain from the time they will begin nibbling at such feeds until they are turned on grass."

The feeds most desirable for calves at this time are ground oats, bran, corn (which may be ground), and cottonseed or oil meal, which should be provided in such amounts as the calf will eat. If the calf is well fed it will make an extra good individual. If improperly fed it ranks only as a fair or poor individual.

LIVE STOCK NOTES

Harvest crops with live stock in the fields and save labor.

Balance grains fed with pasturage, silage, roughage and concentrates.

The lambs must be kept in a warm place for several days and always in a dry place.

Mud and damp sleeping quarters are the chief obstacles to profit on fall litters of pigs.

When the lambs are about three weeks old they will begin to eat grain and dry feed.

Charcoal is also very valuable for hogs and serves the same purpose that it does for fowls.

Silage free from mold is safe for horses in feeds of one pound per 100 pounds of weight.

Unground rye grain is not recommended as an animal feed, except in rare circumstances.

Baby beef can be produced satisfactorily without silage, especially if you have clover or alfalfa.

At the Iowa station they figure that ten feet of corn trough room will take care of about 25 100-pound shotes.

WOMAN WORKS 15 HOURS A DAY

Marvelous Story of Woman's Change from Weakness to Strength by Taking Druggist's Advice.

Peru, Ind.—"I suffered from a displacement with backache and dragging down pains so badly that at times I could not be on my feet and it did not seem as though I could stand it. I tried different medicines without any benefit and several doctors told me nothing but an operation would do me any good. My druggist told me of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I took it with the result that I am now well and strong. I get up in the morning at four o'clock, do my housework, then go to a factory and work all day, come home and get supper and feel good. I don't know how many of my friends I have told what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me."—Mrs. ANNA METERIANO, 36 West 10th St., Peru, Ind.

Women who suffer from any such ailments should not fail to try this famous root and herb remedy, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Health Was Shattered

Mrs. Hayes Was Discouraged Until Doan's Made Her Well.

"I was in awful shape from kidney trouble," says Mrs. Frank Hayes, 42 Dover St., Boston, Mass. "When I got up out of a chair, I felt as though someone had stuck a knife into the small of my back and it fairly took my breath away.

Mrs. Hayes

"The kidney secretions passed often and only a little at a time. They were so scalding I would scream so I believe I could be heard a block away. They deposited brick-dust-like sediment and their odor was something awful. My complexion became sallow and I had large puffs under my eyes.

"I was troubled with spells of gasping for breath and had such dizzy attacks I often fell right over. Spots floated before my eyes and I got so nervous I couldn't stand any noise. I cried over nothing at all, became irritable and imagined all sorts of things. My health was shattered and I became discouraged.

"I continued to grow worse in spite of any treatment and came pretty near dying several times. After several months of this horror, I heard about Doan's Kidney Pills. I used a dozen boxes of Doan's and was cured. I was entirely well and have enjoyed good health ever since."

Landlord's Experience With Glando

Mr. Haushalter, the well known and energetic proprietor of the Hotel Paulding, Paulding, Ohio, says that for several years he suffered from a sluggish liver, backache and kidney trouble. He felt so drowsy and languid he could scarcely drag. He says: "I tried a number of kidney pills and liver remedies and found no relief until I used Glando, the great gland tonic. It proved to be just what I needed. I am thoroughly convinced I would have been flat on my back if I had not used this treatment; but, instead of being laid up, I am feeling fine and looking after my business every day. If I feel any indication of my old trouble returning, I take a Glando treatment and that sets me right."

Mr. Haushalter was dying of self-poisoning caused by an inactive liver. This weakened the kidneys and other glands of the body. If he had not found a remedy that renewed glandular activity and removed the poison, his life undoubtedly have paid the penalty.

Glando Tonic is the only remedy of its kind on the market and its numerous cures is proof enough of its great value to mankind. It is sold by druggists or will be sent direct by the Gland-Aid Co., Fort Wayne, Ind. Large treatment, $1.00.

SOLVES FOOD PROBLEM

What to Eat Was Always a Question With Indianapolis Milliner Until She Took Pepgen.

Mrs. Harry Pike, 721 N. New Jersey street, Indianapolis, one of that city's most fashionable milliners, says:

Mrs. Harry Pike.

"I advise every person who feels bloated after eating or who cannot sleep soundly to take Pepgen. I think it is the best tonic in the world for the stomach and nerves. For three months I was almost frantic with nervous dyspepsia. What to eat was always a question because so many foods disagreed with me. I grew so weak that it was hard for me to interest myself in my millinery business. I first heard of Pepgen through a friend who lives in Richmond, Ind., and now I want to tell others about it because it is so wonderful. Since taking Pepgen I can eat anything I want and do not suffer afterward. I feel stronger in every way."

Pepgen may be obtained at any first-class drug store.—Adv.

Japan in the War.

Japan entered the war because of a treaty with Great Britain, concluded in 1902. The original alliance preceded the Russo-Japanese war. In 1905 the alliance was further extended to provide for the defense of British interests in India and Afghanistan, while England agreed to give Japan a free hand in Korea. In 1911 it was again modified by the agreement that Great Britain should not be bound to aid Japan against any power with whom she had a treaty of arbitration—thus excluding the United States as a possible enemy. The alliance has been extended to 1921.

Triumph Over Necessity.

Manhood begins when we have in any way made truce with Necessity; begins even when we have surrendered to Necessity, as the most part only do; but begins joyfully and hopefully only when we have reconciled ourselves to Necessity; and thus in reality triumphed over it, and felt that in Necessity we are free.—Carlyle.

INDIANA NEWS

Indianapolis—State and county Victory loan officials denied vigorously reports which have gained some circulation to the effect that the national banks already have underwritten the quota for the Victory loan.

Indianapolis—Coal dealers of the city see no prospect of any lowering of prices between now and next fall. On the other hand, in view of the increasing demands on the part of labor, there is a possibility that coal will go higher.

Indianapolis — The United Mine Workers of America have nothing to do with the threat of a strike on the part of Indiana miners made by Eugene V. Debs, Socialist leader, it was announced at the headquarters of the union in Indianapolis.

Indianapolis — Governor Goodrich appointed the members of the new conservation commission. They are: John W. Holtzman, Indianapolis; William A. Guthrie, Dupont; Richard M. Holman, Crawfordsville, and Stanley Coulter, Purdue university.

Kokomo—The influenza-pneumonia epidemic in this community has resulted in a new high record for interments in Crown Point cemetery here. During March 70 bodies have been given burial. The previous record was made during the epidemic in December, when 56 were buried.

Goshen—The Elkhart county good roads committee, which has been organized as a permanent body to make recommendations to the county commissioners, has adopted a plan calling for the building of 120 miles of roads under the county unit law in this county within the next four years.

Terre Haute—Following the submitting of a petition asking for the construction of eight new county road unit roads by a committee from the chamber of commerce and Vigo county farmers, the county commissioners have decided to start construction work on five of the roads as soon as possible.

Rushville—When the Rush county grand jury reported returning 15 indictments, emphatic recommendations were made for the erection of a new building at the county infirmary. Several grand juries have advised improvements at the infirmary because of the alleged unsanitary condition of the buildings.

Jasper—A proposal to vote nearly $20,000 to build rock roads in Jackson township in this county failed to carry at an election held in the township. The vote canvassed and reported here shows that the proposition carried in the St. Anthony precinct by two votes, but was defeated in the Bretzville precinct by 23 votes, the proposition losing by 21 votes.

Shelbyville—Frost and more severe cold weather here recently did not cause a great deal of damage in Shelby county, according to a number of farmers. It was reported that the wheat looked black, but farmers did not think it was damaged greatly. Clover that had passed the sprouting stage was not hurt, but that part of the crop in the "crook" has been damaged considerably. Fruit, other than apricots, was not damaged.

Elwood—A meeting of the directors of the chamber of commerce was attended by business men and farmers of Frankton, who are backing a petition to the county commissioners to build a concrete driveway from Elwood, through Frankton to Anderson. It is the plan to get the right-of-way surveyed by the Union Traction company for a direct line between the points mentioned, but which was never used. The estimated cost of the proposed road is $300,000.

Seymour—The wheat fields in Jackson county are in the condition. Growth has been rapid the last few weeks. It is estimated that approximately 28,000 acres in Jackson county are sown to wheat this year. Peaches, cherries and other early fruits which are in blossom or just ready to bloom have not been damaged by the low temperature, according to orchardists. Some of the early blossoming trees are in full bloom here. Vegetables in hot beds and tomato plants grown for commercial purposes have been damaged by the cold weather.

Chicago.—Progressive and far-seeing farmers of the corn belt—Illinois, Indiana and Iowa—are forming a great organization to include hundreds of thousands of their own number to battle radical ideas that are trying to gain entrance in the Mississippi valley states, it was revealed in Chicago. The new organization will fight the encroachments of the Nonpartisan league, which dominates North Dakota and is spreading over the West, and which for two years has tried to organize the Illinois farmers, but with little success.

Marion.—More than half of $12,000,000 in loans which have been made by the federal land bank at Louisville has been loaned to farmers in Indiana, it is announced by L. B. Clore, treasurer of the bank, who was in Marion recently.

Lawrenceburg—The sowing of oats has been started by farmers in southeastern Indiana. Nearly every bushel of seed oats that will be sowed has been treated for smut and a larger acreage of oats will be planted than in former years. With favorable weather conditions a bumper crop is expected.

Indianapolis—A protest against the manner in which Albert S. Burleson, postmaster general, increased domestic telegraph rates 20 per cent on 30 hours' notice, was issued by the Indiana public service commission.

Anderson.—In the annual report for 1918 on transactions in the office of the Madison county clerk, G. W. Winfrey, clerk, shows that 604 marriage licenses were issued and 383 divorce decrees granted. Of the divorce findings 259 were granted to women.

Brazil.—The annual convention of the coal miners of District 8, United States Mine Workers of America, closed here. The newly-elected officers were installed. John Romans of Carbon is the new president. District 8 includes the block coal region in Indiana.

Richmond.—Senator James E. Watson of Indiana in his first speech on Hoosier soil against the proposed league of nations here insisted that a referendum should be held at the earliest date for the purpose of ascertaining whether the people really desire the adoption of the Paris proposition.

Jeffersonville.—Remedial effects of recreation are to have a more complete testing in the Indiana reformatory here than ever before. G. A. H. Shideler, the general superintendent, says that disciplinary cases among prisoners the past month are negligible, and he attributes that condition to wholesome entertainment.

Jeffersonville.—There is little prospect of getting strawberries at ten cents a box this year, judging by prices offered to growers at Borden. Several weeks before the crop will be ready a flat rate of $3 a crate, which contains 24 quarts, is being offered for the berries. This means 12½ cents a quart to the grower.

Evansville.—Miners employed in four coal mines in Warrick county on the Southern railroad have declined to advance their timepieces in harmony with the daylight saving law, and are following out their daily routine on the old time. The miners complain that they see little enough daylight on the sun's time, and would see even less if they adopted the new schedule.

Evansville.—Robert H. Pennington, a commission man of this city, has been appointed by the National Cantaloupe Growers' association as one of a committee of four to meet with railroad administration officials in Atlanta, April 11 and 12, to make arrangements for this year's transportation of the melon crop. The melon crop in Posey county and other counties in the "pocket" this year will be much larger than last year.

Indianapolis.—Operation of all motor mail routes in Indiana has been suspended by the post office department. Orders to suspend the two remaining routes to Bedford and Greensburgh were received by Charles W. Byfield, assistant postmaster, from Fourth Assistant Postmaster General Blakeslee, to take effect at once. Three routes, from Indianapolis to Kokomo, Lafayette and Marion, were suspended by orders received a few days ago.

Indianapolis.—The state board of health has instructed its inspectors to call for a strict observance of its rules and regulations regarding the sale and handling of milk, now that the legislature has provided that owners of tuberculous cows shall be reimbursed by the state for animals killed under the direction of the state veterinarian department. A new law allows an owner $40 for an ordinary cow and $80 for a purebred cow, which may be killed under such orders.

Lafayette—Milk in Russia now costs $1.14 a quart, against a price of 7 cents in 1914; sugar is $16.77 a pound; ham, $8.46 a pound; butter, $11.29 a pound, and black bread, $1.58 a pound, against 14 cents five years ago. These figures were given by Prof. G. I. Christie, assistant secretary of agriculture, in a letter to members of the Indiana Corn Growers' association, emphasizing the importance of maximum food production and support of the Victory loan.

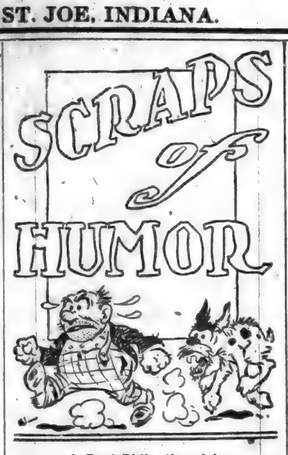
Anderson.—An appropriation of $135,000 has been made by the Madison county council for a county tuberculosis hospital to be situated one mile southwest of Pendleton, where a tract of 107 acres, including Idlewild, a summer resort established three years ago, has been bought from Charles McCarty of Pendleton for $35,000. The council's original appropriation for a hospital building was $50,000, but on further consideration the building appropriation was increased to $100,000.

Indianapolis.—Information was received in Indianapolis that a ruling has been made by the joint Chicago western district freight rate and the Chicago eastern district freight rate committees of the United States railway administration which places Illinois and Indiana intrastate class rates on an equal footing. This ruling, on the appeal of the public service commission, if approved by the director general, means a saving of hundreds of thousands of dollars yearly to Indiana shippers and is regarded by the public service commissions and others interested as by far the most important freight rate decision affecting this state made in many years.

Marion.—F. H. Miller, secretary of the Indiana State Firemen's association, has been here completing arrangements for the state convention of firemen, which will be held in Marion August 20 and 21. It is expected that 45 cities will be represented at the meeting.

Terre Haute.—During the last 12 months the citizens of this county have paid $257,000 to the Vigo County National War Fund association. The total disbursements amount to $238,969.75, of which $75,000 went to the national Red Cross and $25,000 to the local chapter of the organization.

SCRAPS of HUMOR



A Real Philanthropist.

"Miss Goode is such a kind-hearted person," remarked the sympathetic soul. "Always trying to help the poor, I understand."

"Indeed she is," rejoined the society butterfly, "when she goes to a dance she picks out all the poor dancers in the room and helps them learn the steps."

Making Himself Felt in Business.

"What's that boy of yours doing now, Uncle Gabe?" asked the returned villager.

"He's takin' drawin' lessons up to the city."

"Didn't know he had any artistic tendencies."

"He ain't. He's a learnin' to be a dentist, by heck."

Thrown Down.

New Drummer—Hello, Cutey! Is the buyer in?

Ribbon Counter Mary—No, freshy, but the cellar is downstairs.

Very Uncertain.

"It is hard to tell whether Jim prefers blondes or brunettes, he is so illogical."

"How is that?"

"If he likes brunettes he keeps it a dark secret, and if he prefers blondes he makes light of it."

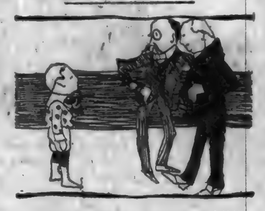
Must Have Been Bad.

"Did the editor accept your manuscript?"

"No, returned it."

"Declined with thanks, I presume?"

"Worse than that. He didn't even include the thanks."



TOO MUCH FOR DAD.

"I say old Topper, that's a bright boy you have. How old is he?"

"Well, I can't quite make out, you see he was born on the 30th of February."

The Psalm of Life.

His Place.

"I want to get a hearing in this court," said the deaf plaintiff.

"Then," replied the worn-out magistrate, "you'll have to go to a specialist."

Quite So.

"Do you think you can get anything out of that handsome young fool at cards?"

"Oh, yes; I'll do the handsome thing."

Seeking a Mascot.

"What's in a name?"

"Nothing," answered Mr. Stormington Barnes. "If there was anything I'd put on a show and call it 'The Street Car.' Maybe it would play to standing room only."

No Argument.

"Do you ever argue with your wife?"

Doesn't hurt to lift them off with fingers

Don't suffer! A tiny bottle of Freezone costs but a few cents at any drug store. Apply a few drops on the corns, calluses and "hard skin" on bottom of feet, then lift them off.

For Colds, Catarrh or Influenza

Do you feel weak and unequal to the work ahead of you? Do you still cough a little, or does your nose bother you? Are you pale? Is your blood thin and watery? Better put your body into shape. Build strong!

An old, reliable blood-maker and herbal tonic made from wild roots and barks, is Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. This "nature remedy" comes in tablet or liquid form. It will build up your body, cure your cold, and protect you from disease germs which lurk everywhere. One of the active ingredients of this temperance alterative and tonic is wild cherry bark with stillingia, which is so good for the lungs and for coughs; also Oregon grape root, blood root, stone root, Queen's root,—all skilfully combined in the Medical Discovery. These roots have a direct action on the stomach, improving digestion and assimilation. These herbal extracts in the "Discovery" aid in blood-making, and are best for scrofula. By improving the blood they aid in throwing off an attack of influenza.

Catarrh should be treated, first, as a blood disease, with this alterative. Then, in addition, the nose should be washed daily with Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy.

RANKS WITH WORLD'S GREAT

Achievements of Sir Isaac Newton Give Him an Assured Place Among Immortals.

According to a legend, which, however, is seriously considered by certain authorities, in the year 1665 the fall of an apple as Newton sat in his garden suggested the most magnificent of his subsequent discoveries—the law of universal gravitation. On his first attempt to explain the lunar and planetary motions he employed an estimate then in use of the radius of the earth which, based on the value of a degree of latitude then prevalent, was so erroneous as to produce a discrepancy between the real force of gravity and that require by theory to explain the motions and indicated only an approximate verification of his theory. Accordingly, he abandoned for a number of years the hypothesis that a homogeneous attracting sphere behaved as if all matter was concentrated at its center, and took up other studies, consisting chiefly of investigations of the nature of light and the construction of telescopes. He also propounded new theories on light and color. Newton died March 20, 1727 (old style), and his remains were interred in Westminster abbey.

THIS LIFE MERE PATCHWORK

Pleasant to Think That in the By-and-By All Things Will Have Full Completion.

Life at best seems only a patchwork. By the time the artist learns to paint a picture which is considered worth while, his hand has become shaky, nervous or palsied and he cannot paint the thing in his heart for which, all his life, he had been preparing. By the time the business man has earned enough money to keep him in comfort for the rest of his days he has often lost his capacity to enjoy the fruits of his labor. When the mother has raised her boy to manhood her offspring leaves her for the sake of someone he loves better, and by the time the man learns to really appreciate his mother she is taken from him. Nothing seems ever quite finished, quite mature, quite as it should be in this world. Perhaps in the by-and-by on another planet we shall all find that every incomplete thought and work of our lives has been fitted into the completed temple of life which we may then inhabit forever.—Los Angeles Times.

"There's a Reason"

WHAT IS SHOWN IN SHOPS OF PARIS

Directoire Dress, Capes, Suits and Other Apparel Dear to Woman's Heart.

LINE OF LEAST RESISTANCE

Almost Everything Is Correct if It Follows Lines of the Figure—Outer Wraps Have Tendency to Exaggerate Natural Curves.

"As you were," says Paris, using soldierly language as the occasion demands, hastening to add, lest you think her arbitrary, "that is, if you wish." In the first instance she refers to the pre-war styles, and in the second to the fact that if these do not please you there are plenty of other fashions that are suited to your individual taste.

Following the line of least resistance describes the newest fashions to a peppermint, for as if weary of controversy the makers of fashions have decided to pick up the threads of the

The long draped lines and transparent hems together with the beaded bodice, is suggestive of the harem and carried out in rose and French blue, with beads of crystal and pearl. The ostrich ornament for the coiffure also is of rose and blue.

1914 models and weave them into those of today, thereby pleasing, if possible, everyone concerned. Practically, observes a prominent fashion writer, it works out in this way: Almost everything is in correct line if it follows the lines of the figure. The fact that nine-tenths of the makers voted for the directoire modes strengthens this conclusion rather than otherwise, as the dresses of this period particularly emphasize the lines of the figure underneath, while the coats and outer wraps, aside from the picturesque revers, have a tendency to exaggerate the natural curves. That is the point, that the human form divine is not absolutely straight up and down is made partially apparent.

The directoire fashions were in the air in 1914, but something intervened and the movement hardly progressed further than the draped skirts and the large revers; this time further developments seem possible. Aside from the fact that the directoire lines are preferred, one may dress as suits one's individual fancy.

Showing Independence.

Evidently the public have the bit in their teeth as regards a few points of the fashions. It is clearly shown that in the last few months there is no desire for eccentricities or extreme exaggerations. That the women of France have a great deal to say, particularly the fashionables of Paris, as to what will be taken up is sometimes overlooked in the general admiration of the models put forth by the makers. At the Paris opera lately when the official ban on evening clothes was lifted it was noted that instead of the brilliant clothes expected by the designers and which they had prepared for there was little display.

Streets in Paris are still dimly lighted, wounded soldiers are everywhere and women swathed in mourning serve as a background which throws even the moderately bright clothes into sudden relief. How, then, can the designers expect the women to wear the brightest of colors and the most extravagant of clothes? A certain amount of somber richness was displayed, but the untrammeled extravagance of pre-war days was to be noted only in isolated cases in the boxes.

It is said that the American woman in Paris can be spotted easily by her longer skirt and long, tight sleeve. This order of affairs is about to be changed and the longer skirt is about to become universal. As to the extremely short sleeves, the American woman will wear them while in Paris and on some occasions at home, but not in the afternoon except in the sheerer materials.

"We Aim to Please."

That there are modes to please every woman in whatever type she may demand is emphasized by two reports from the other side. One states that the Maison Doeuillet, in putting forth the directoire dress, followed the original inspiration as to the extent of the upcurving waistline at the front, and another house shows waists that dip downward at the front in a point.

Capes, say some authorities, are going to be worn by the women who know and suits will be left to the general public who do not know. All very well for Paris, but one might as well try to break the American woman of the habit of eating as to think of depriving her of her well tailored suit. That the makers know this is evident from the fact that their suits are more than ordinarily worth while.

All of the models of this house are of the strictly tailored classification. The lengths are modified to suit the wearer, but the same general lines are preserved throughout. The skirts are quite tight and the coats are cut with flaring godet plaits in the peplum, whether the latter be long or short.

Doucet ideas run counter to those of some of the other houses. No directoire models are to be seen in this collection, as Doucet clings to the old straight line, and the suits are built on this principle as well as the dresses. A slight concession to the general trend may be found in the high, square collars seen on the straight knee-length jackets.

The Tunic Apron.

Premet tailleurs are enhanced by the addition of front tunic aprons buttoned down the sides, but otherwise they are quite straight and simple. The suit coats that are worn with these skirts are three-quarter length and may be cut away at the front, and the collars and cuffs are of contrasting colors. The upper part of the jacket is loosely girdled and the skirt part is made with the swinging directoire flare.

Jenny prefers the knee-length jacket for her suits, which she makes of serges, etamines and covert cloth. These are shown with waistcoats of white faille striped in gold and of white Ottoman silk.

Doeuillet depends for chic on the slash, which is found in abundance on the jackets and seen singly on the skirts.

Summing it all up, it would seem that the skirts to the jackets will remain long and that the jackets are in general longer, but it must be kept in mind that these same long jacket models have held for several seasons in Paris and have been modified in length for wear on this side. Also the makers are showing some three-piece models which have quite short coats with them, or perhaps are supplemented with short capes. Buttons are possibly the chief trimming, noted at the sides of the jackets and up and down the entire length of the skirt at the back.

A beautiful tea dress of blue taffeta with diagonal flounces with novel trimming of loop silk fringe.

Afternoon dresses show many decided changes, and there are many women who will breathe a sigh of relief over the fact. It can hardly be denied that the styles of dress in vogue for the last few seasons have been most trying to all but the freshest and youngest of women. A collarless, trimmingless, perfectly plain bodice demands greater perfection than the average woman feels sure of possessing.

Two Simple Questions.

Rev. Dr. Phillips sat in his study one Sunday morning going over the heads for his forenoon sermon. Suddenly his five-year-old granddaughter entered with an air of importance.

"Grand-daddy," she said, "I wants to ask you sump'n."

"Honey," said the clergyman, "grand-daddy is very busy. Run away now and come back this afternoon."

"But it'll only take you a minute to tell me," persisted the little one.

"Well," he said, knowing from past experiences that she was not to be dissuaded from her purpose, "if it will take only a minute, go ahead. What is it you wish me to tell you?"

"I want," said the child, "to know about condensed milk and the Immaculate Conception."

Starving in the Midst of Plenty

Acid-Stomach Steals Strength and Good Feelings From Millions

One of the worst features of acid-stomach is that very often it literally starves its victims in the midst of plenty. And the strange thing about it is that the people with acid-stomachs seldom know what their trouble really is.

No matter how good or wholesome the food may be, or how much they eat, they do not gain in strength. This is clearly explained by the fact that an acid-stomach cannot properly digest food. Instead of healthy, normal digestion, the excess acid causes the food to sour and ferment. Then when this mass of sour, fermented food, charged with excess acid, passes into the intestines, it becomes the breeding place for all kinds of germs and toxic poisons, which in turn are absorbed into the blood and in this way distributed throughout the entire body. And that is exactly why it is that so many thousands of people eat and eat and keep on eating and yet are literally starving in the midst of plenty. Their acid-stomachs make it absolutely impossible for them to get the full measure of nourishment out of their food. And it doesn't take long for this poor nourishment to show its ill effects in a weakened, emaciated body.

You may say: "My stomach doesn't hurt me." That may be true because many victims of acid-stomach do not actually suffer stomach pains. Then again, there are millions who do suffer all kinds of aches and pains—headaches, rheumatic twinges, gout, lumbago, pains around the heart and in the chest—who never dream that an acid-stomach is the real cause of the trouble.

Naturally, the sensible thing to do is to strike right at the very cause of this trouble and clean the excess acid out of the stomach. There is a quick, easy way to do this. A wonderful new remedy quickly removes the excess acid without the slightest discomfort. It is EATONIC. Made in the form of tablets—they are good to eat—just like a bit of candy. They literally absorb the injurious excess acid and carry it away through the intestines. They also drive the bloat out of the body—in fact you can fairly feel it work. Make a test of EATONIC in your own case today. Get a big box of EATONIC from your druggist. See for yourself how surely it brings quick relief in those painful attacks of indigestion, bitter heartburn, belching, disgusting food repeating, that awful bloated, lumpy feeling after eating and other stomach miseries. Banish all your stomach troubles so completely that you forget you have a stomach. Then you can eat what you like and digest your food in comfort without fear of distressing after effects.

If EATONIC does not relieve you, it will not cost you one penny. You can return it to your druggist and get your money back. So if you have the slightest question about your health—if you feel you are not getting all the strength out of your food—if you are not feeling tip-top, ready for your work, full of vim and vigor—do give EATONIC a fair trial this very day and see how much better you will feel.

SAVING TO STABILIZE BUSINESS OF COUNTRY

Systematic Buying and Elimination of Waste Lead to Prompt Payment of Bills and Happiness.

American thrift will go far to save the life of the world, to bring liberty and to make the pursuit of happiness possible to oppressed humanity. Periodically in the United States there have come times of financial depression; production has exceeded consumption; factory doors have closed; workers have found themselves without money and the retailers who serve them have faced the gloomy alternative of refusing credit and going out of business because of lack of trade, or extending credit and going to smash because of lack of funds. The store closes its doors and immediately other stores, even those competing, feel the unwholesome influence. Panic spreads just as surely as when there is a run on a bank and failure stares many merchants in the face.

Now the more thrifty the people of a community are the more promptly they pay their bills, and the more promptly bills are paid the more remote becomes the possibility of failure. If every worker is a systematic saver, with savings made possible by careful, intelligent buying and the elimination of waste, the hard time will be safely bridged and will be tremendously shortened. It is, therefore, good business for the retailer to join in a campaign against impulsive buying and waste. The mechanic who, in flush times, buys an unnecessarily elaborate article, and who, in hard times, repudiates his bills, is not as good a customer as the one who used restraint in his day of prosperity and had a margin for the rainy day. The former undermines business—the latter stabilizes it.

The judicious buyer who exercises care in his purchase also carefully and conscientiously meets his obligations. The man who throws money away treats his bills as "a scrap of paper."

Waste is an enemy of good business. In certain districts of New York investigators found that 11 per cent of the contents of the garbage cans was perfectly good foodstuff. The amount of usable material abandoned in this country every year amounts to millions. The farmer leaves the plow to rust away outside the barn all winter; the housewife overheats the house; the factory worker throws good material on the scrap heap, and all those things make it possible that in the United States today there are 1,250,000 people, whose working days are over, dependent upon charity, individual and county, to the extent of $220,000,000 a year, dependent because in their earning days they cultivated habits of waste rather than those of thrift.

Education in thrift must be an education in values. That education must extend past the workers of today to the workers of tomorrow. Hereafter more of a youth's precious school hours should be devoted to a consideration of the principles of how to live, how to take a helpful and progressive part in the problems of a workaday world. The biggest lack in this nation is a department which will teach the value of a dollar.

The young man who in school received the proper training in thrift will take account of the use of savings. Savings is worse than useless if the hard-earned accumulations are invested in some of the innumerable gold-brick, get-rich-quick schemes which take millions of dollars out of our communities each year.

The treasury department is confident that no safer and more attractive plan has been offered for the encouragement of small systematic investment than that of War Savings Stamps. If the investor can lay aside but 25 cents a week he has here the means of putting that amount away in a safe security. If he can set aside four dollars and a few odd cents each week that amount begins working for him at a good rate of interest, which, with the principal, he will receive at the end of five years. Let the necessity of redemption arise through illness or hard times—he can have the ready cash ten days after he applies for it.

In a certain great industrial plant where 90 per cent of the employees were regular buyers of thrift stamps the influenza epidemic was met with the minimum of suffering. The men had the funds available for doctor and medicine and proper food. They met their bills promptly and did not embarrass the merchants of the community. It would be hard today to get any of these men to abandon the thrift habit which the government has taught them.

—SAVE IN WAR ON WASTE—

Cardinal Gibbons for Savings.

An appeal for continued support of the government's war savings campaign has been issued by Cardinal Gibbons.

"We should welcome the opportunity afforded by our government," said the cardinal, "to continue the saving habit. To buy war savings is the clear duty of every American citizen, young and old. I urge all our clergy to promote this campaign by every means in their power. I urge our good people to give their heartiest support, and from the splendid evidences of their patriotism shown in the last two years I am confident that it will meet with great success."

UNCLE SAM'S BILLS MUST BE PAID

Up to America to Show World That It Does What It Promises to Do.

The argument, sometimes heard, that there should be no need of another Liberty loan, because the war is over, indicates there are some persons so short-sighted and unpatriotic that they are forgetting the grave dangers that not so long ago threatened civilization.

One of the terrors of the past struggle was the frightful havoc created by the enemy on the high seas, which may be illustrated by an incident, one of ten thousand similar ones. It was told by a stranded sailor, a lone survivor of a torpedoed ship. He related how a German submarine, after sinking the ship without warning, came to the surface and helped to "rescue" the few who were swimming or drifting about in the water. They were permitted to cling to the submarine—in fact, to find refuge on its deck. An empty rowboat floated by, and the commander of the "sub" ordered the survivors to avail themselves of it, because in five minutes the U-boat would submerge.

The rowboat had no oars. There were no provisions aboard, no shelter against storms in this unseaworthy shell. It was half-filled with water—salt water—which the survivors had to scoop out with their bare hands. The captain and his men descended into the interior of the "sub." The hatches were closed and gradually the instrument of destruction sank out of sight, leaving the craft, with its human cargo at the mercy of the waves. This happened in the middle of the Atlantic ocean.

There is only one thing that can save the world from an upheaval far more disastrous than that which we have gone through. That is for America and the American people to hold to law and order, to abide by free institutions, to rebuild, to succor and comfort those who have been bowed down by the terrors of organized intolerance. It is for us to give more, pay more, do more. It is for us to prove that a wrong acknowledged becomes an obligation and that America does whatever it promises to do.

This can be accomplished only by patriotically getting back of the Victory Liberty loan and backing it up to the very limit of our financial ability. Uncle Sam's bills must be paid and the boys brought home. Until then the job won't be finished.

—HELP "FINISH THE JOB."—

The Debt

By RANDALL PARRISH.

A young fellow came back to our town the other day, struggling along on crutches; he had left one leg in France. A friend met him, and said sympathetically: "I'm mighty sorry, Fred, you lost your leg." The lad looked at him and smiled. "I didn't lose my leg, Charlie," he replied quietly. "I gave it."

That is just what they have been doing, those splendid lads of ours. They have been giving their legs, their arms, their eyes, their very lives, that we might have our homes, our shops, our farms; that we might live in peace, in prosperity, in freedom of thought and action.

Don't we owe them anything! Haven't we a debt unpaid to the dead in France, to the maimed and crippled, who are coming home from the battle front?

That is the appeal of the forthcoming Victory Liberty loan. It is a debt we owe—to the aviator, who went crashing down in flames; to the doughboy, who went cheering over the top through a rain of shrapnel; to the gunner, who fell with the lanyard in his hand.

We can never pay it—no! Money does not work that miracle. Just down the street from here a flag hangs in the window of a little cottage containing two golden stars. What is my money, or yours, balanced against the priceless gift of the heart-broken father and mother there? If every man in this town should throw his dollars into the scale, those lives would weigh the most.

Cheer and welcome those who return; honor their manhood, and thus pay to them, in a small measure, the debt you owe their service.

But do not forget those others, who will not return—the voiceless dead. You owe a greater debt to them. They died with faith in you.

—HELP "FINISH THE JOB."—

The war in its larger sense is not over, and our duty to support our soldiers is not over until they are all home. The Victory Liberty Loan is to be used for the purpose of maintaining them overseas as an army of occupation and bringing them back.

The Germans, not the Americans, were the quitters, but our work is not finished until we have brought the victors home. Let's finish the job by oversubscribing the Victory Liberty Loan as we did all its predecessors.

We may speak of the Victory Liberty Loan as a peace loan or a victory loan, but in a sense it is a memorial loan to our soldiers who died on the field of battle.

Buy Victory Liberty Loan Bonds and help finish the job it took 10,000,000 lives to start.

2 Die in Week In One Home.

(Auburn Star.)

Daniel D. Metcalf, of Auburn, aged 79 years, died on Tuesday morning of last week at 1:00 a. m., at his home on Douglas street, following a second attack of pneumonia. His health had been poor since an illness in January of this year caused by pneumonia.

Mrs. Metcalf is also sick. Because of the serious illness of Mr. and Mrs. Metcalf, Captain Dean Metcalf, a son in the medical corps at Camp Pike, Ark., was called and arrived Sunday evening. He was at his father's bedside when death came.

Mr. Metcalf lived for many years on a farm near Spencerville and is well known in DeKalb county. He came to Auburn a year ago in April to make his home, for his health has been failing for the past three years and he was forced to retire from farm life. He was a Mason and an active member of the Auburn Methodist church, taking a keen interest in all the activities of the church when his health permitted.

Daniel Dorsey Metcalf was born in Knox county near Mount Vernon, Ohio, on January 26, 1840. His parents were Daniel and Ruth Metcalf and here he started his life as a farmer after he had finished the course in the common schools. He was still a boy when his parents located in DeKalb county.

Surviving beside the widow are five children: Miss Ethel, at home; Mrs. E. A. Eakright, of east of Auburn; Mrs. M. Paul Barton, of Macedonia, Iowa; C. O. Metcalf, of east of Auburn; and Captain Dean Metcalf, Medical Corps, stationed at Camp Pike, Ark. One brother, E. F. Metcalf, living on a farm east of the city, is also a surviving relative.

The funeral was held last Friday afternoon from the home on Douglas street. Burial was made in Evergreen cemetery.

For the second time in a week, death invaded the D. D. Metcalf home on Douglas street, this time claiming the wife and mother, Margaret Jane Metcalf, aged 66 years, 7 months and 12 days, widow of the late D. D. Metcalf, who died on Wednesday, April 9. Death was due to a complication of diseases and heart trouble.

At the time of the death of her husband, Mrs Metcalf was in such a condition that it was thought best to hold a private funeral. Mrs. Metcalf died Monday evening.

The deceased is one of the older residents of DeKalb county, having lived here forty-five years. Most of her life was spent on a farm near Spencerville. A year ago in April, Mr. and Mrs. Metcalf moved to Auburn on account of ill health.

She was born in Allen county, September 3, 1852, and was the daughter of Rudolph and Jane Bair. She spent her early life in Allen county but after her marriage came to this county.

Surviving are five children: Miss Ethel, at home; Mrs. E. A. Eakright of east of Auburn; Mrs. M. Paul Barton of Macedonia, Iowa; C. O. Metcalf of east of Auburn; Capt. Dean Metcalf, medical corps, stationed at Camp Pike, Ark.; and two sisters, Mrs. Daniel Oberhaltzer and Mrs. John Elson of Garrett.

The funeral was held this (Thursday) morning at 10:30 from the home on Douglas street, the Rev. F. A. Hall officiating. Burial was made in Evergreen cemetery.

Soldiers Reception

The Red Cross will hold another reception for returned soldier boys of Concord and Newville townships Wednesday evening, April 23, at eight o'clock in the M. P. Church.

Addresses will be given by various men. The principal speaker being Lieut. George Carrol, who operated an observation balloon, in Uncle Sam's Signal Corps. He being twice decorated for bravery. The public in general is invited to attend.

Wants To Locate Here

Mr. E. L. Speer of Swayzee, Ind. was in St. Joe last week looking over the situation and conditions relative to the locating of a dry goods store. He is now carrying over a $10,000 stock of goods in his store. We learn that Mr. Speer is a wide-awake, hustler in the mercantile business and is one that believes in going out after business rather than waiting for it to come to him. St. Joe needs such a man and that very badly. But, there is now one great obstacle to overcome and that is a room suitable for such a business. Every room is now occupied and there seems to be only one solution and that is to have the corner destroyed by fire, rebuilt. Just what will develope is not known yet but let us hope that the locating of a store of this character can be accomplished and that very soon. St. Joe would be back to normal in a short time if this one enterprise could be located.

The Rebecca Lodge will have a sale of Baked Goods at St. Joe, next Saturday, in the Barney house, beginning at 10 o'clock. Get your supply for your Easter dinner.

FINANCING VICTORY LOAN WILL HELP INDUSTRY

Must Be Distributed Among All the People—Every American's Savings Needed to Keep Wheels Turning.

Julius Rosenwald, president of Sears, Roebuck & Co., and a dollar a year government employee, stated recently that Germany surrendered, not so much because she was beaten as because her military chiefs saw the impending whirlwind of American men, munitions, airplanes, food and supplies, which they knew meant annihilation in the not distant future for the German armies.

"The Victory loan—it should be called the Thanksgiving loan—which pays a part of the bill for that preparation that saved the lives of hundreds of thousands of American boys, can in no wise be weighed against the destruction of life which our preparations averted," Mr. Rosenwald pointed out.

"The loan must be financed before industry can go ahead. Proper financing of the loan means that it must be distributed among all the people, means that the savings of every American must be loaned to his government. Unless such wide distribution is effected—and it can only be effected with the assistance of the great organizations which have been built up during the past drives—the financial houses will have to absorb the loan. Such a result would be disastrous to the business world, for funds needed in trade reconstruction would have to be withdrawn from circulation and interest rates would mount so high that private concerns would find it almost impossible to borrow for their necessities.

"I bespeak the co-operation of everyone who lent aid to the government in the past drives. I am fully convinced that the American people will respond as readily to this appeal for funds as they have to the past. I am sure that salesmen and organizers who during the last drive found so ready a response that they sold nearly $7,000,000,000 worth of government securities will find an even more pleasant reception when they seek subscriptions to the Victory loan," Mr. Rosenwald concluded.

More Boys Are Home

Two more young men from overseas have arrived home this week. Lloyd Miller came Sunday evening and Tuesday morning Carl Watt arrived on the Wabash. The family were completely surprised of his arrival, because Mr. Watt had written the government concerning his coming home for the summer work on the farm and he was assured that the son would do well to get home by the middle of the summer. Carl pulled off a complete strprise on his parents, as he had not written them of his coming and from what we learned there was a real for sure rejoicing in the Watt home.

Auto Thrown Into Ditch

While driving on the stone road near St. Joe, last Wednesday, Jas. Draggoo of Auburn, had the misfortune to have the car in which he was riding turn over with him. He sustained several bruises and injured his left arm but it was not broken. Two cars were ahead of him at the time of the accident and one of them, passing him, turned into the road so quickly that the front wheel of his machine was hit, throwing his car into the ditch. The parties running into Mr. Draggoo stopped long enough to see that he was not injured severely, and then left before he could inquire as to who they were or get their number. He was brought to Dr. Shook's office and repaired so that he was able to go to Auburn on Thursday.

America's Immortals

Most striking instances of gallantry for which the Distinguished Service Cross has been awarded

The blood of every loyal American will be stirred by the little stories of conspicuous bravery on the part of American soldiers in France that are printed below. These are only a few of thousands of cases of unusual gallantry that won for Pershing's fighters the Distinguished Service Cross. These cases have been picked out by General Pershing's staff as among the most notable of the thousands that are now a part of the official record of the American expeditionary forces.

GEORGE S. ROBB,
First Lieutenant, 369th Infantry.

For conspicuous gallantry, beyond the call of duty, near Sechault, France, September 29 and 30, Lieut. Robb was awarded the Distinguished Service Cross. While leading his platoon in the assault on Sechault, Lieut. Robb was severely wounded by machine gun fire, but rather than go to the rear for proper treatment, he remained with his platoon, until ordered to the dressing station by his commanding officer. Returning within forty-five minutes, he remained on duty throughout the entire night, inspecting his lines and establishing outposts. Early the next morning he was again wounded, once again displaying remarkable devotion to duty by remaining in command of his platoon. Later the same day a bursting shell added two more wounds, the same shell killing his commanding officer and two officers of his company. He then assumed command of his company, and organized its position in the trenches. Displaying wonderful courage and tenacity at the critical times, he was the only officer of his battalion who advanced beyond the town and by clearing machine gun and sniping posts, contributed largely to the aid of his battalion in holding their objective. His example of bravery and fortitude and his eagerness to continue with his mission despite severe wounds, set before the enlisted men of his command a most wonderful standard of morale and self-sacrifice. Lieut. Robb's home address is 308 South Twelfth street, Salina, Kan., where his mother lives.

ANDREW B. LYNCH,
Second Lieutenant, 110th Infantry.

Lieutenant Lynch was awarded the Distinguished Service Cross for unusual bravery in action near Apremont, France, September 29, 1918. Lieutenant Lynch while a sergeant on duty with a 37 mm. gun section of his company was moving the guns to a more advantageous position when he learned that the officer in charge of the party had been captured by an enemy patrol. Organizing a group of five men, Lieutenant Lynch immediately attacked the Germans, killed 15 of them and liberated the officer. Immediately afterward Lieutenant Lynch took command of 75 men and launched a counter-attack on the enemy, driving him back for more than a kilometer. Lieutenant Lynch is married, his wife living at 2446 Franklin street, Philadelphia, Pa.

FRANK GAFFNEY,
Private, First Class, Company G, 108th Infantry.

Private Gaffney earned his Distinguished Service Cross by conspicuous gallantry in action near Ronssoy, France, September 29, 1918. Private Gaffney, an automatic rifleman, pushed forward alone with his gun, after all the other members of his squad had been killed, discovered several Germans placing a heavy machine gun in position. He killed the crew, captured the gun, bombed several dugouts and, after killing four more of the enemy with his pistol, held the position until reinforcements came up, when eighty prisoners were captured. His home is in Lockport, N. Y., and his father is Wilber Gaffney, Chapel street.

JOHN J. FARRELL,
Private, Company B, 354th Infantry.

Private Farrell (deceased) was decorated for conspicuous gallantry in action near Remonville, France, November 1, 1918. When the combat group of which he was a member was held up by machine gun fire of the enemy, Private Farrell left the group. Crawling around to the flank of the nest he charged with his bayonet. The enemy surrendered and his comrades took the gun, after which the advance continued. Private Farrell was so seriously wounded during the combat that he died before he could be removed from the field. Paterson, N. J., was his home.

JAMES I. MESTROVITCH,
Sergeant, Company G, 11th Infantry.

Sergt. Mestrovitch (deceased) decorated for exceptional bravery in saving the life of his company commander at Pismette, France, August 10, 1918. Seeing his captain lying wounded thirty yards in front of the line, after his company had withdrawn to a sheltered position behind a stone wall, Sergt. Mestrovitch voluntarily left cover and crawled through heavy machine gun and shell fire to where the officer lay. Sergt. Mestrovitch took the officer upon his back and crawled back to a place of safety, where he administered first aid treatment, his exceptional heroism saving the officer's life. Sergt. Mestrovitch's home was in Fresno, Cal.

ARTHUR F. BRANDT,
Corporal, Co. E, 168th Infantry.

Corporal Brandt, whose home was with his mother, Mrs. W. F. Brandt at Postville, Iowa, won the Distinguished Service Cross for conspicuous bravery in action northeast of Verdun, France, October 16, 1918. After his company had been in action three days, during the attack on the Cote de Chatillon and was to be relieved, Corporal Brandt volunteered to guide the company to a position of security in the rear which he had selected. While the relief was being made under shell fire, this soldier and four others were severely wounded by a bursting shell. Realizing that his wound would prove fatal, Corporal Brandt while being carried on a stretcher indicated the route to be taken by the company, being wounded in the face and scarcely able to talk. Through his extraordinary fortitude and will power, the company was able to reach its position over difficult terrain and under enemy fire. Corporal Brandt died from his wounds the next day.

REIDER WAALER,
Sergeant, Company A, 105th Machine Gun Battalion.

Sergeant Waaler was decorated for conspicuous gallantry in action near Ronssoy, France, September 27, 1918. Sergeant Waaler, in the face of heavy artillery and machine gun fire, crawled forward to a burning British tank, in which some of the crew were imprisoned, and succeeded in rescuing two men. Although the tank was then burning fiercely and contained ammunition which was likely to explode at any time, this soldier immediately returned to the tank and entering it, made a search for the other occupants, remaining until he satisfied himself that there were no living men in the tank. His home address is Noretrand, Norway.

WILLIE SANDLIN,
Sergeant, Company A, 132nd Infantry.

Sergeant Sandlin was decorated for conspicuous gallantry in action at Bois De Forges, France, September 26, 1918. Sergeant Sandlin showed conspicuous gallantry in action at Bois De Forges on September 26, by advancing alone directly on a machine gun nest which was holding up the line with its fire. He killed the crew with a grenade and enabled the line to advance. Later in the day Sergeant Sandlin attacked alone and put out of action two other machine gun nests, setting a splendid example of bravery and coolness to his men. His brother, Johnnie Sandlin, lives in Hayden, Kentucky.

ARCHIE A. PECK,
Private, Company A, 307th Infantry.

Private Peck was decorated for conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity above and beyond the call of duty in the Argonne forest, France, October 6, 1918. While engaged with two other soldiers on patrol duty, Private Peck and his comrades were wounded. Returning to his company, he obtained another soldier to accompany him, to assist in bringing in the wounded. His assistant was killed in the exploit but Private Peck continued on, twice returning and safely bringing in both men, being under terrific machine gun fire during the entire journey. His home is in Hornell, N. Y.

CHARLES D. BARGER,
Private, First Class, Company L, 354th Infantry.

Private Barger was awarded the Distinguished Service Cross for conspicuous gallantry in action near the Bois de Bantheville, France, October 31, 1918. Learning that two daylight patrols had been caught out in No Man's Land and were unable to return, Private Barger and another stretcher bearer, upon their own initiative, made two trips 500 yards beyond our lines, under constant machine gun fire, and rescued two officers. His uncle, Henry S. McFeron, lives in Stott City, Miss.

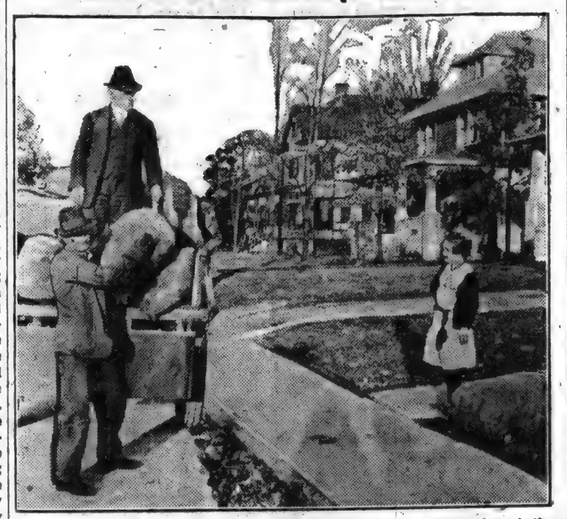
WALTER S. SEVALIA,
Corporal, Co. F, 7th Engineers.

Corporal Sevalia was decorated for extraordinary heroism in action near Breuilles, France, November 3, 1918. Corporal Sevalia swam the Meuse river with a cable for a pontoon bridge, under direct machine gun fire. Later he carried a cable for another bridge over the East canal, across an open field covered by enemy machine guns. Here he was wounded by a machine gun bullet, but returned carrying a message of great importance. Corporal Sevalia's home is in Brule, Wis.

ALPHEUS E. STEWART,
Private, Company G, 107th Infantry.

Private Stewart received the Distinguished War Cross in recognition of unusual gallantry in action near Ronssoy, France, September 29, 1918. Disregarding a severe wound in the head, Private Stewart fearlessly advanced toward an enemy machine gun nest and put it out of action with a grenade a few seconds before he was killed by fire from another machine gun nest near by. His home was in Jordanton, Tex.

PRINCIPAL WAY TO REDUCE COSTS IS TO CURTAIL SERVICES REQUIRED IN BUYING



Completion of Co-operative Transaction—Potatoes Are Delivered and the Little Girl Has Handed Over the Money Left by Her Father for the Purpose.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Co-operative buying is profitable to consumers only when fewer services are required by the co-operative method than would be required by the old trade channel methods. In other words, the economies secured by consumers through co-operative buying are effected for the most part by dispensing with certain services that they have been in the habit of receiving, and paying for, under the old system. Every service rendered in co-operative buying must be paid for by the consumer just as under the established middle man system. It follows, therefore, that the principal way to reduce costs is to reduce the services required.

This is the gist of the views held and expressed by the United States department of agriculture through its co-operative experts in the bureau of markets. One of these experts recently detailed some experiences to show that the organization of the village community for co-operative buying and selling may be made relatively simple. In a suburb of an eastern city, he said, a plan has been adopted for the purchase of carlots of certain commodities under which a community committee undertakes to contract for the purchase of a carlot of potatoes, say, direct from a producers' association, and to deliver them direct from the car to the homes of the consumers who have placed orders for portions of the lot. The car is placed on a siding in the suburb, a drayage concern is employed to deliver the potatoes to the homes of the contracting consumers who pay cash at the time of delivery to the committee, which, in turn, settles with the growers' association.

Advantages of Simple System.

This is pointed out as a simple system with these advantageous features:

Each purchase is confined to a single commodity at a specific time. The commodity is purchased direct from an association of producers. The entire transaction is handled by a committee which is paid simply for the time actually devoted to the work. No outlay is involved for storage or warehouse facilities because the commodity is taken directly from the car to the homes. Even the cartage expenses are considerably reduced by a contract arrangement for delivery of the entire carload. The total costs paid by the consumer are the price paid to the producer plus the transportation and cartage charges and payment for the time given by the committee. The only particular in which further safeguarding is suggested is to make sure that the product purchased is of good and uniform grade or quality.

The outstanding advantage is that the individual member takes part in the purchase of a particular carload shipment and when this has been delivered and paid for the responsibility of the individual ceases. He is then free to choose whether or not he desires to participate in any other purchase. Any change in price that may occur during the period of delivery must be borne by the members participating in the purchase rather than by the association as a whole. The individuals directly associated in the particular purchase become responsible for whatever speculative feature may be involved and the association as an association is not entangled in the event of a decline. If the lot were purchased by the association for resale to its members, such a decline in price during delivery would mean that the association must pocket a loss which ultimately would have to be made good by assessment or otherwise.

Purchasing for Resale.

If the association purchases for resale to its members, the operation becomes relatively complex. Storage facilities must be provided and a more or less permanent force of employees must be maintained. The responsibility of the individual member does not cease with the completion of a single transaction, but necessarily continues in connection with the fixed expense of maintaining the storage or warehouse concern and the clerical force. It becomes necessary, also, to provide a sufficient amount and variety of stock to serve the needs and requirements of customers and there comes into existence the co-operative store, which, on the whole, has not been successful in this country.

The conclusion is reached that the fundamental principle is that all co-operative buying and selling, like all other buying and selling, is essentially a business enterprise which, if it is to succeed, must be grounded on business principles, must be organized in recognition of the fact that every service to be secured by the members must be paid for, and that, therefore, the principal way to reduce costs is to reduce the services required.

SWEET CLOVER GOOD FORAGE FOR SWINE

Pasturing Induces Plants to Send Out Many Tender Leaves.

One Acre Ordinarily Will Support Twenty to Thirty Shotes, in Addition to Furnishing Light Cutting of Hay.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Sweet clover is an excellent pasturage crop for hogs. The animals may be turned on the field the first year after sowing the crop, as soon as the plants have made a six-inch growth. From this time until late fall an abundance of forage is produced, as pasturing induces the plants to send out many tender, succulent branches. Pasturing the second season after planting may begin as soon as the growth starts in the spring. If the field is not closely grazed the second year it is advisable to clip it occasionally, leaving an eight-inch stubble, so as to produce a more succulent growth.

An acre of sweet clover pasture ordinarily will support 20 to 30 shotes, in addition to furnishing a light cutting of hay. For the best growth of the hogs they should be fed each day two pounds of grain for each 100 pounds of the hogs' weight. Pigs are very fond of sweet clover roots, and for this reason should be ringed before being turned on the pasture. The tendency to root may generally be overcome by adding some protein to the grain ration.

DETAILS OF DISINFECTION

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

In the practical work of disinfection there are three essentials:

1. Preparation of the building that will facilitate reaching organisms of disease.
2. A disinfectant which upon contact can be depended upon to destroy such organisms.
3. A method of applying the disinfectant that will assure the most thorough contact with the bacteria.

GENERAL FARM NOTES

Early plowing makes possible a good seed bed.

A manure pit doesn't cost money; it saves money.

Rape is too succulent to make a good grade of silage.

Increase fertility; grow clovers, use lime, phosphate and manures.

For some garden crops lime is not needed, and may even cause harm.

Always aim to have your corn go off the farm on foot. The same about hay.

We must maintain the balance of fertility of our soils or pay the penalty.

SUMMARY OF LEAGUE TREATY

Official Statement Issued in Paris Giving Terms of the Pact.

FOUNDED TO SECURE PEACE

Will Act Through Assembly Comprising Not More Than Three Representatives of Each of the Member States — Other Conditions.

Paris, April 14.—The following official summary of the covenant of the league of nations was issued here:

"1—The league of nations is founded in order to promote international co-operation and to secure peace. The league will include: (A) The belligerent states named in a document annexed to the covenant; (B) all the neutral states so named, and (C) in the future, any self-governing country whose admission is approved by two-thirds of the states already members of the league.

"A state may withdraw from the league, providing it has kept its obligations to date, on giving two years' notice.

"2—The league will act through an assembly comprising not more than three representatives of each of the member states, each state having only one vote, and a council comprising, for the present, one representative of each of the five great powers and each of four other powers as selected from time to time by the assembly.

"The number of powers of each class represented on the council may be increased by the unanimous consent of the council and a majority of the assembly. Other powers have the right to sit as members of the council during the decision of matters in which they are especially interested.

One vote for Each State.

"In the council, as in the assembly, each state will have only one vote. Both these bodies are to meet at stated intervals (the council at least once a year), and at other times if required; both can deal with any matter that is of international interest or threatens the peace of the world; the decision of both must be unanimous, except in certain specified cases, matters of procedure, for instance, being decided by a majority vote.

"The league will have a permanent secretariat, under a secretary general. The secretriat and all other bodies under the league may include women, equally with men. A permanent court of international justice and various permanent commissions and bureaus are also to be established.

"3—The member states agree:

"(A) To reduce their armaments, plans for such reduction being suggested by the council, but only adopted with the consent of the states themselves, and thereafter not to increase them without the concurrence of the council.

"(B) To exchange full information of their existing armies and their naval and military programs.

"(C) To respect each other's territory and personal independence, and to guarantee them against foreign aggression.

"(D) To submit all international disputes either to arbitration or to inquiry by the council, which latter, however, may not pronounce an opinion on any dispute whose subject matter falls solely within a state's domestic jurisdiction; in no case to go to war until three months after the award, or a unanimous recommendation has been made, and even then not to go to war with a state which accepts the award or recommendation.

"(E) To regard a state which has broken the covenant as having committed an act of war against the league, to break off all economic and other relations with it, and to allow free passage through their territories to the troops of those states which are contributing armed force on behalf of the league. The council is to recommend what amount of force, if any, should be applied by the several governments concerned, but the approval of the latter is necessary. (States not members of the league will be invited to accept the obligations of the league for the purpose of particular disputes, and, if they fail to comply, may be forced.)

When States Act.

"(F) Not to consider any treaty binding till it has been communicated to the league, which will then proceed to publish it; to admit the right of the assembly to advise the reconsideration of treaties and international conditions which do not accord with present needs, and to be bound by no obligations inconsistent with the covenant.

Earrings Torn From Their Ears—Famine Near Under Rule of the Soviet.

Amsterdam, April 14.—Plundering has followed in the wake of the soviet government at Budapest, according to a dozen Dutchmen who fled from the Hungarian capital and are now at Oldensaal.

Two soldiers held up women in the street and tore the earrings from their ears.

Food is very scarce and the lack of it has made the people entirely indifferent to political developments. The government is issuing salt in quarter-pound lots and portions of flour monthly. Milk, butter and fats are unobtainable except secretly. Sugar is selling for $7 a pound.

The bolshevists are demanding an iron rule, but Bela Kun, the soviet leader, is inclined to await the formation of a larger army before attempting to struggle with any of the disputants.

Bela Kun is charging the Roumanians with abducting his family from Hungary.

Trades Hall Council Recommends Reduction of Working Hours to Provide Employment.

Melbourne, April 14.—A reduction of working hours in order to provide work for the unemployed is recommended by the Trades Hall council of Melbourne. The organization has inaugurated a movement for the establishment of a 40-hour week in all industries in Australia.

The increased productivity during the war, the stoppage of work since the signing of the armistice and the demobilization of soldiers have increased the unemployment problem, it is pointed out, and a reduction of the working period will assist in providing work for the idle.

The average union week in Australia is 48 hours, but in some industries the 44-hour week has been established.

WOLVES of the SEA

Carlyle Realizes His Life Is Hanging In Balance.

Synopsis — Geoffry Carlyle, master of sailing ships at twenty-six, is sentenced to 20 years' servitude in the American colonies for participation in the Monmouth rebellion in England. Among the passengers on board the ship on which he is sent across are Roger Fairfax, wealthy Maryland planter; his niece, Dorothy Fairfax, and Lieutenant Sanchez, a Spaniard, who became acquainted with the Fairfaxes in London. Carlyle meets Dorothy, who informs him her uncle has bought his services. Sanchez shows himself an enemy of Carlyle. The Fairfax party, now on its own sloop in the Chesapeake bay, encounters a mysterious bark, the Namur of Rotterdam. Carlyle discovers that Sanchez is "Black Sanchez," planning to steal the Fairfax gold and abduct Dorothy. He fights Sanchez and leaves him for dead. In a battle with Sanchez' followers, however, he is overpowered and thrown into the bay. In a desperate effort to save Dorothy, Carlyle decides to swim to the Namur. By a ruse he gets aboard and mingles with the crew.

LeVere shouted an order, and a sudden flare was lighted amidships, the circle of flame illuminating a part of the deck, and spreading out over the wild expanse of water. Scarcely had a minute elapsed before it came sweeping into the radius of light—at first a dim, spectral shadow, scarcely to be recognized; then, almost as suddenly, revealed in all its details—a boat of size, flying toward us under a lug sail, keeling well over, and topping the sea swells like a bird on wing. LeVere called for men to stand by, the fellows rushing past me to their stations, but, in the fascination of the moment, I failed to move. I could do nothing but stare out across the intervening water, with eyes fastened on that swiftly approaching boat. I must see, I must know the message it brought; what story it held of the tragedy. Manuel held the tiller, with Estada seated beside him, leaning forward, and gesticulating with one hand, as he directed the course. I had never seen these two, yet I knew them beyond a doubt. Mendes and Anderson (at least I supposed these to be the two) were poised at the sail halyards, ready to let the straining sheet down at a run, while Cochose crouched low in the bow, his black hand uplifted, gripping a coil of rope. Their faces were all turned forward, lighted by the flare from our deck, and I felt a shudder of fear run over me—no expression on any countenance spoke of defeat; even the ugly features of the negro beamed with delight.

But was that all? Was that all? Surely not. Forward of the single mast was stowed the chest, while in the open space between the helmsman and the two sailors were stretched two motionless bodies. LeVere, gripping a stay-rope, and leaning well out, hailed in Spanish.

"Ahoy, the boat! You can make it?"

"Ay!" came back Estada's voice. "Stand by to send us off. Call all hands, and break anchor as soon as we are aboard."

"Very well, sir. Where is Captain Sanchez?"

Estada pointed downward in swift, expressive gesture.

"Here at my feet—badly hurt, but will recover. Send two men down to help when we make fast. Now, Cochose—let go of your rope; watch out above!"

I stood, gripping hard at the rail, and staring down at the scene below, as the men in the boat made fast. I felt paralyzed, and helpless, unable to move. I had no business to remain there; every prospect of security depended on my joining the crew. Yet only one thought gripped me—Sanchez was not dead! And that other body? That of Dorothy Fairfax, without doubt, yet certainly not lifeless. If their prisoner was the girl—and who else could it be?—she remained alive, helplessly bound to prevent either struggle, or outcry, and destined to a fate far worse than death.

My own life hung in the balance—nay, rather, my doom was already sealed. There seemingly was but one chance for escape left—that was to drop silently overboard. God, no! that would be the craven act of a coward. Better far to stay, and kill, or even be killed, than to be forever cursed by my own conscience.

The fellows sent down from the main chains to the boat brought the injured captain up first. This required the services of three men, his body hanging limp between them, his upturned face showing ghastly in the flaming of the torch thrust out over the rail. To every appearance it was apparently a corpse they handled, except for their tenderness, and a single groan to which the white lips gave utterance, when one of the bearers slipped, wrenching the wounded body with a sharp pang of pain. Once safely on deck, the three bore him across to the after cabin and disappeared down the steps.

Estada had already swung himself up into the chains, while Anderson and Mendes were lifting the girl to her feet, and rather roughly urging her forward. Her eyes reflected all the unutterable horror which for the moment dominated her mind, while her loosened hair, disarranged by struggle, only served to intensify the pallor of her face.

"Hustle her along lively, boys," shouted back Estada coarsely. "If she won't move, give her a shove. Then tie her up again, and take the turn of a rope 'round her. What do you think this is—a queen's reception? Move lively, senorita," in mock sarcasm.

Her gaze settled on him, where he hung far out, grasping a backstay, watching the movements below, and her slender form straightened as by the acquisition of new strength.

"If these creatures will take their hands off me," she said, using their tongue without a tremor in the clear voice. "I can easily go up alone. What is it you are so afraid of—a woman?"

The expression of Estada's face promised an outburst of profanity, but, instead of giving it utterance, he lifted his cap in a sudden pretense at gallantry.

"Your pardon, senorita," he said in a tone of mockery. "If you have come to your senses at last, it is well. Leave her alone, men. Now, my beauty, I am taking you at your own word—a step, and then the protection of my hand. We welcome you, as a guest aboard."

A moment and she had attained the deck. Estada chose to continue playing the fool.

"Thanks, senorita—thanks," he began softly, and again bowing before her, cap in hand. "We greet you with due honor aboard the Namur—"

"Enough of that, you coward, you murderer," she broke in coldly. "Do not touch nor speak to me."

She turned her back on him, thus coming face to face with LeVere, who stood enjoying the scene, a wide grin on his dark face, revealing a row of white teeth under a jet-black mustache.

"You, sir—you are an officer?"

"I have charge of the deck."

"Then where am I to go?"

The mulatto, surprised by the sudden question, glanced inquiringly toward Estada, who had already completely lost his sense of humor.

"Go!" the latter growled. "Why send the wench below. I'll see to her later, and teach her who is the master here. Off with her now, but be back quickly." He leaned out over the rail, sending his gruff voice below. "Send up that chest, you men. Hook on the boat, Manuel, and let her drag; we must get out of here in a hurry. All ready, aloft?"

"Ay, ay, sir."

"Then sheet home; how is it forrard?"

"Both anchors speak, sir."

"Smartly done—hard down with your helm there! That's it; now let her play off slowly."

He caught sight of me. All the savage brutality of his nature had been brought to the surface by Dorothy's stinging words, and he sought now some fit opportunity to give it vent. Before I could move, he had gripped me by the collar, and swung me about, so that the light streaming out from the cabin fell directly on my face.

"What the devil are you doing, loafing aft here? I've seen you hanging about for ten minutes, never lifting a hand. Who are you anyhow?"

"Joe Gates, sir."

"Gates—another damned Englishman! How did you ever get aboard here?"

It was the returning LeVere who made explanation before I could reply.

"Manuel brought him on board last night. Picked him up drunk ashore."

"I see. Well now, do you happen to have any idea who I am, Gates?"

"No, sir—only that you are one of the officers."

"I am the first officer, and in command at present. Pedro Estada is my name. Now, you damned English whelp, remember that!"

Before I even suspected what was coming, his unexpected action as swift as the leap of a poised tiger, he struck me fairly between the eyes with the butt of a pistol, and I went down sprawling onto the deck. For a moment I seemed, in spite of the viciousness of the blow, to retain a spark of consciousness, for I knew he kicked me savagely with his heavy sea boots; I felt the pain, and even heard the words, and curses, accompanying each brutal stroke.

"You drunken dog! You whelp of a sea wolf! You English cur! Take that—damn you! And that! You'll not forget me for awhile. That's it—squirm. I like to see it. When you wake up again, you'll remember Pedro Estada. How did that feel, you grunting pig? Here, LeVere, Manuel, throw this sot into the forecastle. Curse you, here is one more to jog your memory."

The heavy, iron-shod boot landed full in my face, and every sensation left me as I sank limply back, bloody and unconscious.

CHAPTER XII.

A Friend in the Forecastle.

I slowly opened my eyes to find myself lying in an upper bunk of the forecastle. Memory soon returned, stimulated no doubt by the aching of my body where Estada had so brutally kicked me with his heavy boot. The heavy rolling of the bark clearly evidenced that we were already at sea, and bucking against a high wind. It was a dark, dismal, smelly interior, amply large enough, but ill ventilated, and inexpressibly dirty. I must have been lying unconscious for several hours. I rested back, feeling of the numerous bruises on my body, and touching gingerly the dried blood caked on my face. No very serious damage seemed to have been done, although every muscle and tendon appeared to be strained and lacerated. Clinching my teeth to keep back a groan, I succeeded in sitting upright, my head touching the upper deck, as I undertook to survey my surroundings. About half the bunks seemed to be occupied, the figures of the sleeping men barely discernible.

As I sat there, staring about at this scene there was a stir within the upper berth on my own level, and an uplifted face appeared suddenly in the yellow flare of light. It was manifestly an English face at first glance, rosy of cheek, with chestnut beard. A pair of humorous, gray eyes surveyed me silently, and then, apparently satisfied by the scrutiny, the owner sat up in the bunk, revealing powerful shoulders, and a round, bull neck.

"Ahoy, mate," he said pleasantly, endeavoring to speak low, the effort resembling the growl of a bear. "How do you feel—pretty sore?"

"Ache from head to foot," I answered, immediately feeling his friendliness. "But no harm done."

"I saw part of it. The damn black brute kicked savagely enough, but at that you're lucky; it's the Spanish style to use a knife. I've seen that cock sinah a man into ribbons for nothing at all—just to show he was bad. Haines tells me your name is Gates, and that you are English."

"That's right; I shipped first out of Bristol."

"So did I, mate—twenty years ago though, and I never went back since. My name is Tom Watkins. Let's shake; there is quite a sprinkling of us Britishers aboard, and we ought to hang together."

He put out a big, hairy fist, and I gripped it heartily, decidedly liking the man as his eyes frankly met mine. He appeared honest and square, a fine type of the English seaman.

"Tom Watkins, you said. May I ask if you were out on the bow-sprit along with Haines last night?"

"Just afore the longboat come in? Yes, we were there."

"Well, I was down below, hanging to the cable, and overheard you two talking together. Somehow, Watkins, you do not seem to me to fit in exactly with this gang of pirates; you don't look to be that sort. How long have you been with them?"

Carlyle gets further attention from the brutal Estada, but in a different form. What may it portend? Does it offer hope of final escape or further danger to Carlyle and Dorothy?

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

Flowers Express Essential Feeling of Joyous Easter

"The altar is snowy with blooms,
The font is a vase of perfume;
On pillar and chancel are twining
Fresh garlands of eloquent bloom!"

ALL the churches are decorated for the festival after Resurrection; and the lily, emblem of purity, sweetness, and grace combined, is the favorite flower for decoration.

Flowers voice the essential feeling of Easter. Each fragrant blossom is the fulfillment of a divine promise. For the perennial miracle of an awakened earth is in full harmony with the aspiring note of religion reiterating its faith in the promise of a new life.

Flowers, like music, speak the language of the heart. They are capable of conveying the most personal and individual ideals while yet appealing to a common universal vision and imagination.

This characteristic of flowers fits them especially both to express the private affections of the giver and enrich the symbolism of the altar. A basket or a cross of flowers can say all the heart wishes to say and say it without obtruding personal feeling.

In medieval times flowers spoke a definite language, the interpretation of which seems almost lost for a season. The palm, the classical symbol of victory, was early taken as the symbol of martyrdom. It was outlined on the tombs of the early martyrs, and it was placed in the hands of those who suffered in the cause of truth, to express their final victory over the powers of sin and death.

Roses white and red voice innocence and love. The Madonna was the "Rose of Sharon." A wreath of roses is placed upon the brow of St. Cecilia. Roses and fruit are borne by St. Dorothea. A white anchor of camellias, with its top a cross, expresses faith and hope.

The lily has long been regarded as expressive of purity. In Bermuda, the home of our Easter lily, all the roads are full of people, white and black, carrying lilies to the churches at dawn on Easter day. With them the doorways, altars and pulpits are decorated, and the graves are completely covered. Each lily and each Easter flower thus bestowed is vocal, like one of those old litanies that have descended to us from time immemorial, full of wholesome piety and charity—common prayer to all devout souls. The flowers are of yet older birth than the ancient prayers—primeval litanies before ever music was.

Their eloquence is growing on us from year to year, as we bring roses, lilies and other Easter flowers to deck the altars of God, to hallow with their perfume and beauty the resting places of the departed and to dedicate our homes to Christ with our bright, sweet, sacred emblems.

"Christ is risen! with glad lips we utter,
And far up the infinite height
Archangels the paean re-echo
And crown him with lilies of light!"

The Lilies' Message

O, lilies, snow white lilies,
O, lilies, radiant, sweet,
Ye are angels trooping earthward
To kiss our Savior's feet.

One Famous Easter Egg.

The record in the size and cost of Easter eggs was broken by one given some time ago to a famous Parisian actress by one of her admirers. On Easter morning an immense van rolled into the courtyard of the house inhabited by the actress, and on the van rested a gigantic egg made of wood and decked with velvet. At the first moment the astonished lady did not know what to do with this amiable gift, but soon she noticed in the egg a door, and, upon opening it her eye fell upon a carriage with two fine horses and a coachman sitting motionless on the box.

SOMEWHERE IN FRANCE

EASTER, 1919

Somewhere in France, the Easter violets blooming
Breathe o'er his grave the incense of my love;
Somewhere in France the stars shine through the dooming,
Fond eyes of angels watching from above.

Somewhere in France all that I had is sleeping,
Treasure of heart and jewel of my soul!
Somewhere in France, I cannot see for weeping
Even his waiting, grief beyond control.

Somewhere in France, O Christ, salvation's Captain,
Order him home—he's dying, sick and faint!
Somewhere in France, he is dead—his bod wrapped in Liberty's flag, no answer to my plaint!

Somewhere in France, and this is Easter morning,
My breaking heart can raise no hymn of praise
Somewhere in France, shall flowers for Christ's adorning
Grow from the stones of grief's downtrodden ways?

Somewhere in France, and yet my bitter crying
Wakes a faint echo like a distant chime;
Somewhere in France I hear faith's bells replying,
Falling like music from the towers of time.

Somewhere in France, along the eastern heavens,
Hung with the pall of battle smoke and grime,
Somewhere in France a shining pledge is given,
Morning is dawning, silent and sublime.

Somewhere in France men's souls have burst their prison;
Somewhere in France Christ comes again to earth;
Somewhere in France, 'tis true our Lord is risen!
Somewhere in France a better hope has birth.

Somewhere in France, I have no bitter yearning
To bring him thence, to hold him for my own;
Somewhere in France today he is returning;
Somewhere in heaven now he has come home!

Opprobrium Given Crucifixion Plant Has Many Reasons

THERE is a popular belief in the Old World that the crown of thorns placed on the Savior's head was derived from a certain species of euphorbia, which, when grown nowadays in botanical gardens, is often trained into the form of a thorny crown fastened upon a cross.

The "crucifixion plant," as it is called, has no leaves worth mentioning, save at the tips of its branches. All the rest of it is mainly thorns.

The Crucifixion Plant.

But the oddest thing of all about it is that, when cut with a knife, drops of red juice resembling blood exude from it. No wonder, then, that in the Old World where religion and superstition so frequently merge, it should be regarded with awe.

NAME DERIVED FROM SAXON

Easter Known to Have Been a Celebration Time of the Heathen Goddess Ostara.

Not until the early sixties did the Presbyterians take note of Easter. And New England was the last section of our country to bend—or unbend—in the direction of the Easter celebration. The name Easter, which is in use only among the English and German speaking peoples, is undoubtedly derived from that of the heathen Saxon's goddess, Ostara, Osterr or Eastre. She was the personification of the East, of the spring and of the morning, the month of April being dedicated to her and called "Eastermonath" by the Saxons and Angles. It is still called in Germany Ostermonat. Yet Easter sometimes falls in March, as the church calendar prescribes that it shall fall upon the first Sunday after the fourteenth day of the moon that happens to reign at the vernal equinox, which is March 21. One writer says:

"Non-Teutonic nations cling to the Semitic word derived from the Aramaic word pesach, 'to pass by,' which has been translated into English as Passover. In England the Semitic form survives in many terms applicable to the season, as pass flower, paschal lamb and pasch, pace or pase eggs. These terms remind us that our Christian festival is the successor to the Jewish Passover, while the word Easter carries us back through the Saxons to the more ancient celebrations which from the earliest ages of man have expressed the universal outburst of rejoicing over the reawakening of nature after the long sleep of winter."

Personal Easter Gift.

The giving of photographs at the Eastertide is a custom that is becoming established in America, although the idea seems to have come from abroad. The idea is to "go and get took," then send the photograph to your friends with a little note of Easter greeting.

An Indiana Case

S. C. Wernts, horseshoer, 115 W. Sample St., South Bend, Ind., says: "Some years ago I had a pretty bad attack of kidney and bladder trouble. My worst symptom was inflammation of the bladder and many times the kidney secretions would be full of blood and for three weeks I had to lie in bed. I had very little control over the kidney secretions. Finally I used Doan's Kidney Pills and after I had finished taking two boxes, I was as well and sound as ever and went back to work feeling fine."

Grand Rapids, Wis.—"I am a great believer in Dr. Pierce's medicines. When in a delicate condition, I had eczema very bad. I took 'Golden Medical Discovery' and it cured me and I have never had any trace of it since. When my baby was born he was broken out. I gave him the Discovery' and it cured him, also. I don't think my child would have lived only for this remedy. After the birth of baby I was miserable. I would have pains and headaches. I took medicines but got no relief. Finally, I began taking 'Favorite Prescription' and in the next month I was all right—felt fine, and have been well ever since.

"I can recommend all Dr. Pierce's medicines for they did wonders for me and for my family."—Mrs. Anna Zeller, 548 10th Ave., North.

War Ribbon.

Perhaps few have heard what the colors of the British medal ribbon for the great war are to be, says "A Londoner" in the Evening Standard. One who has seen the design practically decided upon describes it thus: There is a broad center of bright orange color, and on each side from the center outward are thin strips of white, black and royal blue in that order. It is said that the effect is very good indeed, is unlike any other medal ribbon, and looks well on any uniform.

VICTORY LOAN AN APPEAL TO OUR BUSINESS SENSE

As a Business Proposition No Man Can Afford Not to Subscribe to Full Limit of His Ability.

By EDGAR RICE BURROUGHS, Author of "Tarzan of the Apes."

There are an infinite number of excellent reasons why we should support the Victory Liberty Loan.

The finest sentiments we possess must prompt us to subscribe to this loan even more freely than we did to the others. The government must get money or it would not ask us for it. The man who was prompted to lend in the past through fear that if he did not the Germans might get over here and make it unpleasant for him is mighty "yellow" if he will not subscribe, now that the danger is past.

Our response to previous loans indicated that we were thoroughly in accord with the principles for which we were fighting, and by our response we authorized the expenditure of the sums necessary properly to prosecute the war. These enormous expenses must continue for some time. The obligations involved must not be repudiated. They are our obligations as individuals and we must look upon them as such. It is not only a matter of necessity; it is a matter of personal honor for us to meet these obligations promptly and gladly.

On the other hand, there is in the Victory loan an appeal to our business sense as well as to our patriotism. There is the appeal to self-interest, for the loan is not to be without profit to us. We are given an opportunity to invest in an absolutely safe security, and we will receive a good rate of interest. As a business proposition no man can afford not to subscribe to the full limit of his ability.

And there is another reason why we should subscribe every cent that we can rake and scrape together. It is this: If the government cannot raise the necessary funds by the sale of Liberty bonds, it must do it by direct taxation. The government has the power to tax us to meet these obligations, and if we are taxed we not only will get no interest but we will never get the principal back again.

It seems to me that both the wisdom and necessity for fully and immediately subscribing this Fifth Liberty Loan must be obvious to anyone whose mentality is greater than that of a child of ten. We are supposed to be an intelligent people, capable of governing ourselves and others. We pride ourselves upon our business acumen, upon our energy and upon our patriotism. In the Victory Liberty Loan we shall have an opportunity to prove to the world that we are better than vain boasters, and that we are fully deserving of the estimate which we have placed upon ourselves as a people.

The time is here. The opportunity is here. The eyes of the world are upon us—upon you. What the world shall think of us depends not upon the action of others but upon what you do—YOU.

—HELP "FINISH THE JOB."—

To Bring Soldiers Back.

Part of the proceeds of the Victory Liberty Loan are to be used to bring our soldiers and sailors back and restore them to the useful occupations of peace. Every true-blue 100 per cent American should have a part in this work.

—HELP "FINISH THE JOB."—

It's Not Time to Quit.

The Germans, not the Americans, were the quitters, but our work is not finished until we have brought the victors home. Let's finish the job by oversubscribing the Victory Liberty Loan as we did all its predecessors.

Landlord's Experience With Glando

Mr. Haushalter, the well known and energetic proprietor of the Hotel Paulding, Paulding, Ohio, says that for several years he suffered from a sluggish liver, backache and kidney trouble. He felt so drowsy and languid he could scarcely drag. He says: "I tried a number of kidney pills and liver remedies and found no relief until I used Glando, the great gland tonic. It proved to be just what I needed. I am thoroughly convinced I would have been flat on my back if I had not used this treatment; but, instead of being laid up, I am feeling fine and looking after my business every day. If I feel any indication of my old trouble returning, I take a Glando treatment and that sets me right."

Mr. Haushalter was dying of self-poisoning caused by an inactive liver. This weakened the kidneys and other glands of the body. If he had not found a remedy that renewed glandular activity and removed the poison, his life undoubtedly have paid the penalty.

Glando Tonic is the only remedy of its kind on the market and its numerous cures is proof enough of its great value to mankind. It is sold by druggists or will be sent direct by the Gland-Aid Co., Fort Wayne, Ind. Large treatment, $1.00.

A church member does not spite the preacher when he stays away from church or refuses to support the church with his money. The preacher does not look to the individuals of his church for his salary, he looks to the congregation as an organization. One who refuses to support the church is guilty of an unbrotherly act toward his brethren and an affront to the Lord, the head of the church and in the end spites only himself.—Exchange.

SAVE NOW FOR OLD AGE

Where Will You Stand at Sixty-five—What You Do Now Provides for the Future.

Do you want to be dependent on friends, relatives or charity when you are sixty-five years old? If not, get ready to buy Victory Liberty bonds to the utmost of your present ability, and lay them away against old age.

This advice is founded upon the researches of the statisticians employed by the life insurance companies. They have devoted much study to the problem of dependency, and they know. They have found that of one hundred healthy average young men who start out in life at the age of twenty-five years:

Thirty-six will be dead before they reach the age of sixty-five, most of them leaving families unprovided for.

Of the remaining sixty-four men, at the age of sixty-five years:

One will be rich.
Four will be fairly well-to-do.
Five will be supporting themselves by working.
FIFTY-FOUR will be dependent upon friends, relatives or charity.

IF YOU DO NOT WANT TO BE NUMBERED AMONG THE FIFTY-FOUR, FORM THE HABIT OF SAVING AND THRIFT. THE BEST AND SAFEST INVESTMENT FOR YOUR SAVINGS IS IN UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT BONDS.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By REV. P. B. FITZWATER, D. D., Teacher of English Bible in the Moody Bible Institute of Chicago.

(Copyright, 1919, by Western Newspaper Union.)

LESSON FOR APRIL 20

THE RISEN LORD.

LESSON TEXT—Matthew 28:1-10.

GOLDEN TEXT—He is risen, as he said.—Matthew 28:6.

ADDITIONAL MATERIAL—Luke 24; 1 Corinthians 15.

PRIMARY TOPIC—An angel tells about the resurrection of Jesus.

JUNIOR TOPIC—The story of an empty tomb.

INTERMEDIATE TOPIC—The living Christ.

SENIOR AND ADULT TOPIC—The meaning of Christ's resurrection.

I. The Visit of the Women to the Sepulcher (28:1).

They came early to see the sepulcher. Their zeal and love exceeded that of even Peter, James and John. "Women were last at the cross and first at the tomb."

II. The Earthquake (28:4).

This occurred when the glorious angel descended to roll the stone away from the tomb. This work of the angel was not to allow Jesus to escape but to show that the tomb was empty. Christ needed not the help of a glorious angel, for he was raised up by his own power as the seal of his atoning work upon the cross. The open tomb and the angel sitting upon the stone with calm dignity is a picture of God's triumph over the devil, and the terror of the keepers is a sample of what all of Christ's enemies shall one day experience when he comes in glory to reign as king.

III. The Angel's Message to the Women (28:5-7).

1. "Fear not" (v. 5). While the enemies have occasion to fear, those who love the Lord receive good news from the empty tomb. The Lord will not long leave those who follow him, in suspense and dread. The empty tomb puts an end to all doubts and fears. It is the proof that the question of sin is dealt with and that God is satisfied, carrying with it the assurance of eternal victory.

2. "Come see" (v. 6). The angel said that the Lord had risen, and invited the women to see the place where he lay.

3. "Come quickly" (v. 7). The women must see for themselves and then go tell the message. Experience must precede testimony. They were to go quickly to the disciples with the blessed message, with the assurance that the Lord would go before and meet them.

IV. Jesus Meets the Women (28:8-10).

The women rendered instant obedience and were running to bring word to the disciples. Jesus met them on the way. Those who have an experimental knowledge of Christ should speedily go to tell others of it. To all such the Lord will appear and bring joy.

V. What Christ's Resurrection Guarantees to Us (1 Cor. 15).

1. The integrity of the Scriptures (vv. 3, 4). The Old Testament Scriptures told of the advent, death and resurrection of Christ. Christ's resurrection gave the seal of authentication to them. Christ rebuked the disciples on the way to Emmaus for their disbelief of the Scriptures concerning the resurrection (Luke 24:13-26).

2. The reality of the divine person (Rom. 1:4). Jesus claimed to be one with the Father. He predicted his coming forth from the dead (Matt. 16:21). He declared that no one could take his life from him. He had power to lay his life down and take it up again (John 10:15-18). He died because he willed to do so. This life which he laid down must be resumed at the completion of his sacrificial work. His coming forth from the grave proved that he was what he had claimed to be.

3. The sufficiency of Christ's atoning sacrifice (Rom. 4:25). On the cross Christ exclaimed, "It is finished." By the resurrection God declared to the universe that an adequate remedy for sin had been provided. The resurrection of Christ is God's certificate that an adequate sacrifice has been provided for sin.

4. Our life and immortality (1 Cor. 15:20). He is the first fruits of them that slept. "Because I live ye shall live also." The guarantee that man in the integrity of his being spirit, soul and body shall live again is furnished us in Christ's death and resurrection.

Promoting Happiness.

God has given understanding to man, to be employed for his glory in promoting the happiness of his creatures; and in nothing that belongs to earth can the human understanding be more worthily employed than in the researches of science and in the works of invention.—Chief Justice Chase.

Absorbing the Bible.

Reading God's Word is one thing; to look at it in the right light is another. It is like this: A man may see the figures on the dial, but he cannot tell how the day goes unless the sun shines on the dial. So, also, in reading the Bible—unless the spirit shines within our hearts it is likely that we will not get the correct interpretation.

Lord Never Forgets.

"The Lord never forgets anyone because he is little."

Easter Even

THE tempest over and gone, the calm begun.
Lo, "it is finished," and the strong Man sleeps.
All wars keep vigil watching for the sun.
The moon her vigil keeps.

A garden full of silence and of dew
Beside a virgin cave and entrance stone;
Surely a garden full of angels, too,
Wondering, on watch, alone.

They who cry "Holy, holy, holy!" still,
Veiling their faces round God's throne above,
May well keep vigil on this heavenly hill
And cry their cry of love.

Adoring God in his new mystery
Of love more deep than hell, more strong than death,
Until the day break and the shadows flee,
The shaking and the breath.

—Christina G. Rossetti.

Good Reason Why Eggs Hold Place In Easter Feasts

FROM earliest times the egg has been the most significant feature of the Easter feasting. There were roasted eggs on the paschal table. "Pasch" eggs were sent to church to be blessed before being eaten at Easter.

The early Christian church forbade the eating of eggs during Lent, a custom which still obtains in Russia, where not only meat but all the products of the animal kingdom, such as eggs, milk, and cheese, are forbidden during the Lenten abstinence. Only acid rye bread and sour "Kvass" are partaken of by rich and poor alike—the czar and his family took the lead in the long fast. But after the fast comes the feast, and such feasting! Russian Easter dinner parties excel in luxury any elsewhere.

In the old days, when the Easter feast was young, there was not so much knowledge of chemistry and physiology as now. Yet it was instinctively understood that a long fast must not be suddenly broken. In fasting, the body emaciates, and most of the secretions are greatly diminished; and following a fast the most nourishing and digestible foods are required. Instinct taught the ancients to turn at this time of feasting to eggs as a strong aid in replacing the waste of the human body. And it is a very interesting fact that eggs were regarded by the early Church as a blessed food after a fast:

"These blessed eggs have the virtue of sanctifying the entrails of the body, and are to be the first fat or fleshy nourishment they take after the abstinence of Lent."

This ancient ecclesiastical enjoinder apropos of the Easter feast is significant when compared with the modern physiologicil view of the food value of eggs.

GREATEST OF ALL FACTS

Proof of Escape From the Bondage of the Tomb Brings Joy to the Christian.

Those who remember their Bible will easily turn to any of the Gospels, Luke for instance, and find in Chap. 24 that upon the first day of the week (Sunday) the friends came to the sepulcher and found the stone which had been in front of the opening rolled away, and no body in the tomb, and that two angels standing there asked: "Why seek ye the living among the dead? He is not here, but is risen."

This is the outstanding fact to all believing Christians, and never has it come home to them with such moving significance as now, when a short time ago all the world seemed to stand face to face with death and its eternal problem of Life Everlasting.

All Customs Emblematic.

As commemorating the resurrection of Jesus Christ, Easter day is marked in all Christian countries by impressive religious ceremonies and joyous social customs. The latter are too varied to be described here, but all of them, including different forms of the Easter egg custom, are in a way emblematic of the event commemorated.

Pretty Custom of Giving Easter Eggs Is Centuries Old

THE CUSTOM of giving eggs as Easter presents, though very ancient and widely popular in Europe, is comparatively new in this country. It has had remarkable developments within the last few years.

Thus, an American millionaire gave his small son a pony carriage made in the shape of an egg, on wheels, covered on the outside with white lacquer and lined on the inside with white satin.

A South African diamond king not long ago had an Easter egg made to hold the trousseau of his bride. It was nine feet long.

Not less extraordinary was an Easter egg made by a Paris establishment for a Spanish infanta. Though of no great size, it cost $4,000, being of white enamel and containing a mechanical bird that sang a dozen songs from popular operas.

Confectioners in American cities at Easter time sell immense numbers of candy eggs, as well as egg-shaped boxes, satin-covered or otherwise designed, for holding bonbons.

Eggs of silver and gold are made to contain gifts; and the jewelers offer beautiful jewel boxes shaped like eggs, for Easter presents, some of them ornamented with precious stones.

The ornamentation of Easter eggs with elaborate designs and figures of saints was an important branch of art in the monasteries of the middle ages. These were real eggs, and after being blessed, were eaten on Easter Sunday.

The ancient Egyptian looked upon the egg as a symbol of the creation. Among the Israelites of old it was regarded as emblematic of their emergence from bondage. The Christians adopted it was symbolic of the Resurrection.

THE EASTER LILY.

When Easter bells began to ring
And Easter day arose
An angel found beside the church
A wreath of winter snows.
The April sun had failed to melt
The tiny drift away,
And, sparkling coldly in the light,
Still frozen hard it lay.

The angel took the frosty flakes,
And tenderly he wrought,
With loving care and patience rare,
The blossom of his thought.
Each perfect petal grew apace,
And last of all, behold,
He fashioned, full of rich perfume,
A heart of gleaming gold.

With dreams of shining robes he worked
And golden gates ajar
And shaped the fair and finished flower
In memory of a star;
Then, gliding in the ancient church,
Where all was dark and stilly,
Upon the crimson altar cloth
He laid the Easter lily.

Easter Eggs of Flowers.

Today not only the size of the Easter egg, but also the value of its contents play an important part, at least in America. Thus, it is not rare that an insignificant looking chocolate egg contains as a precious surprise the costliest jewels, such as earrings, bracelets, etc. Not long ago the pretty fashion came in vogue of making Easter eggs of flowers, so arranged as to reproduce exactly the oval form of the egg. For this purpose violets and roses are commonly used, but in recent times orchids are being preferred, especially in England. Thus, a few years ago a London florist got an order for an Easter egg of orchids, costing no less than $1,000.

One of the girls began to laugh. "Little things is right!" she exclaimed. "Cooties, and rats and mice! You know," she turned to me, "our billets are usually pretty old places, and they were full of—about everything. I remember one night I was sleeping with one of the girls and she said to me, all of a sudden: 'Is that your foot that I feel?' I jumped. 'I was just going to ask you the same thing' I answered. 'We'd better get out the flashlight!' And when we did we found that there was a big rat in bed with us—under the covers—"

"Shells, and wounded men, and doughnuts, and rats—under the covers!" I exclaimed.

"And mud up to their knees, and gas attacks," finished another voice, the voice of a man who had been reading silently in one corner of the room. Scene—The dressing room of a Broadway restaurant at the dinner hour. And both were excited, for evidently things had been happening at home.

Said Rose and Black: "Those chumps told ma that I hadn't been working there for six weeks. There was an awful row at home when she found out."

Her companion sneered complacently: "Well, I never tell my mother anything. My job's my own business. What's the use? They don't seem to understand that times have changed. You can't live in New York like they did in the backwoods when they were young. If they think I'm going to slave in an office at twelve a week and never go out at night and then marry someone who means the Bronx and three rooms they have another guess coming. Not for me."

FORM OF VICTORY LOAN ANNOUNCED

Calls for Four and a Half Billion, Says Secretary Glass.

4 3-4 AND 3 3-4 PER CENT

Seventh District's Quota Is $652,500,000—New York's Largest, With $1,350,000,000—There Will Be No Heavy Subscriptions.

Washington, April 14.—Terms of the Victory loan, the last of the Liberty issues, are announced in final form by Secretary of the Treasury Glass. The issuance, starting April 21, will take the form of gold notes which mature in four years and may be redeemed at the option of the government at par and accrued interest after three years.

The secretary calls upon the nation to subscribe a total of $4,500,000,000 which, with the heavy federal tax collections for 1918, has been found ample to meet the treasury's needs to its fiscal year ending June 30.

Two Classes of Notes.

Two classes of notes will be issued. One, subject to all taxation with the exception of the normal income tax, state or local taxes, will bear 4¾ per cent interest. This is an increase of one-half of 1 per cent per annum over the rate borne by the third and fourth loans.

The second note will bear interest at the rate of 3¾ per cent and will be exempt from all taxation, with the exception of estate and inheritance taxes. Both issues are convertible, one into the other, at any time prior to maturity.

The size of the loan is a surprising feature, as it has been generally conceded the government would ask for not less than $6,000,000,000. Also, the maturity is shorter than expected. It was thought the issuance would be in the form of five-year notes.

Oversubscription Is Barred.

There will be no heavy oversubscription to the Victory loan, as Secretary Glass announces no oversubscription will be accepted by the government. However, all subscriptions up to $10,000 will be allotted in full.

On the Liberty issues, with the exception of the first, the treasury has accepted all oversubscriptions.

The pro rata allotment of the Chicago federal reserve district is $625,500,000. This compares with a quota of $870,000,000 on the fourth loan, to which the district returned total subscriptions of $969,000,000.

Twelve District Quotas.

The percentage quotas of the twelve federal reserve districts, and the amount of the Victory loan they will be asked to absorb follow:

	Pct. of total.	Amount.
Chicago	14.5	$ 652,500,000
New York	30	1,350,000,000
Cleveland	10	450,000,000
Boston	8.33 1-3	375,000,000
Philadelphia	8.33 1-3	375,000,000
San Francisco	6.7	301,500,000
Richmond	4.66 2-3	210,000,000
St. Louis	4.33 1-3	195,000,000
Kansas City	4.33 1-3	195,000,000
Minneapolis	3.5	157,500,000
Atlanta	3.2	144,000,000
Dallas	2.1	94,500,000
Totals	100	$4,500,000,000

Chicago and Cook county will have a quota of $189,225,000 of the seventh district's allotment.

Illinois outside of Cook county will be called upon to subscribe $84,825,000.

Iowa's quota is $110,925,000; Michigan's, $110,925,000; Indiana, $81,562,500, and Wisconsin, $75,037,500.

WOULD FIGHT THE PRUSSIANS

Bavarian Foreign Minister Issues Statement on the Position of His Government.

Berlin, April 14.—"If Prussia sends soldiers against Bavaria there will be a general strike in Prussia," said Frank Lipp, foreign minister in the new government at Munich, according to a dispatch from that city.

"Wuerttemberg is forming an alliance with Bavaria against Prussia," added Minister Lipp.

"In Brunswick strikers attacked government troops, demanding recognition of the Russian soviet government, the retirement of Ebert, Scheidemann, Lansberg and Noske, abolition of militarism, dissolution of the national assembly and the creation of a revolutionary army.

The anti-Semitic movement is growing.

The peasant leader Guaderfer is quoted as saying: "The peasants are against bolshevism. They want work, food, peace and raw materials."

HANSON TO TOUR COUNTRY

Seattle Mayor Accepts Government's Bid to Speak for the Liberty Loan.

San Francisco, April 14.—Mayor Ole Hanson of Seattle will accept a government invitation for a coast-to-coast speaking tour in behalf of the Victory loan, he announced. Mayor Hanson said his subject would be "Americanization." "In my address I will attack any plan of pandering to or conciliating anarchists," he said. "This class must be crushed, as they were recently in Seattle in the attempt they made at revolution."

FEASTS ON SWEET CAKE

Richmond, Ind., Woman Tells How Pepgen Made It Possible for Her to Satisfy Appetite.

"I am certainly feasting on sweet cakes," says Mrs. Gertrude Holspeter, 804 N. 14th street, Richmond, Ind. "I guess I enjoy that kind of food more than most people, because for a long time I was unable to eat anything of a sweet nature. I had a severe case of nervous dyspepsia, which Pepgen relieved and thus made it possible for me to eat anything.

Mrs. Gertrude Holspeter.

"Before I took Pepgen I was compelled to live on liquid foods, and even then I had pains in my stomach that were almost unbearable. I often had to go to bed and be attended by a nurse. Scores of people in Richmond are taking Pepgen and our daily newspapers contain the names of many prominent citizens who indorse it."

"It says '3430 Measles.'"

Little Things Cost.

The reason so many Americans have not been thrifty was because they failed to appreciate the power of little things. It is yielding to the little impulses to spend small amounts foolishly that keeps many a family hard up from one year's end to another.

Pre-War Days.

It is altogether a good sign that we seem to be making so great a catchword of "pre-war?" says London Daily News. Whenever it is desired to say that anything is going on well or comfortably, or easily, if an entertainment is brilliant or a sale successful, it is described at once as "quite up to pre-war standard."

And yet are we not supposed to have entered on a new ideal in which post-war will be a much greater thing than pre-war?

Taken To County Jail

For the third time, Morris Lothamer, an aged farmer of Concord township, is to be committed to the state hospital for the insane.

Mr. Lothamer is now seventy-one years old. At an inquest held December 22, 1913, he was found to be insane. He had become violent wanting to kill whatever he chanced to meet or see, and he was dangerous. It was thought probable his trouble had been brought on by a heat stroke years ago and a fall from a tree.

Mr. Lothamer was committed to the asylum December 27, 1913. Having improved, he was discharged September 29, 1914. The following month he again became violent and it was found necessary to send him back to the insane hospital.

After more than two years, he was discharged for the second time on December 30, 1916 For over two years he was peaceable and lived at home with his wife and son. Recently he again manifested that his mind had weakened and he became so violent that Sheriff Baltz, at the request of the family, again put him in the county jail to await recommitment to the asylum.

RUN THE HOUSEHOLD ON BUDGET SYSTEM

Keep Careful Accounts and Divide Family Income Wisely—Suggestions for Various Salaries.

A budget is absolutely necessary to the wise and well-proportioned running of a household. No budget can be made to fit all families, even families of similar size, locality, etc., but the well-proportioned budget provides a fair financial basis, a starting point from which to begin the work of wisely dividing the family income.

The main thing is to get the budget started, to keep careful accounts—in a way that will permit analyzation of expenditures—for at least several months; a year, if possible. Many people keep accounts, personal and household, only in a way that balances cash and shows how it has been generally expended. A budget should do better than that.

An exact budget is difficult to provide at present, with all living prices in a state of flux but with a prevailing upward tendency. Figures differ greatly in various sections of the country, frequently in various sections of the same state. But in strictly industrial centers, it has been authentically computed, food usually consumes about 43 per cent of the ordinary income, shelter 18 per cent, fuel and light 6 per cent, and the various "sundries" so grouped because so difficult of more exact classification, 20 per cent. In the following suggestive budgets for varying incomes the "saving" item has been placed first as most necessary where the family income is not too large and is practically inelastic. This item may include life insurance, savings bank accounts and such inevitable income-bearing governmental securities absolutely necessary with the kind of incomes noted—as Liberty Bonds and War Savings Stamps.

Expenditure Budgets.

Annual Income $1,800.

	Yearly	Monthly
Saving	$ 102.00	8.50
Shelter	360.00	30.00
Fuel and light	190.00	15.00
Food and service	720.00	60.00

For the initial preparation of a budget household co-operation must be obtained. The exact disposal of certain larger items, such as rent, fuel, food, must be decided, plans only changed thereafter when proven impracticable as at first arranged. A full account of personal and household expenditures should be kept for future reference and possible budget readjustments. Fairly, justly tried, the budget system will lift many a family from a financial Slough of Despond to sunshiny financial heights.

America's Immortals

Most striking instances of gallantry for which the Distinguished Service Cross has been awarded

The cold language of the official records cannot conceal the thrill that is to be found in every line of each of the little stories that appear below. These stories describe in plain, matter-of-fact language feats of the most unusual heroism performed by members of the American army in France. They are the most notable of thousands of cases of exceptional bravery for which the Distinguished Service Cross was awarded on recommendation of General Pershing.

JOHN C. LATHAM,
Sergeant, M. G. Co., 107th Infantry.

Sergt. Latham was decorated for conspicuous gallantry in action near Le Catelet, France, September 29, 1918. Becoming separated from their platoon by a smoke barrage, Sergt. Latham, Sergt. Alan L. Eggers and Corp. Thomas F. O'Shea took cover in a shell hole well within the enemy's lines. Upon hearing a call for help from an American tank, which had become disabled thirty yards from them, these three soldiers left their shelter and started toward the tank under heavy fire from German machine guns and trench mortars. In crossing the fire-swept area, Corp. O'Shea was mortally wounded, but his companions, undeterred, proceeded to the tank, rescued a wounded officer and assisted two wounded soldiers to cover in the sap of a nearby trench. Sergt. Latham and Sergt. Eggers then returned to the tank in the face of the violent fire, dismounted a Hotchkiss gun and took it back to where the wounded men were, keeping off the enemy all day by effective use of the gun, and later bringing it, with the wounded men, back to our lines, under cover of darkness. His home address is Knotts View, Windermere, Westmoreland, England.

CHARLES W. WHITTLESEY,
Major, 308th Infantry.

Major Whittlesey, the hero of the "go to hell" refusal to surrender, was decorated for conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity in action with the enemy northeast of Binarville, in the Forest d'Argonne, France, October 2-7, 1918. Although cut off for five days from the remainder of his division, Major Whittlesey maintained his position which he had reached under orders received for an advance and held together his command, consisting originally of 463 officers and men of the 308th infantry and Company K of the 307th infantry, in the face of a superior number of the enemy during the five days. Major Whittlesey and his command were thus cut off and no rations or other supplies reached him in spite of determined efforts which were made by his division. On the fourth day Major Whittlesey received from the enemy a written proposition to surrender which he treated with contempt, although he was at that time out of rations and had suffered a loss of about 50 per cent of killed and wounded of his command and was surrounded by the enemy. His home is in Pittsfield, Mass.

GRANNIS I. SYVERSON,
Private, Company C, Sixth Machine Gun Battalion, U. S. M. C.

Private Syverson was awarded the Distinguished Service Cross for extraordinary heroism in action near St. Etienne, France, October 3, 1918. When our advance infantry was forced to withdraw, Private Syverson's machine gun crew refused to withdraw, but calmly set up their machine gun. The gun was upset by a bursting hand grenade, which also injured two members of the squad. Despite these injuries they immediately reset the gun and opened fire on the advancing Germans when twenty feet distant, causing the Germans to break and retreat in disorder. Private Syverson's home address is 1208 Sullivan street, Seattle, Wash.

HENRY W. PHILBLAD,
Corporal, 78th Co., 6th Regiment, U. S. M. C.

Corporal Philblad (deceased) was decorated for conspicuous gallantry in action at Blanc Mont, France, October 3, 1918. Corporal Philblad advanced alone on two machine gun nests, which he captured, killing several of the crew with his pistol. Two hours later he again went forward with two other soldiers and was attacking another machine gun nest when he was killed by shrapnel. His home was in Knoxville, Ill.

YOUMAN Z. WEEKS,
Corporal, Company F, 119th Infantry.

Corp. Weeks was decorated for extraordinary heroism in action near Belleourt, France, September 30 and October 8, 1918. Corp. Weeks, on the morning of September 30, when two enemy machine guns were making a part of the line untenable, advanced across open ground upon one of these guns, rushed the position alone, captured the gun and five of the enemy and shot down the sixth, who endeavored to escape. By this gallant act, Corp. Weeks prevented the enemy from enfilading our position and thereby saved the lives of many of his comrades. In a later advance while leading his men in an attack upon an enemy machine gun nest, Corp. Weeks was killed. His home was at Colleton, S. C.

FREDERICK M. LINTON,
First Lieutenant, 104th Infantry.

Conspicuous gallantry in action near Marcheville, France, September 25 and 26, won the Distinguished Service Cross for Lieutenant Linton. He volunteered and carried a message from his line to the rear at a time when a heavy barrage and terrific machine gun fire of the enemy had made access almost impossible. When returning he brought up with him a platoon of re-enforcements, and led them through the bombarded area. Knowing that the town of Marcheville was in the hands of the enemy, he unhesitatingly assumed the command of a patrol, and led it in a counter-attack against the town, recapturing it, and after being wounded retained control and held his ground until his platoon was rescued under cover of darkness. It was while defending his position that he received a second and fatal wound.

WILLIS P. SNYDER,
Private, Company D, 150th M. G. B.

Private Snyder won the Distinguished Service Cross for conspicuous bravery in action near Reims, France, July 15, 1918. After all the other members of his detachment had become casualties while defending a position in front of an infantry company, Private Snyder continued to operate a machine gun alone against an attacking party of Prussian Guards, and succeeded in driving them off. He then returned to our lines, attempting to carry back his wounded comrade with him, until he was himself wounded. Private Snyder's home is with his mother, Mrs. Kate Snyder, 1237 Cotton street, Reading, Pa.

WILLIAM SAWELSON,
Sergeant, Company M, 312th Infantry.

Sergt. Sawelson, whose home was at Harrison, N. J., was killed while seeking to aid a wounded comrade at Gram-Pre, France, October 26, 1918. He was awarded the Distinguished Service Cross. Hearing a wounded man in a shell hole some distance away calling for water, Sergt. Sawelson, upon his own initiative, left shelter and crawled through heavy machine gun fire to where the man lay, giving him what water he had in his canteen. He then went back to his own shell hole, obtained more water and was returning to the wounded man, when he was killed by a machine gun bullet.

ANIELLO SPAMANATO,
Private, Company L, 357th Infantry.

Private Spamanato was decorated for conspicuous gallantry in action near Montfaucon, France, October 25, 1918. Private Spamanato was on patrol with three other soldiers when they were fired upon by a hostile machine gun fifty yards in advance of the line. After several hand grenades had been thrown at the machine gun nest, one of the crew was seen crawling away. Private Spamanato killed this man with his rifle and then rushed the nest alone, capturing the gun and the three surviving members of the crew, two others having been killed by the grenades. Private Spamanato's wife lives in Semitile province, Caserte, Italy.

HENRY S. BOGAN,
Sergeant, 78th Co., Sixth Regiment, U. S. M. C.

For extraordinary heroism in action near Blanc Mont, France, October 3, 1918, Sergt. Bogan was awarded a Bar, to be worn with the Distinguished Service Cross that had previously been awarded to him. During the attack on Blanc Mont, Sergt. Bogan, without aid, captured three machine gun nests, and after being wounded took thirty prisoners. He himself escorted these prisoners to the rear rather than have the line weakened by taking men for this duty. His home is with his mother, Mrs. Sallie Bogan, Franklin, Ky.

JOHN H. PRUITT,
Corporal, 78th Company, 6th Regiment, U. S. M. C.

Corp. Pruitt, whose home was with his mother, Mrs. Belle Pruitt, Ray, Ariz., was decorated for conspicuous gallantry in action with the enemy at Blanc Mont Ridge, France, October 3, 1918. Corp. Pruitt, single-handed, attacked two machine guns, capturing them and killing two of the enemy. He then captured forty prisoners in a dugout near by. This gallant soldier was killed soon afterward by shell fire while he was sniping the enemy.

JAMES EARNEST KARNES,
Sergeant, Company D, 117th Infantry.

Sergt. Karnes, whose home is with his mother, Mrs. Emily Karnes, 2501 North Broadway, Knoxville, Tenn., was decorated for extraordinary heroism in action near Estrees, France, October 8, 1918. During an advance, Sergt. Karnes' company was held up by a machine gun, which was enfilading the lines. Accompanied by another member of his company, he advanced against this position and succeded in reducing the nest by killing three and capturing seven of the enemy and their guns.

MORE BEEKEEPERS NOT NECESSARY FOR INCREASED PRODUCTION OF HONEY CROP

Make Room—Room for Bee Broods, Room for Honey.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

For increased production of honey it is not necessary to have more beekeepers. It is necessary only for those beekeepers the country now has to improve their knowledge of honey production and to devote themselves more seriously to the care of their bees, say experts of the United States department of agriculture. Statistics show that the annual average yield of surplus honey to the colony is exceedingly low, and when compared with the averages of the better beekeepers it is inexcusably low and indicates unsatisfactory management due to neglect or to ignorance.

A casual survey of beekeeping practices makes it evident that the greatest cause of this low production is lack of care during the critical periods of the year. Broadly, the beekeeping year may be divided into two distinct periods—the period of preparation for the honey flow and the period of the honey flow. During each the problems are different and may be clearly defined. Usually there is only one period of preparation, which begins at the end of the honey flow in the fall and lasts until the main honey flow the succeeding year. "However, where there is more than one main honey flow, there is a period of preparation of varying length between each one. The beekeeping problem is the same, however, and it consists in securing a colony overflowing with bees ready for the field when the honey flow starts.

Must Be Ready for Work.

In the North this problem is called wintering, and to the average beekeeper the chief concern is to care for each colony of bees so that it will be in condition to pass successfully through the winter period. This, however, is but a small and easy part of the problem. Bringing bees through the winter will not in itself accomplish the main object of the preparation period, that of securing a colony overflowing with bees at the time of the honey flow. In a large measure the strength of the colony is a direct gauge of the amount of surplus secured and it is to the beekeeper's advantage to do everything which will in any way favor rapid brood rearing during the two months previous to the main flow. This means not only that bees must be wintered, but they must be in such condition in the fall that spring will find them ready and able to undertake this tremendous increase in population.

It will be seen, therefore, that the preparation of bees for the harvest begins not when winter threatens, but immediately after the last main honey flow and continues to the beginning of the first main flow the succeeding year. It is imperative that during all this period each colony have stores in advance of its needs at all times, room for brood rearing and protection from low temperatures and winds. These things are discussed in the bee publications of the United States department of agriculture.

Swarming Must Be Stopped.

Toward the beginning of the main honey flow the problem changes. It is now essential that each colony be prevented from reducing its working force by swarming and that its instinct to store and gather honey be kept dominant. During the period of preparation, the instincts of the bees are in harmony with the desires of the beekeeper, but during the swarming season the instincts of the bee are directly opposed to his interests. Any breaking up of the colony and reduction of the working force by swarming brings a corresponding reduction in the amount of surplus which may be obtained from that colony. Therefore it is to the beekeeper's advantage to prevent swarming in every possible way, and if swarming still occurs, to care for the swarms so that as much as possible of the original large working force may be kept together and may be kept storing honey.

Space an Essential.

The improper understanding of these problems no doubt causes the loss of more honey and has more to do with the low average production than any other factor, specialists believe. The study of these problems is important for those who wish to keep bees commercially, and much information may be obtained concerning them from the bee publications of the department of agriculture. The usual methods of swarm prevention are concerned to a large extent with the supplying of room—room for brood rearing and room for the storing of surplus honey. This is fundamental. Many beekeepers fail to supply enough room for these purposes, and probably no beekeeper supplies too much. During the period of rapid brood rearing, crowded conditions quickly result if a single hive body is all that the colony has in which to develop. If headed by a good vigorous queen a normal colony needs at least two ten-frame hive bodies for brood rearing alone, and during the honey flow the supplying of four or five supers furnishes none too much space for nectar storage and the ripening of honey.

As rapidly as the bees begin working readily in one super, another should be added below the first. In the same way a third super may be supplied. As a rule the super nearest completion is farthest from the brood nest, and the one in which the least has been stored is nearest the brood nest. Toward the end of the flow, increase in storage space is not desirable, and the bees are left to fill entirely what supers they have and to ripen the honey completely. If too much space has been supplied, some of the supers may be removed. The close of the flow marks the beginning of another period of preparation, and if winter is at hand the cycle of the year is complete.

TO KEEP PERMANENT PASTURES STOCKED

Hogs Relish Grasses When the Leaves Are Young.

Good Plan to Have Some Other Stock Eat Coarser Plants—Safe to Graze Shotes at Rate of Ten to Fifteen to Acre.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Hogs do not relish grasses except when the leaves are young and tender. Hence it is necessary, for the best results, to keep permanent pastures well stocked. It is usually advisable to have some other stock in the pastures with the hogs to eat the coarser plants. Cattle are best suited for this purpose. Mowing the pasture in late spring should be practiced if the plants become too far advanced.

In most cases it is advisable to have some of the best supplementary forage crops to graze in addition to the pasture. A safe rule is to have at least one acre of good permanent pasture to each brood sow kept. Of course this acreage could be reduced or the number of hogs increased where a complete succession of supplementary forage crops is raised or where the land is very productive. A greater area should be allowed if the grazing is poor.

The carrying capacity of the various supplementary forage crops varies widely, according to the growth of the crop. As a rule it is safe to graze them at the rate of ten to fifteen 100-pound shotes to the acre. A greater number will shorten the grazing period, and fewer animals will lengthen it.

WOMEN IN BUREAUS

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

In more than two-thirds of the states the farm bureaus now include women as well as men in their membership. Boys and girls also have their place in the county organization. As a consequence women are taking an increased interest in community work. Committees and bureaus which have the benefit of feminine as well as masculine judgment on farm questions have a basis for a broader viewpoint than do those composed of men only. The men are said to heartily approve having the bureaus open to their sisters and wives, and in many instances they seem to be even more enthusiastic than their wives are about women joining.

GENERAL FARM NOTES

Both clover hay and cull beans are foods rich in protein.

Grow higher crop yields per acre; use more fertilizer and better tillage.

Have a productive orchard, a year around garden, laying hens and good cows.

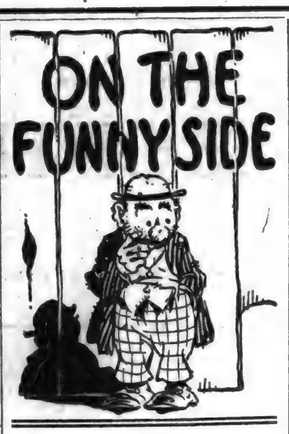
Root crops, especially turnips, are valuable for clearing the land of weeds.

ON THE FUNNY SIDE



Obscurity.

"Such is fame!"

"How now?"

"The author of a 'best seller' is unknown to people living in the adjoining apartment house."

"That's nothing. We have among our citizens an entomologist of world-wide reputation and there isn't a taxicab chauffeur or a policeman on the force who can direct visiting savants to his residence."

A Reasonable Lament.

A meek little man had sat patiently in the family flivver for two hours, waiting for his wife to come out of the dressmaker's shop.

"Of course, I wouldn't wish Maria to think I didn't want to wait for her, but I do wish she would get out in time to wear her new dress before it goes out of style.

A Virgin Field.

"Is it true that poets sometimes receive $300 from a magazine for a single sonnet?" asked Songerleigh.

"It is so stated on good authority."

"Then I'll have to revise my touch system."

"Your touch system?"

"Yes. It never occurred to me that I might be able to borrow money from a poet."

Could Charge Bigger Fee.

"I guess that young doctor hasn't been practicing long."

"Why do you think that?"

"He told a friend of mine he was suffering from 'loss of appetite,' whereas an older doctor would have called it 'anorexia.'"

HABILIMENTS OF HUMANITY.

"There is no reason for putting on sackcloth and ashes."

"Not exactly. But just the same I'm wearing mended clothes and tending my furnace."

Touch and Go.

Anent the saying, "Touch and go,"
You've noticed, I'll be bound,
That when a fellow makes a touch
He doesn't hang around.

A Sad Prediction.

Fortune Teller—You are going to be visited by a dark lady.

Female Patron—Visited? Oh, dear! And I thought the new cook I hired at the intelligence office this afternoon looked like a stayer.

Some Guess.

"Bill broke his word to his wife not to drink, and now he is going home a maudlin moving picture of woe."

"I wonder how many reels it will take to get him there?"

Case at Home.

"I see some scientists are going to India to study suspended animation."

"These scientists are impractical. Why go to India before having a look at my hired man?"

Its Sort.

"My wife thinks it a joke to send me up to the third story to get her a cushion."

"That kind of a joke is far-fetched."

Appropriate Place.

"What did they do with the clever forger when they caught him?"

"Naturally, they sent him to the 'pen.'"

A Calculation.

"Your speeding automobile actually skipped by the traffic officer."

"Yes, you see, I argued a skip in time saves fine."

A Good Thing.

"That Miss Swift has completely lost her head over Fenn."

"Well, that's good for Fenn. If she lands him he'll save a lot of money on hats."

Advice Worth While.

"You must follow my advice, Mr. Poorly," said the great specialist. "You must stop worrying. If anything comes to worry you, cast it aside; forget it."

"Thanks so much, doctor," said his patient, wringing the doctor's honest palm, "I'll bear this in mind when your bill comes."

Paradoxical Trouble.

"Smith is very much cut up."

"Why?"

"Because his salary is very much cut down."

ALL MUST BE FED

Practically Every European Country Short of Foodstuffs.

Agriculturists on This Side of the Water Are Called on to Save the World From Starvation—Western Canada's Great Opportunity.

Considerable discussion is taking place in the papers as to the amount of money that the United States will have to pay for its guarantee of the price of wheat for 1919. The indications at present are that the treasury will not be affected. Instead of wheat going down the outlook now is that it will go considerably above the present guarantee. It is not only the opinion of a man of the experience of Mr. Hoover that gives weight to this assumption, but we have the glaring fact that there will be more mouths to feed for this year, and the next year or so, than there were in 1918, and the quantity of food will be little, if any, greater.

The assumption is based on the fact that Germany, Austria and Poland, and others of the fighting nations, unable to secure food enough in the past two or three years, and still unable to supply it within themselves, will require to be fed. The food can now be taken to them. For some time the soldier will require to be fed; Italy will have its demands. There will be additional shipping, some of which will be needed for requirements of India, but it will also make ocean transport easier. Mr. Hoover is possibly better acquainted than any other individual observer with both the world's food needs and its prospects of supplying them.

He is naturally very closely in touch with conditions on this continent and his position as virtual dictator of the distribution of American-grown food in Europe has given him a possibly unique insight into European needs.

Mr. Hoover says there will be no surplus from the 1918 crop to carry over into 1919. Even under normal conditions this would be a sufficiently precarious situation, for there naturally never is any possible guarantee that one or more of the great wheat-producing countries in Europe may not experience a crop failure. Under present conditions, however, such lack of surplus is distinctly dangerous, for the very European nations upon which that continent could normally rely for the great bulk of its wheat, that is to say Russia, Bulgaria, Serbia and Roumania, will for obvious reasons be unable to supply their own demands for the coming year. In addition to this, Mr. Hoover points out that famine in India will call for a substantial proportion of the Australian surplus, and that, moreover, a considerable part of the Australian supply, which for lack of shipping has been accumulating in that country, has spoiled.

And the demand is by no means only for wheat. Mr. Hoover estimated that he would be able to furnish Germany 100,000 tons of grain during the month of April. But it is asserted that the German stocks of all kinds of grain and of potatoes and other vegetables will surely be exhausted before June.

Mr. Hoover has also expressed the belief that it is questionable whether under the circumstances food enough can be supplied to tide Germany over until the next harvest.

It is quite clear from all this that the world is going to depend more than ever upon this continent to keep the wolf from the door until the war devastated and anarchy-ridden countries in Europe can once again feed themselves. Already we read of the protests of British soldiers occupying Germany against allowing German women and children to perish of starvation as they are beginning to do. If these conditions prevail in Germany what must be the state of affairs elsewhere in Europe among nations which have fought with us during the last four years?

To sum up, it may be stated with confidence that the demand for every product of the farm will be unprecedented, and that the agriculturist will receive the highest prices on record for all that he has to sell.

The duty of Canada, therefore, is to keep up its work of assisting in supplying the need. It can do so. It has the land available at low prices; the market is there; railroad facilities are good, the climate and the soil produce the best wheat in the world. Western Canada offers the opportunity and the unceasing flow of farmers into the country indicates the fact that advantage is being taken of it.—Advertisement.

Ever Try It?

Smith—I understand Jebbs is learning to run a typewriter. What system is he using, the touch system?

Brown—No; he says it's the hunt and poke system; mostly poke.

WOLVES OF THE SEA

Dare He Confide in Anyone? Carlyle Takes a Chance.

Synopsis — Geoffry Carlyle, master of sailing ships at twenty-six, is sentenced to 20 years' servitude in the American colonies for participation in the Monmouth rebellion in England. Among the passengers on board the ship on which he is sent across are Roger Fairfax, wealthy Maryland planter; his niece, Dorothy Fairfax, and Lieutenant Sanches, a Spaniard, who became acquainted with the Fairfaxes in London. Carlyle meets Dorothy, who informs him her uncle has bought his services. Sanches shows himself an enemy of Carlyle. The Fairfax party, now on its own sloop in the Chesapeake bay, encounters a mysterious bark, the Namur of Rotterdam. Carlyle discovers that Sanchez is "Black Sanches," planning to steal the Fairfax gold and abduct Dorothy. He fights Sanches and leaves him for dead. In a battle with Sanches' followers, however, he is overpowered and thrown into the bay. In a desperate effort to save Dorothy, Carlyle decides to swim to the Namur. By a ruse he gets aboard and mingles with the crew. The pirates return to the Namur with Dorothy, the captured gold and Sanches, badly wounded but still alive.

He glanced about warily, lowering his voice until it became a hoarse whisper.

"Three years, mate, and most of that time has been hell. I haven't even been ashore, but once, and that was on an island. These fellows don't put any trust in my kind, nor give them any chance to cut and run. Once in awhile a lad does get away, but most of them are caught; and those that are sure get their punishment. They never try it again. I've seen them staked out on the sand and left to die; that ain't no nice thing to remember."

"But how did you come into it?"

"Like most of the rest. I was second mate of the Ranger, a Glasgow brig. These fellows overhauled us at daybreak about a hundred miles off the east end of Cuba. Our skipper was Scotch, and he put up some fight, but it wasn't any use. There was only three of us left alive when the pirates came aboard. One of these died two days later, and another was washed overboard and drowned down in the Gulf. I am all that is left of the Ranger."

"You saved your life by taking on?"

"Sanches had the two of us, who were able to stand, back in his cabin. He put it to us straight. He said it was up to us whether we signed up or walked the plank; and he didn't appear to care a damn which we chose."

"And you say others of this crew have been obtained in the same manner?" I questioned, deeply interested, and perceiving in this a ray of hope.

"Not exactly—no, I wouldn't precisely say that. It's true, perhaps, that most of the Britishers were forced to join in about the same way I was,

He Glanced About Warily.

and there may be a Scandinavian or two, with a few Dutch, to be counted in that list; but the most are pirates from choice. It's their trade, and they like it. Sanches only aims to keep hold of a few good men, because he has got to have sailors; but most of his crew are nothing but plain cutthroats. Indians and half-breeds, niggers, creoles, Portuguese, Spanish, and every mongrel you ever heard of. Sanches himself is half French. The bellhound who kicked you is a Portuguese, and LeVere is more nigger than anything else. I'll bet there is a hundred rats on board this Namur right now who'd cut your throat for a sovereign, and never so much as think of it again."

"A hundred? Is there that many aboard?"

"A hundred an' thirty all told. Most o' 'em bunk amidships. They're not sailormen, but just cut-throats, an' sea wolves. Yer ought ter see 'em swarm out on deck, like hungry rats, when thar's a fight comin'. It's all they're good fer."

"Watkins," I said soberly, after a pause during which he spat on the dirty deck to thus better express his feelings, "do you mean to say that in three years you've had no chance to escape? No opportunity to get away?"

"Not a chance, mate; no more will you. I know what yer thinkin' 'bout. I had them notions too when I fust come aboard—gettin' all the decent sort tergether, and takin' the vessel. 'Twon't work; thar ain't 'nough who wud risk it, and if thar wus, yer couldn't get 'em tergether. Sanches is too damn smart fer thet. Every damn rat is a spy. I ain't hed no such talk as this afore in six months, Gates; the last time cost me twenty lashes at the mast-butt. What'd yer have in yer mind, mate?"

"Only this, Watkins. I've got to do something, and believe I can trust you—it's not my life I'm thinking about, but that of a woman."

"A woman! Not the one brought aboard last night?"

"Exactly; now listen—I'm going to tell you my story, and ask your help. My name is not Gates, and I am not the man Mendes brought aboard drunk, and who was thrown over the rail by LeVere. That fellow was drowned. I am Geoffry Carlyle, an English skipper."

Thereupon I told him my story in detail. Then I said:

"I have no plan; to become a member of the crew was my only thought. But I must act, if at all, before the captain recovers. He would recognize me at sight. You will aid, advise me?"

"That is easier to ask than answer, mate," he admitted finally. "I am an English seaman, and will do my duty, but, so far as I can see, there is no plan we can make. It is God who will save the girl, if she is to be saved. He may use us to that end, but it is wholly beyond our power to accomplish it alone. The only thing I can do is to sound out the men aboard, and learn just what we can expect of them if any opportunity to act comes. There are not more than a dozen at most to be relied upon. Play your part, and keep quiet. If you can let her know of your presence aboard it might be best—for if she saw you suddenly, unprepared, she might say or do something to betray you. There are other reasons why it may be best for her to know she is not entirely deserted."

He leaned over, motioning me toward him, until his lips were at my ear.

"It may not prove as hopeless as it appears now," he whispered confidentially. "I helped carry Sanches to his stateroom, and washed and dressed his wound. There is no surgeon aboard. He has a bad cut, and is very weak from loss of blood. The question of our success hinges on Pedro Estado. This is a chance he has long been waiting for. The only question is, has he the nerve to act. I doubt if he has alone, but LeVere is with him, and that half-breed would cut the throat of his best friend. You understand?—the death of Sanches would make Estada chief."

"But," I interposed, "in that case what would the crew do?"

"Accept Estada, no doubt; at least the cut-throats would be with him, for he is of their sort. But Sanches's death would save you from discovery, and," his voice still lower, so that I barely distinguished the words, "in the confusion aboard, if we were ready, the Namur might be so disabled as to compel them to run her ashore for repairs. That would give you a chance. If once we reach Porto Grande there is no hope."

A marling-spike pounded on the scuttle, and Haines' voice roared down.

"Port watch! Hustle out, bullies!"

CHAPTER XIII.

I Accept a Proposal.

I went on deck with the watch, and mingled with them forward. A Portuguese boatswain set me at polishing the gun mounted on the forecastle. I was busily at work on this bit of ordnance, when Estado came on deck for a moment. The fellow chanced to observe me.

"You must be a pretty tough bird, Gates," he said roughly, "or I would have killed you last night—I had the mind to."

Something about his voice and manner led me to feel that, in spite of his roughness, he was not in bad humor.

"That would have been a mistake, sir," I answered, straightening up, rag in hand, "for it would have cost you a good seaman. Three years ago I was skipper on my own vessel. The Bombay Castle, London to Hongkong; I wrecked her off Cape Mendes in a fog. I was drunk below, and it cost me my ticket."

"You know West Indian waters?"

"Slightly; I made two voyages to Panama, and one to Havana."

"And speak Spanish?"

"A little bit, sir, as you see; I learn languages easily."

He stared straight into my face, but without uttering another word, turned on his heel and went below. I had finished my labor on the carronade, and was fastening down securely the tarpaulin, when a thin, stoop-shouldered fellow, with a hang-dog face crept up the ladder to the poop, and shuffled over to LeVere.

"Mister LeVere, sir."

"Well, what is it, Gunsaules?"

"Senor Estada, sir; he wishes to see a sailor named Gates in the cabin."

"Who? Gates? Oh, yes, the new man. He swept his eyes about, until he saw me. "Follow the steward below; Senor Estada wishes to see you—go just as you are."

I Waited for the Man to Speak.

"Very good, sir."

The fellow led me away. There was no one in the main cabin. I followed the beckoning steward, who rapped with his knuckles on one of the side doors. Estada's voice answered.

I stepped inside, doubtful enough of what all this might mean, yet quite prepared to accept of any chance it might offer. Estada sat upright in the chair gazing straight at me, his own face clearly revealed in the light from the open port. His face was swarthy, long and thin, with hard, set lips under a long, intensely black mustache, his cheeks strangely crisscrossed by lines. The nose was large, distinctively Roman, yielding him a hawklike appearance, but it was his eyes which fascinated me. They were dark and deeply set, absolute wells of cruelty. I had never before seen such eyes in the face of a human being; they were beastly, devilish; I could feel my blood chill as I looked into their depths, yet I held myself erect and waited for the man to speak. Then his lips curled in what was meant to be a smile. He arose, stepped quietly to the door and glanced out, returning apparently satisfied.

"I don't trust that steward," he said, "nor, as a matter of fact, anyone else wholly." He paused and stared at me, then added: "I've never had any faith in your race, Gates, but am inclined to use you. Every Englishman I ever knew was a liar and a sneaking poltroon. I was brought up to hate the race and always have. I can't say that I like you any better than the others. I don't, for the matter of that. But just now you can be useful to me if you are of that mind. This is a business proposition, and it makes no odds if we hate each other, so the end is gained. How does that sound?"

"Not altogether bad," I admitted. "I have been in some games of chance before."

"I thought as much," eagerly, "and money has the same chink however it be earned. You could use some?"

Carlyle sees a chance to carry through his wild plan to save Dorothy and himself, but there are many pitfalls in the way. The chance is a desperate one. Shall he take it? Carlyle can see but one answer to the question.

Greater London's food bill amounts to more than $20,000,000 a week.

INDIANA State News

Lafayette.—"Do not expect cheaper foodstuffs right away," said Prof. George I. Christie, assistant secretary of agriculture and head of extension work at Purdue university, speaking at a men's meeting at the Central Presbyterian church. A lowering of prices of cereal and meat products, he added, would mean vast waste and demoralize the reconstruction forces, which the government is now striving to mobilize.

Lafayette.—Indiana will produce a bumper crop of apples and peaches this year from present indications, it was announced here at a meeting of the state board of horticulture. The prediction was based on reports from more than 100 fruit growers in various communities. Low temperatures on April 1 and 2 caused practically no damage, it was said. Unless there should be unusually cold weather soon, it is believed the crop will be safe.

Crown Point.—After being out eight hours in a bitter wrangle, the jury in the trial of Alonzo Sargent, the Michigan Central engineer, who slept at his throttle, while his train crashed into the Hagenback-Wallace circus train, disagreed. The instructions went to the jury with a charge of guilty or not guilty of involuntary manslaughter. Sargent's lawyer showed he had been on duty for 24 consecutive hours and that he was suffering from an ailment that superinduced sleepiness.

Lafayette.—In co-operation with Otis Crane, county agricultural agent, the Liberty Rabbit club of this city, which was organized a year and a half ago to increase food production, has started a movement for a state-wide organization of boys and girls' rabbit clubs. It is proposed to organize one in every county and rural community, seventy county agricultural agents throughout Indiana having expressed themselves as in sympathy with the plan and ready to lend active support port.

Washington, D. C.—The United States employment service in its weekly report on unemployment throughout the country, makes the statement that there are 4,000 unemployed men in Indianapolis. This estimate, it is admitted, takes into account the men who prefer unemployment and also the men who are desirous of higher wages than they are offered. The review says the industrial situation in Indianapolis is good and that there is a demand for farm labor in Indiana.

Indianapolis.—Governor Goodrich appointed five of the seven members of the employment commission of Indiana created by the act of the recent legislature to direct the state free employment service and co-operate with this branch of the federal government. Hays H. Buskirk of Bloomington was appointed chairman of the commission and director of the employment service. The other members named are: Louis C. Huesmann of Indianapolis, Charles Greathouse, Indianapolis; Mrs. Arthur T. Cox, East Chicago, and Solon J. Carter, Indianapolis.

Muncie.—Four men were arrested here by federal officers on charges of using the mails for purposes of fraud. It is believed to be the beginning of the rounding up of a gang that is understood to have made Muncie its headquarters and that is alleged to have defrauded wealthy men in all parts of the country of big sums by means of fraudulent land deals, fake prize fights and fake horse races. The men arrested here are L. S. (Doc) Scott, known as a gambler; Hugh McGann, a prize fighter whose real name is Herbert McGinnis; Billy Schober, an alleged gambler, and Joe Engleton. A fifth man, Ross D. McDonald, has been arrested at Carthage, Mo.

Indianapolis.—Of the laws enacted by the recent legislature affecting elections, the most important are those providing a new method of registration, authorizing woman citizens to vote for presidential electors, giving the party that cast the highest vote for secretary of state at the last election first column on the ballot, and amending the absent voters law to apply to city and town elections. In addition to the laws passed several resolutions for constitutional amendments on elections were adopted. These amendments cannot go before the people until they are approved by the next legislature. Under the new registration law, there will be two sessions of registration boards, one the fifty-ninth day, and the other the twenty-ninth day before a general election. Electors may go before the board in person to register, or they may fill out an application and swear to it before a notary, or have it signed by two voters, and send it or mail it to the registration board.

Angola.—Steuben county is the first county in Indiana and probably the entire United States to "go over the top" in the Victory Liberty loan. Whit Wade, state loan director, has announced that the quota of this county, $356,000, has been subscribed by the nine banks in the county.

Evansville.—A big loss in revenue resulting from the Indiana prohibition law is shown in the report of Walter B. Foley, collector of the internal revenue office here, for the month of March. The receipts were only $61,346.46 as compared to $140,000 for the same month last year.

Indianapolis.—L. M. Wright, a member of the old Indiana highway commission, was chosen director of the new state highway commission at the organization meeting here, and Mrs. Helen Freeman was named auditor. David C. Jenkins of Kokomo, another member of the old commission, was named chairman. An engineer will be named at the next meeting of the commission.

Washington, D. C.—The department of labor points out that Indiana was the first of the states to start an "own your own home" campaign. There are 18 cities in the United States in which "own your own home" campaigns are under way or about to start, but the Indiana State Chamber of Commerce is sponsor for the first movement for a campaign to take in every hamlet, village and city in a state, says the department.

Newcastle.—C. L. Burkholder of Purdue university, following an inspection of fruit trees in Henry county, said that prospects were bright for a record peach crop. Isaac Modlin has a peach orchard of 600 trees, which Burkholder says is the finest he had seen in the state. Modlin lost 125 trees because of the severe winter of 1918. Farmers say that freezing weather will not hurt the fruit unless the temperature goes as low as 12 to 15 above.

Petersburg.—The wheat outlook in Pike county is better than it has been in twenty years. The plant covers the ground thicker than ever was known, farmers say. The wheat is jointing, and a freeze at this time would ruin the crop. Clover planted in wheat has an excellent start, and alfalfa fields are two weeks ahead of former years, and the first cutting will be made in late May. Conditions have been favorable, and a large crop of oats is being planted.

Greencastle.—According to an announcement made here by Estes Duncan, a state senator, after a conference with Governor Goodrich, the National road across Indiana will be the first state highway to be improved and the work will be done this year. Putnam county has about twenty-one miles of the roads and it has been estimated it will cost about $30,000 a mile to build it of either brick or concrete, which the governor says will be the material used.

Indianapolis.—Announcement was made that plans practically have been completed for the erection of a $100,000 church building for the First United Brethren church congregation. The new place is expected to be a state center for the three conferences of the church in Indiana. All the modern features of a community service church are included in the plans. It is expected that the building will be completed before the general conference of the United Brethren church with about 5,000 delegates, meets here in the summer of 1921.

Shelbyville.—The last of an issue of Shelby county bonds, known as the George Ray issue, will be paid this month by County Auditor Frank W. Fagel. Five bonds, each for $1,000, are due. They are said to be held by J. F. Wild & Co. of Indianapolis. The total of the issue was $80,000. They were put out by the county April 28, 1899. No records can be found about the courthouse, showing why they were issued or for what purpose. As a result of the bond sales and other matters, a cleanup occurred among county officers and others at that time, which resulted in several receiving prison sentences.

Indianapolis.—An apparent inconsistency between the new state tax law and the law creating a "deficiency fund" to help poor townships to maintain longer school terms than would be possible with only local tuition levies may prevent such townships from receiving state aid for the 1919-1920 term. If the provisions of the two laws cannot be harmonized, there will be about $175,000 in the deficiency fund that cannot be distributed next March, and about $275,000 that might not be distributed in March, 1921. However, since the legislature will meet again in January, 1921, it could remove the inconsistency in time for distribution of the fund in 1921.

Washington, D. C.—A gain of $3,658,000 in income and excess profits collections was noted in the two Indiana internal revenue districts for the first quarter of 1919 over the same period in 1918, according to a statement of the internal revenue commission. The total of collections up to and including March 21, 1919, which included the last day for paying one-quarter of the income and excess profits taxes was $7,448,125 for the Sixth Indiana district and $3,947,580 for the Seventh Indiana district. This was a gain of $1,633,363 for the Sixth district over 1918, and a gain of $2,025,486 for the Seventh district over 1918. The collector of internal revenue reported that a total of $1,001,244,575 had been collected for the first quarter of 1919, indicating that the income and excess profits collections for the year would be more than $4,000,000,000.

Kokomo.—Pledges are being taken whereby every vacant lot owner in Kokomo will build at least one house this summer. A number of new industries have been obtained through the efforts of the Chamber of Commerce.

Evansville.—Indiana's quota for the Victory Liberty loan is $95,454,200. Announcement was made here by Marcus S. Sontag, chairman for the 24 Hoosier counties in the Eighth federal reserve district, that they would be asked to raise $13,891,700. Previously the allotment of the 68 counties in the Seventh federal reserve district had been placed at $81,562,500.

HOW TO AVOID BACKACHE AND NERVOUSNESS

Told by Mrs. Lynch From Own Experience.

Providence, R. I.—"I was all run down in health, was nervous, had headaches, my back ached all the time. I was tired and had no ambition for anything. I had taken a number of medicines which did me no good. One day I read about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and what it had done for women, so I tried it. My nervousness and backache and headaches disappeared. I gained in weight and feel fine, so I can honestly recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to any woman who is suffering as I was."—Mrs. ADELINE B. LYNCH, 100 Plain St., Providence, R. I.

Backache and nervousness are symptoms or nature's warnings, which indicate a functional disturbance or an unhealthy condition which often develops into a more serious ailment.

Women in this condition should not continue to drag along without help, but profit by Mrs. Lynch's experience, and try this famous root and herb remedy, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound—and for special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Med. Co., Lynn, Mass.

GREEN'S AUGUST FLOWER

has been a household remedy all over the civilized world for more than half a century for constipation, intestinal troubles, torpid liver and the generally depressed feeling that accompanies such disorders. It is a most valuable remedy for indigestion or nervous dyspepsia and liver trouble, bringing on headache, coming up of food, palpitation of heart, and many other symptoms. A few doses of August Flower will relieve you. It is a gentle laxative. Ask your druggist. Sold in all civilized countries.—Adv.

Useless to Him.

The town councilors of Mudville had organized a raffle for the benefit of poor Mrs. Muggins, and finally the oldest inhabitant was asked to buy a ticket.

"What for?" asked the ancient one.

"For Mrs. Muggins," replied the agent. "Didn't you hear?"

"Oh, yes, boss, I heerd all right," said the fossil; "but what I want to know is, what am I goin' to do wit Mrs. Muggins if I win 'er?"—Tit-Bits.

GAVE UP

Had Lost Twenty-Five Pounds From Kidney Trouble. Doan's Restored His Health.

J. B. Ragless, carpenter, 210 W. 60th St., Chicago, Ill., says: "My back gave out completely and I had to quit work. I could hardly endure the pain in my back and nights I tossed and turned, unable to sleep. Often in the morning my back was as stiff as a board, so that I couldn't stoop to dress myself. When I did manage to bend over, everything before me turned black. My head seemed to be whirling and sometimes I was so dizzy I had to grasp something to keep from falling. The kidney secretions were irregular in passage, making me up at night and they burned cruelly. I lost my appetite, was weak and listless and went down twenty-five pounds in weight. After I had given up hope, I was persuaded to use Doan's Kidney Pills and they cured me. Soon after, I passed an examination for life insurance and I'm glad to say my cure has lasted."

Why We Must Subscribe for Victory Loan.

For our own selfish good. To make money.

Your money invested in the Victory Liberty Loan is absolutely safe.

The government will repay the money with liberal interest.

When the money is repaid it will buy more goods than now.

Money in the Victory Loan bears lighter taxation than other property.

Government securities stand a better chance than others of going up in price.

As the "buying power of money" increases, "Victory Liberties" will advance.

The sucess of the Victory Liberty Loan will invite prosperity.

The Victory Loan will supply money for Government purchases. The money raised by selling the Loan will get right back into circulation, to pay labor, to keep factories running, mines working, and stores thriving.

Our Government has a big floating debt—estimated at Six Billions by June. This floating debt is mostly "hung up" at the Banks. The Banks need the money, so that they will be able to lend more to storekeepers, farmers, and factory owners. If these people cannot borrow at the banks, how are they going to buy raw materials and pay the workers? The Victory Liberty Loan is expressly intended to raise money to lift this floating debt.

Our Government is spending $5,000,000 a day on the Army and Navy. This means One Billion and a Half every month for the maintenance of the American strength: for the Honor of the American Flag. The Victory Liberty Loan is necessary to supply this money.

Every dollar spent by the Government for war purposes, before, during and after hostilities, was sanctioned by Congress. Our representatives voted the money according to law and it was honestly expended. This brings the responsibility home to every man of us. We must pay the bills. There is no way to do it, except by subscribing for the Victory Liberty Loan.

It is foolish to argue that some of the money from previous loans was wasted. There is waste in everything. All of us waste the crusts of bread. All of us throw away the cigar ends. We waste time when we go to sell goods. We waste strength playing golf. Every human activity involves waste. It is true that some money was spent for airplanes that did not go over seas. Money was spent for ships that did not cross the Atlantic.

BUT, remember this: It was the prodigious spending of the United States for martial preparations that made the enemy sign the armistice.

Remember, that the Victory was won by the tremendous military strength we had in reserve, quite as much as by the men and materials we actually sent overseas.

Hence, even what some people call "waste" helped bring about Peace. And the Victory Liberty Loan must be a success to finish up paying the bills.

Our Government has made contracts running into Billions. All these contracts were made in good faith on both sides. All these contracts were made on the supposition that the war would last several months longer. The manufacturers who entered into contracts for war supplies had to incur expense to be able to carry out their agreements. Our government agreed to pay them. And now it is the solemn duty of the American people to make good these contracts. There is only one way to do it. That is, to Subscribe for the Victory Liberty Loan.

Landlord's Experience With Glando

Mr. Haushalter, the well known and energetic proprietor of the Hotel Paulding, Paulding, Ohio, says that for several years he suffered from a sluggish liver, backache and kidney trouble. He felt so drowsy and languid he could scarcely drag. He says: "I tried a number of kidney pills and liver remedies and found no relief until I used Glando, the great gland tonic. It proved to be just what I needed. I am thoroughly convinced I would have been flat on my back if I had not used this treatment; but, instead of being laid up, I am feeling fine and looking after my business every day. If I feel any indication of my old trouble returning, I take a Glando treatment and that sets me right."

Mr. Haushalter was dying of self-poisoning caused by an inactive liver. This weakened the kidneys and other glands of the body. If he had not found a remedy that renewed glandular activity and removed the poison, his life undoubtedly have paid the penalty.

Glando Tonic is the only remedy of its kind on the market and its numerous cures is proof enough of its great value to mankind. It is sold by druggists or will be sent direct by the Gland-Aid Co., Fort Wayne, Ind. Large treatment, $1.00.

FROM BROTH TO PASTRY

Indianapolis Woman Who Lived on Liquid Foods Now Eats Pie and Pastry as Result of Taking Pepgen.

Mrs. R. C. Scott.

Mrs. Thomas Scott, 551 S. Delaware street, Indianapolis, says: "When I started to take Pepgen I was on the verge of a general breakdown. My stomach was often so bloated that it felt twice its natural size. I couldn't sleep soundly and felt tired and worn out. My digestion was so poor that I was compelled to live on soups, broths and other liquid foods. In a short time after I started taking Pepgen I could eat meat, vegetables, pie and pastry and not suffer afterward. I'm hungry all the time and every meal that I eat seems to taste better than the one before it. I sleep like a tired schoolgirl. Hundreds of people in this city are taking Pepgen and one has but to glance at the Indianapolis newspapers to learn of the results that Pepgen is accomplishing."

Pepgen may be obtained at any first-class drug store.—Adv.

The Man He Was Looking For.

The Sydney Bulletin tells a new story of the shirker caught at his own game. It was a soldier, who said:

"Please, sergeant, may I be excused from church parade? I am an agnostic."

"Don't you believe in the Ten Commandments, then?"

"No, I don't."

"Not even the one about keeping the Sabbath?"

"No."

"Well, you're the very man I've been looking for to scrub out the canteens."

LIFT OFF CORNS!

Doesn't hurt at all and costs only a few cents

Magic! Just drop a little Freezone on that touchy corn, instantly it stops aching, then you lift the corn off with the fingers. Truly! No humbug!

Try Freezone! Your druggist sells a tiny bottle for a few cents, sufficient to rid your feet of every hard corn, soft corn, or corn between the toes, and calluses, without one particle of pain, soreness or irritation. Freezone is the discovery of a noted Cincinnati genius.

Character Main Requisite.

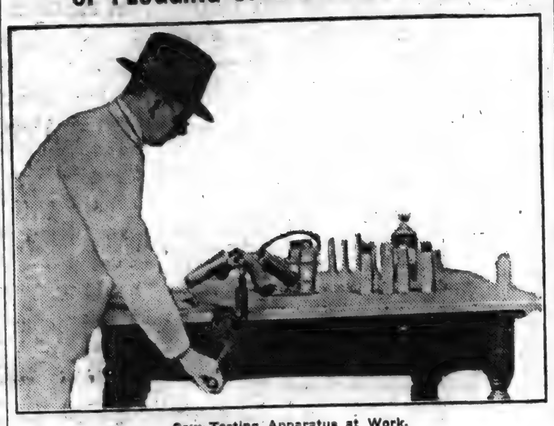
The first requisite of success in business is character, a word which includes temperance, fairness, politeness, industry and as much intelligence as can be accumulated.—E. W. Howe.

It's Clean, Sweep, Wash —The Live Long Day!

When you feel worn out, "tired to death" with the household duties—cooking, scrubbing, cleaning, dusting—(it all comes in the day's work in the household)—turn to the right remedy to strengthen you. The poor woman whose back feels as though it would break, who feels dizzy, whose head aches, or black specks appear before her eyes, all are due to troubles essentially feminine which should be overcome.

The greatest boon to womankind is a temperance tonic made up of herbs, which makes weak women strong and sick women well. This is the "Prescription" of Dr. Pierce, used by him in active practice many years, and now sold by almost every druggist in tablet or liquid form. It has had a half century of successful results in most of the delicate derangements and weaknesses of women. If she's overworked, nervous, or "run-down," she finds new life and strength. Send 10c to Dr. Pierce's Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y., for trial package or write for free confidential medical advice.

TESTING ASSOCIATIONS ARE BEST MEANS OF PLUGGING UP BIG LEAKS IN DAIRYING



Cow Testing Apparatus at Work.

Cow-testing associations are proving to be the means of plugging up one of the biggest leaks in the dairy business. They enable the dairyman to determine definitely the unprofitable cows. Each cow must make a profit over the cost of feed, and this can be determined only by weighing her milk and the feed she consumes. No dairy is better than its average production. If this is too low, the herd is not paying a profit. Business principles must therefore, be applied to lower the cost of milk production, for efficiency is as much of a necessity on the farm as in the factory.

Few men feed their cows in proportion to the quantity of milk produced, say dairy specialists of the United States department of agriculture. With little regard for her needs, feed is put before the cow in plenty if it is cheap and a less quantity if the price is high. The average cow uses about 60 per cent merely to keep her body working, and it is the quantity that is fed above this fixed necessity that furnishes the material for the milk. Some dairymen may say, "I would do all the up-to-date things if I had time." Can the storekeeper afford to run his business without keeping books? Yet that is what many farmers are doing.

Benefits of Cow Testing.

Working in co-operation, dairymen can obtain the benefits of business methods at a very small cost through the organization of cow-testing associations. Increases of from $10 to $15 and in some cases much higher in the annual profits from each dairy cow have resulted from the organization of co-operative cow-testing associations. The expense of membership in these associations, on the other hand, has been only about $1.50 a cow each year. Membership in the organizations, therefore, has been very profitable.

Because of the great and obvious economic advantages arising from the associations, dairy specialists of the United States department of agriculture believe that the organizations are one of the most important factors for the upbuilding and development of the dairy industry in this country. Such an organization consists generally of 20 farmers, living within a radius of a few miles, who co-operate to hire an expert tester to keep accurate accounts of the amounts and cost of feed consumed by each cow in the association, the quantity of milk produced by each and its richness in butterfat. These statistics usually reveal the fact that some cows are not producing enough to pay for their keep, while others are highly profitable. Acting on this information the owner of the cows disposes of the least desirable of his animals and makes up his herd exclusively of those that produce a considerable profit.

Association Testing Cheaper.

The membership of the association is placed at 20 so that the tester can make a complete round each month, devoting one work day to each member, and that he may keep his records on a monthly basis. It has been found by careful experiments that the averages based on monthly tests do not vary more than 2 per cent from the production, as shown by daily observations. Since the tester is an expert, and can make the necessary tests and computations rapidly, and since he can be depended on to make his observations independently of pressure of work on the individual farm, the owners of dairy cows find it cheaper and more satisfactory in many cases to have their testing done through the association than to undertake to do it themselves.

COW-TESTING URGED FOR BEST DAIRYING

Records of Oldest Associations Show Increased Profits.

Members Tell of Larger Production of Butterfat and Saving of Feed Bills—Many Worthless Cows Discovered.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Cow-testing associations pay—and pay well. Who says so? The dairymen who belong say so. Ten years' records from the oldest association in the United States say so. And several years' records from hundreds of associations tell the same story to the dairy division of the United States department of agriculture.

Association members say: "I am making three times as much net profit from 12 cows as I formerly made from 18." "Through the work of the association I have saved one-third of my feed bill." "The association has returned more than 500 per cent on what it has cost me." "I am perfectly astonished at the results. I thought I had a very good herd of butter cows, but have found many of them worse than worthless."

The first cow-testing association in the United States began its work in Newaygo county, Michigan, in 1906.

The average butterfat production for the first year was 215 pounds a cow. It increased the second year to 220 pounds. It rose the third year to 252 pounds. The next year it passed the 280-pound mark, and it has been higher than that every year since. The average production of the last three years was 60 pounds of butterfat above that of the first year. How much the average of the first year exceeded that of the year before the work began is not a matter of record, but doubtless the first year of association work showed some striking gains. Even aside from these, however, and counting only the 60 pounds of butterfat, the gains are still far above the cost of testing.

The estimated average butterfat production of all the dairy cows in the United States is about 160 pounds a year. From 80 yearly summaries of cow-testing associations, including the records of 26,710 cows, their butterfat production averaged 245 pounds a year. This is more than 50 per cent above the country's average production, and a large part of the gain may fairly be attributed to association work.

WHY TESTING IS GOOD

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

There were 858 cow-testing associations operating in the United States July 1, 1918. These associations have an aggregate membership of 9,778 farmers, owning 168,848 cows. The cow-testing association originated in Denmark in 1895, and the first of the organizations in this country was formed in Michigan in 1906. Because of the value of the associations to the dairy industry of the country the United States department of agriculture is stimulating interest in them and is assisting farmers in their organization.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

(By REV. P. B. FITZWATER, D. D., Teacher of English Bible in the Moody Bible Institute of Chicago.)

(Copyright, 1919, by Western Newspaper Union.)

LESSON FOR APRIL 27

THE HOLY SPIRIT OUR HELPER.

LESSON TEXT—John 16:7-15; Acts 2:1-12.

GOLDEN TEXT—If ye then, being evil, know how to give good gifts unto your children, how much more shall your heavenly Father give the Holy Spirit to them that ask him?—Luke 11:13.

DEVOTIONAL READING—Romans 8:9-17, 26, 27.

PRIMARY TOPIC—A Helper at all Times.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Our Unseen Teacher and Helper.

INTERMEDIATE TOPIC—The Fruits of the Spirit.—Gal. 5:22-26.

SENIOR AND ADULT TOPIC—What the Holy Spirit Does for Us.

I. The Holy Spirit Promised (John 16:7-15).

1. Who he is. He is a divine personality, one in nature with the Father and the Son.

2. What is his mission? (vv. 7-15).

(1) The Christian's comforter, (v. 7). The Holy Spirit is Christ's representative who stands by the side of the believer to strengthen, encourage, defend from the enemy and plead his cause before God the Father. Jesus knew and told the disciples of the bitter persecutions which awaited them as soon as he had taken his departure. What a blessed privilege to have the Holy Spirit in and upon us to give wisdom to discern God's will, and power to overcome temptation!

(2) The world's judge (vv. 8-11). Victory is to be achieved by the Spirit working in and through the disciples. (a) He will convict the world of sin (v. 8). The root of all sin is unbelief in Christ (v. 9). This unbelief is not primarily intellectual, but moral. It is an unwillingness to surrender to the divine will (John 3:18, 19). The way the Holy Spirit convicts the world is through the testimony of those who are filled with him. (b) He will convict the world of righteousness (v. 8). This is done through the resurrection and ascension of Christ (v. 10). His coming forth from the grave and ascension into heaven was an indisputable proof that he was what he claimed to be. He is thus shown to be the righteous one whose merit may be appropriated by faith in him. This is ever the way of salvation—conviction of sin and appropriation of the righteousness of Christ. (c) He will convict the world of judgment to come (v. 8). Christ told of a judgment to come. The guarantee of this judgment is that Satan, the prince of the world, was judged at the cross, (v. 11; cf. John 12:31).

(3) The Christian's guide into all truth (vv. 12, 13). The Bible is a spiritual book, therefore if one would know its meaning he must have the Holy Spirit (1 Cor. 2:14).

(4) He glorifies Christ (vv. 14, 15). He does not speak of himself, but in all things reveals Christ. The only way to know the glory of the Son of God is to have the Holy Spirit make it known. He reveals all the divine riches and grace that are in Christ. He makes real unto them the person and work of Christ.

II. The Holy Spirit Given (Acts 2:1-18).

1. Time—Pentecost (v. 1). This was fifty days after the Passover Sabbath (Lev. 23:15).

2. The marks of the Spirit (vv. 2-4). These are external and internal:

(1) External. (a) Sound of a mighty wind; no wind, but merely the sound of wind. For this sound to be heard in the early morn attracted attention and caused the people to gather. The reference to wind suggests the all-pervasive life-giving influence of the Spirit. (b) Tongues of flame. Each of the disciples was crowned with such a tongue. The tongues indicate the practical possession of the Spirit's gifts, and the fire the purifying energy which removes the dross, thus making effective the testimony. (c) Speaking in foreign tongues. For these humble Galileans thus to speak caused great amazement.

(2) Internal. This is seen in the transformation wrought in the disciples. Instead of cowering before a Jewish maid, Peter now boldly stood before the chief rulers of the city and declared them to be guilty of murdering the Son of God.

3. The effect. (vv. 5-13). (1) The multitude assembled in amazement and confusion. They heard the gospel in their native tongues and inquired its meaning. (2) Some mocked and foolishly attempted to account for this remarkable occurrence by accusing the disciples of being drunk.

4. Fulfillment of prophecy (vv. 14-18). Wonderful things had occurred, but Peter knew where to get an explanation. He went to God's Word (Joel 2:28, 29). God had predicted just such marvelous occurrences to take place in the last days.

The Mute and the Smile.

Some men envelop themselves in such an impenetrable cloak of silence that the tongue will afford us no symptoms of the mind. Such taciturnity, indeed, is wise if they are fools, but foolish if they are wise; and the only method to form a judgment of these mutes, is narrowly to observe when, where and how they smile.

Need of Churches.

What some churches need is less broadcloth and more sackcloth.

Making Preparations.

Little Geoffrey had been very disappointed at Christmas time. He had asked Santa Claus for a drum and a whistle, but his father had countermanded the order, as he had no wish to be driven mad with noise.

But things changed later.

"My mother is coming to stay with us," said Geoffrey's mother.

"Oh, is she?" said Geoffrey's father.

Then, turning to the child, he said:

"Look here, sonny, you wanted a drum and a whistle, didn't you? You shall have it tomorrow."

Long-Lost Ring Restored.

A Goodstone (Surrey) lady has just recovered her wedding ring, which disappeared five or six years ago while she was feeding a calf.

It was thought the animal had swallowed the ring, and as it could not be found the calf became known as "the golden cow."

A few days ago the cow was purchased and killed by an Oxford butcher, who, being informed of the lost ring, made a search and discovered the ring embedded in an internal organ. The ring has been restored to the owner.—London Mail.

Allen's Foot-Ease For the Feet

Sprinkle one or two Allen's Foot-Ease powders in the Foot Bath and soak and rub the feet. It takes the sting out of Corns and Bunions and smarting, aching feet. Then for lasting comfort, shake Allen's Foot-Ease into your shoes. It takes the friction from the shoe, rests the feet and makes walking a delight. Always use it for dancing parties and to break in new shoes. All dealers sell it.

Use for Old Batteries.

In open fireplaces, especially where wood is used for fuel, a gorgeous colored-fire effect may be produced, says Popular Mechanics Magazine, by placing one or two old dry cells among the hot coals. The substance with which the top of the battery is sealed soon burns away, and the heat sets up a chemical action, producing a gas which burns with a flame of vivid blue, purple and green. One old dry cell will continue the spectacle for from half to three-quarters of an hour, depending upon the heat of the fire in which it is placed. No danger attaches to this production of colored fire. Is costs nothing, inasmuch as old dry batteries are ordinarily worthless, but it will provide both pleasure and amusement at fireside gatherings.

Belgian War Souvenirs.

War souvenirs in the shape of watches made of steel from Belgian cannon which were in active service on the Belgian front from the beginning of the war in 1914 till October 29, 1917, are being manufactured in Switzerland by order of the king and queen of the Belgians. The watches, which bear inset in gold on the cases the monogram "A. E." of the Belgian sovereigns, are to be presented by King Albert and Queen Elizabeth to soldiers who have specially distinguished themselves and also to prize-winners of military competitions.

BAYER

DON'T BUY ASPIRIN IN A "PILL" BOX

Ask for "Bayer Tablets of Aspirin" in a Bayer package—marked with "Bayer Cross."

You must say "Bayer." Never ask for merely Aspirin tablets. The name "Bayer" means you are getting the genuine "Bayer Tablets of Aspirin," proven safe by millions of people.

Don't buy Aspirin tablets in a pill box. Insist on getting the Bayer package with the safety "Bayer Cross" on both package and on tablets. No other way!

Beware of counterfeits! Only recently a Brooklyn manufacturer was sent to the penitentiary for flooding the country with talcum powder tablets, which he claimed to be Aspirin.

In the Bayer package are proper directions and the dose for Headache, Toothache, Earache, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Lumbago, Sciatica, Colds, Grippe, Influenza-Colds, Neuritis and pain generally.

"Bayer Tablets of Aspirin," American made and owned, are sold in vest pocket boxes of 12 tablets, which cost only a few cents, also in bottles of 24 and bottles of 100—also capsules. Aspirin is the trade mark of Bayer Manufacture of Monoaceticacidester of Salicylicacid.

THE MEN IN CLASS A1

A sound, healthy man is never a back number. A man can be as vigorous and able at seventy as at twenty. Condition, not years, puts you in the discard. A system weakened by overwork and careless living brings old age prematurely. The bodily functions are impaired and unpleasant symptoms appear. The weak spot is generally the kidneys. Keep them clean and in proper working condition and you will generally find yourself in Class A. Take GOLD MEDAL Haarlem Oil Capsules periodically and your system will always be in working order. Your spirits will be enlivened, your muscles supple, your mind active, and your body capable of hard work.

Don't wait until you have been rejected. Commence to be a first-class man now. Go to your druggist at once. Get a trial box of GOLD MEDAL Haarlem Oil Capsules. They are made of the pure, original, imported Haarlem Oil—the kind your great-grandfather used. Two capsules each day will keep you toned up and feeling fine. Money refunded if they do not help you. Remember to ask for the imported GOLD MEDAL Brand. In three sizes, sealed packages.—Adv.

Nervousness and Headaches Caused by Acid-Stomach

There is a much closer connection between the stomach and brain than most people imagine. It is because of this close connection that indigestion, belching, sour, gassy stomach and other stomach miseries—all of which are sure signs of acid-stomach—are so often followed by severe attacks of blinding, splitting headaches.

Nervousness, sleeplessness, irritability, mental depression, melancholia and many other disorders which affect the brain can also nearly always be traced to the same source—acid-stomach.

So often you hear people say "I am so nervous I think I'll fly to pieces"; or "It seems I never get a good night's sleep any more, my nerves are all on edge." Little do they dream that acid-stomach is the direct cause of their troubles because very often there are no pains in the stomach at all. So you see, you can't always judge an acid-stomach condition by the way your stomach, itself, feels.

If you are weak, nervous, unfit—if you are not up to your old time form—if you lack your accustomed enthusiasm, energy and pep—make this test and see if it isn't acid-stomach that is holding you back—robbing you of your health, strength, and vigor. Get a big box of EATONIC—the wonderful modern medicine that so quickly puts an acid stomach to rights. It is in the form of pleasant tasting tablets that you eat like a bit of candy. EATONIC rids the stomach of excess acid. Brings instant relief from indigestion, heartburn, sour belching, food repeating, bloat and gas and makes the stomach cool, pure, sweet and comfortable.

Dentists warn us against the bad effects of acid mouth, pointing out that the acid eats through the enamel of the teeth, causing them to decay. You can easily imagine then the amount of damage excess acid will cause to the delicate organisation of the stomach!

Thousands of people are using EATONIC and the results obtained are so remarkable as to be almost unbelievable. Yet their letters of gratitude, many of which are received daily, prove absolutely that EATONIC does all and even more than we claim. The medical profession, too, recognizes the great value of this wonderful remedy. A learned Michigan doctor wrote recently: "I have had such wonderful success with EATONIC that I want every one to know how quickly it will neutralize the acidity of the stomach (acid-stomach) and the stomach will soon be sweet and normal again, and the sick man well and happy once more."

So be sure to get a big box of EATONIC from your druggist today. If it fails in any way to give you the kind of satisfaction you want, take it back—he will refund your money. He doesn't want one penny of your money unless EATONIC helps you.

One-Piece Gown Is In Evidence

The fashion shows which are held at the leading Paris dressmakers to determine the spring styles are disappointing, perhaps, from the point of view of the foreign buyers, while to the Parisienne the season on the whole seems the most brilliant that she has seen for many a day, writes a Paris fashion correspondent.

The American buyers naturally expected great things from the French creators whose ideas have been so deeply affected by the mourning of France during these five years of war. They figured that this first victory season would be one of remarkable elegance, entirely forgetting the fact that France cannot throw aside her somber black merely because the armistice was signed. She still mourns her dead and it will be another six months or perhaps a year before she can think of returning to her former magnificence of dress.

Ribbon Trims This Tunic Dress From Paris—the Sash Is of Wide Blue Ribbon and the Other Materials Are Crepe Georgette and Lace.

Then, again, the foreign buyers have figured that the sudden change from war to peace would mean a sudden change in the method of living and, therefore, a sudden change in the styles, but peace has made no noticeable change so far, and when the change does come it will take place so gradually, as we come out from under our numerous restrictions, that we will scarcely notice it.

The French women are still deprived of their automobiles and the former fashionable tea houses cannot resume their gayeties until they can serve something besides plain tea. The lack of butter and sugar means a lot to a tea house and all of these things have their influences on the fashions.

Some of the houses, however, have borne in mind that the peace conference, with its delegates coming from the corners of the earth that have been untouched by the war, would bring some of the old gayety to Paris and that the buyers from those countries would expect brilliant collections of dresses.

Elaborate and Elegant.

The Martial and Armand collection, for instance, is most elaborate and elegant in every detail, which is largely due to the fact that Mme. Valle was called upon in December to make a number of handsome evening dresses for the reception given to the Italian embassy for the King of Italy and President Wilson. She has an extensive Italian clientele, and with fifteen handsome dresses at this dinner and reception she was inclined to think that her Italian, Spanish and American buyers would buy the same kind of dresses in February.

The Maison Martial et Armand is showing no great change in the general style. There is some effort made to get away from the "robe chemise," but the effort has not been altogether successful. The skirts are still very narrow and short and many of the models are the same old "chemise" that the French women absolutely refuse to give up, much to the disgust of the American buyers. The models that have not the straight lines are slightly draped, but the afternoon dresses are practically all the same loose chemise variety with the only new note in the very elaborate embroidery. The embroideries are wonderful throughout the collection. A new embroidery is introduced in gold thread in long stitches which make it look like the wrong side of the satin brocades that are used for upholstering. A new beaded embroidery is also to be noted in which tiny beads are sewed on in little loops in a very close design giving it a feathery appearance. The most gorgeous metal tissues and metal brocades are used in the evening dresses, which are always gracefully draped and are still short and trains shown with all of them.

A marked feature of the collection is the little tulle jackets trimmed in ostrich feathers and the handsome spangled capes. A cape embroidered in black spangles and jet is one of the most popular models in the collection despite the fact that its price is 2,000 francs.

Evening Dresses First.

Little attention is being paid to tailored costumes in any of the dressmaking establishments. All have made an effort to specialize in the afternoon and evening dresses. Jenny's charming blue serge street dresses make one forget that she is not showing many "tailleurs." They are the usual straight, narrow, one-piece frocks loosely belted by a broad sash of novelty ribbon, but the little white vests that are worn with all of them give them a very new look. These waistcoats with their Directoire collars are decidedly a feature of the collection. They no longer extend below the waist line, as did those of the last two seasons, but they merely fill in the deep V of the serge bodice and are not low in the neck. If Jenny's models are as popular as they promise to be now the separate neckwear will come into its own again, for separate collars are shown with the serge dresses. Many of them are the turned down linen collars that we wore years ago with shirt waists. With them are worn pretty little ribbon ties. Ribbon, in fact, is another marked feature of the collection. Practically all of the models have ribbon sashes, and fringe, too, is featured. All of the sashes have fringed ends and bands of fringe are employed in all sorts of ways.

Jenny shows her usual gorgeous evening dresses which can easily be described as evening skirts and nothing more. Even the shoulder straps are so transparent that they can scarcely be seen, but the skirts make up for all that the bodices lack. They are most dazzling, in the most brilliant colors, in metal brocades and spell victory throughout.

Doeuillet, too, is showing an important collection, especially in evening dresses. He shows one model after another exquisitely draped in gold cloth and often combined with embroidered tulle. Metal cloth and jet seem to be his favorite combination and he uses quantities of jet fringe, all of which means expense, making it difficult for the Americans to buy, because the duty runs many of them up to the three and four thousand franc mark. I recall one dress in the most georgeous metal tissue the actual material of which sells for 170 francs a yard. One thinks nothing of paying 100 francs a yard now for the most ordinary tissues.

Satin and Metal Brocade.

Doeuillet has a pretty way of using a bright colored satin and metal brocade bodice with a black satin skirt. No trimming of any kind is used except a black jet fringe to finish the ends of the sash, which is made of the brocade.

The Doeuillet skirts are not too short and not too narrow, but they have a different movement from all of the others in the manner in which they are caught up in front and are much longer in the back.

Paris Is Mad About Sashes. This One Is Embroidered on the Material of the Dress, Which Is Striped Taffeta in Blue and White. Sash Is Embroidered in Gold, Rose and Blue.

A specialty is made of good wearable coats, for which the house has long been noted. Rodier's new broad striped woollen materials are most effectively used. I recall one in a rich golden brown with a black stripe that is the smartest sport coat that I have yet seen. All of the coats are made to be held around the figure and up in the front, just as last season.

The one movement that is to be seen everywhere and the only one that is strikingly new is the long waist line with semi-draped bodices. Worth carries out this idea in many different ways, making it rather the basis on which his models are created.

Hats Made of Flowers.

The newest small hats are made entirely of vivid flowers, following the lines of the head.

HE GOT THE GEORGES MIXED

Baseball Expert Evidently Had Something to Learn About Prominent Men of the World.

A former pitcher in the now defunct Northwestern league, who sought peace and quiet in a Seattle shipyard, was discussing the war and kindred topics during a breathing spell one day. This hurler is well known for the speed and "stuff" he gets on the ball, and is not credited with more gray matter than the law allows.

This latter circumstance possibly accounts for his end of the following conversation:

"This war sure has changed things around some," opined the ballplayer.

"How now?" queried his friend.

"Well, you take England, for instance. England always had a king until a short time ago."

"What's the matter? Some one take a shot at King George?"

"Why, no, not that. They just don't call him King George any more. Leastwise the only thing you see in the papers these days is Premier George."

Well, Isn't It?

"Clifford, what is an island?"

Clifford had not studied his geography lesson, and was stumped for a moment by his teacher's question. "Well," he said, pausing between words to think, "an island is a place where, if you haven't got a boat, you can't get off."

Amusing Reason Why Brother S—— Was Made Known to the World as a Stingy Man.

She worked at the minister's house for three days and then went to a neighbor and begged her to give her a place for the remainder of the week, so she could get home.

"Why," said the neighbor, inquiringly, "I thought you were employed by Mrs. S——. What is the reason that you are leaving?"

"I just can't stay there another minute," the girl told her. "Brother S—— is the stingiest man I ever knew."

"Stingy! Why, the whole family is known far and wide for its benevolence. What in the world makes you say that?" she asked.

"Ma'm," whispered the girl tragically, as if she were revealing state secrets, "ma'am, don't you know, Brother S—— sits up at one end of the table and measures out just how much every one of them can have to eat afore he ever gives 'em a plate, even? Notice of Petition for Free Gravel Road.

Notice is hereby given that a petition has been filed in the office of the County Auditor of the DeKalb County, Indiana, asking the Board of County Commissioners of said County to establish and construct a Free Gravel, Macadam, or other improved Road in Concord Township, DeKalb County, Indiana, to wit: Beginning at the Township line between Concord Township and Spencer Township at the intersection of Sections Seventeen (17), Eighteen (18), Nineteen (19) and Twenty (20) and extending north three miles to the Township line between Concord Township and Wilmington Township along the highway as now established and used, and there to end, and that said petition has been set for hearing on the 7th day of May, 1919, and will be presented to the board of County Commissioners of said DeKalb County, Indiana on the said 7th. day of May, 1919, a copy of which petition is as follows:

State of Indiana, } ss
DeKalb County, }

Before the Honorable Board of County Commissioners of DeKalb County, State of Indiana.

In the Matter of the Petition for a free Gravel, Stone, Macadam, or other material Improved Road in Concord Township, DeKalb County, Indiana.

To the Honorable Board of County Commissioners of DeKalb County, State of Indiana.

The undersigned, being more than Fifty free-holders and voters of Concord Township, DeKalb County, State of Indiana, do hereby petition your Honorable Board that the following described highway in Concord Township, DeKalb County, Indiana, to wit:

Beginning at the Township line between Concord Township and Spencer Township at the intersection of Sections Seventeen (17), Eighteen (18), Nineteen (19) and Twenty (20), and extending due north three miles to the Township line between Concord and Wilmington Townships along the highway as now established and used, and there to end, be improved by the construction of a turnpike gravel, stone, macadam or other road material for improved roads over the entire route of the road described.

Your petitioners further say that said highway is outside the limits of Cities or Towns; that said road connects at its beginning with a free gravel or stone road at the townsip line between Spencer and Concord Townships and terminates at the north line of said Concord Township.

Your petitioners further say that they recommend that the general width of said road shall be Forty (40) feet throughout, except where it shall be necessary to make cuts and fills, and that said road shall be built on the single track system and that the paved part of said highway shall be Sixteen feet in width; that said highway shall be sufficiently graded and drained before placing the material for improvment thereon.

Your petitioners further state that there is a necessity for the improvement of said road for the following reasons; It is a very poor road and will be traveled extensively if improved, and will be of public utility.

Second, That the present system of keeping and maintaining said road in repair is inadequate.

Your petitioners further say that the most practical way to build said road and keep it in repair is to construct it under the laws of the State of Indiana, which provides for the building of gravel and macadam roads by taxation so that the road may become a part of the Free Gravel Road system of DeKalb County, Indiana, and be maintained by general taxation

Your petitioners further say that said road when completed will be three miles or less in length.

Your petitions further recommend the use of gravel in the construction of said road.

Your petitioners therefore pray this Honorable Board for the establishment of said road as a Free Gravel, Stone, Macadam, or other material improved road in accordance with the recommendations herein set out and in accordance with the laws of the State of Indiana for the construction of Free Gravel roads by taxation and in pursuance of the laws of said state relative thereto, and without submitting the same to a vote of the citizens and electors of said township. Township U. nion Program

As the concluding event of children's week in Concord township, a program will be given by the children of the four Sunday Schools on Sunday evening at the M. P. church, to which everyone is invited. A survey of the township was made by Mrs. Nellie Perry, township superintendent of the Children's divison, of all children under 12 years of age and in each instance where they were not attending Sunday School, the chairman secured their choice of schools and registered them accordingly. The reports are then handed to the superintendents of the schools to see that they are looked after. The plan is a fine one and ought to result in more enlisted scholars in the Sunday School work.

Dies At The Age Of 21.

Mrs. Evadna Silberg-Packer, 21 years old, wife of Charles Packer, a former member of Company K and now a soldier in France, died at the home of her mother, Mrs. Susie Silberg, corner of Douglas and North streets, Monday morning at 5 o'clock, at Auburn, after an illness of several months from tuberculosis. Her condition has been serious for some time.

Just a week ago Monday she celebrated her 21st birthday, and a number of friends gathered to make the occasion a pleasant one. At that time she was quite sick, but enjoyed very much the thoughtfulness of her friends. Her husband, Charles Packer, well known in Auburn, is in the Ordnance department near Toul, France. They were married in November, 1917.

The deceased was born near Spencerville, April 21st, 1918, and was the daughter of Stephen and Susie Silberg. Her father died about six years ago in Spencerville, and the family then moved to Auburn where they have made their home for the past six years.

While in Spencerville she joined the Methodist church of that town and was an active member. Since her residence in Auburn she has been a member of the Church of God.

She is survived by a bereaved mother, Mrs. Susie Silberg of Douglas street, a husband, Charles Packer in France, three brothers, Russell who is employed at the Auburn Automobile company, and Cyril and Garth at home.

The funeral was held from the Church of God bethel at 10 a. m. Wednesday. Rev. Argyl Houser, officiating and burial in Woodlawn cemetery.—Star.

WHICH ROAD DO YOU TRAVEL?

Here Are the Signposts: End of One Will Find You "Broke," Other Happy and With Funds.

There are two roads in life. One leads to a quagmire of nothingness. The other leads to success. Both are lined with signposts to show the wary traveler in which direction he is moving. But many people go along, their eyes on the skies, on the ground, or unseeing in dreamland, never noticing that they are advancing on the wrong highway. Do you know which road you are traveling? Here are the signposts. The end of one will find you empty-handed. The end of the other will find you with funds for a sunny opportunity—with War Savings Stamps and Liberty Bonds working for you at over 4 per cent interest.

Spendthrift Road.	Thrift Road.

The Soldiers Reception

The reception tendered the recently returned soldiers last week was a signal success. The address by Lieut. Carrol was intensely interesting and instructive. His work was with the signal corps and his particular duty was the direction of artillery fire from an observation balloon. He dwelt upon the fact that the heavy fighting and ultimate success of all efforts depended upon the infantry—that all artillery preparations were made for the express purpose that the infantry might go "over the top."

He was followed by Lieut. Forrest Kain, who told of the bravery and effectiveness of the infantry work—they were the fellows who met the beast face to face in the death struggle and many were the incidents cited telling of the bravery and daring of the grand American army, the greatest the world has ever seen in action.

After the reception a banquet was given the soldier boys and their ladies. Prof. Smith acted as master of ceremonies and after a cheerful welcome from Mrs. Belle Barney, as chairman of the Red Cross, several toasts were given and all those present pronounced the affair a huge success.

The recently returned soldiers present were Lieut. Forrest Kain, Argyl Sechler, Harry Shuff, Lloyd Miller, Stanley Shutt, Gene Baker and Carl Watt.

Big Fire At Auburn

Friday morning, fire broke out in the Osborn & Howey Garage, East 9th. street, Auburn and completely destroyed the building and nearly all the equipment, together with the coliseum, on the north side of the street, a building 54x100 feet. A number of buildings next to the garage were damaged considerable and others in the vicinity of the fire were damaged. The origin of the fire is unknown. The total loss is estimated at $12,000. The fire department was unable to cope with the fire, due to the low pressure and aid was summonsed from Garrett and Kendallville. They arrived too late to give much assistance.

Start Late Potato Crop.

Green sprouting will keep that sprouting late potato seed of yours in good condition until planting time. This will be an especially valuable practice this year, since the warm winter and spring have started the tubors into growth early. Treat your potato seed with formaldehyde or corrosive sublimate for scurf and scab immediately before it sprouts, and handle the tubers as follows: Place them in a well lighted room or bin, where the temperature is above freezing. If they already have long sprouts on them remove these first before putting out to green sprout, sunlight is unnecessary and success is assured if the potatoes receive plenty of light each day. In a week or so after being placed in the light the young green sprouts will start to grow. After becoming about a quarter of an inch long growth will cease. These short stubby green sprouts will remain dormant until planting time. At that time the tubers should be cut and planted with the sprouts on. Green sprouted potatoes will retain their vigor; mature a crop earlier; be more resistant to disease attack, and insure a more uniform stand.

Restaurant Is Sold.

The L. B. Meek restaurant was sold last week to Lloyd J. Miller, possession being given on Saturday. Mr. Meek gives all his time to the cream station and Mrs. Meek was unable to do the work of the restaurant alone. Mr. Miller has had some practical experience in the restaurant business and he solicits the trade of his predecessor. Some addition will be made to the stock making it a complete restaurant and eating house.

Edith Abel Seeks Divorce

Ross Abel, trustee of Newville township, has been sued for divorce in the DeKalb circuit court by Mary Edith Abel. Mrs Abel says she and her husband were married in 1905 and separated April 24, 1919. She declares he has a cruel and spiteful disposition and a high ungovernrble temper and has so tyrannized her in their home life and oppressed and abused her that it is impossible for her to live with him any longer and maintain her peace of mind and health. Mrs. Abel says her husband owns $14,000 worth of real estate in this county and personal property valued at $3,000. She wants reasonable alimony and her maiden name, Mary Edith Widney, restored. James E. Pomeroy is her attorney.

Carfare Refused

DeKalb county soldiers of the world war will not have their railroad fare paid to Indianapolis out of the county treasury to attend the Victory Day celebration, to be held in that city May 9th. Such was the decision of the civil county council at the DeKalb county court house Saturday. The opinion was that this money, which would be expended for such a short visit to Indianapolis, should be saved for a celebration to be held in DeKalb county at a later date when all the DeKalb county men return from overseas. Allen county took the same action.

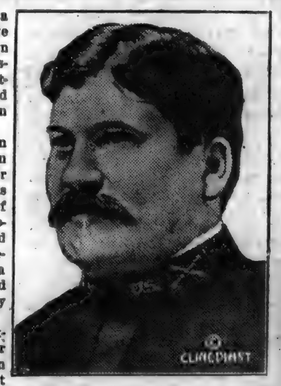
PEOPLE TALKED ABOUT

"GENERAL DICK" GOES TO RUSSIA



Brig. Gen. Wilds P. Richardson, a regular army officer, and a native Texan, commands the new American expeditionary force to northern Russia. General Richardson, with an outfit of engineers, sanitary workers and replacement officers, has arrived in Archangel.

This officer who has been given this high command has been known throughout the regular army, ever since he graduated at West Point, as "Dick." When he became a colonel of regulars a few years ago the promotion was recognized by the army and he became "Colonel Dick." The presumption is that since he became a general officer he has been advanced once more in the popular phraseology and has become "General Dick."

No one needs any excuse for writing something in praise of Brigadier General Richardson. The presumption is that in Russia he will direct a part of his energies to seeing to it that the roads over which our forces will advance, and over which supplies must be taken, will be put into the highest class of condition that is known.

General Richardson for 20 years was in Alaska as a road builder. He built a thousand miles of road over which automobiles easily can travel. He built those roads under the worst possible natural conditions—weather, roaring rivers, chasms, mountains and frost. Richardson was brought back from Alaska by the war department and sent to France.

CHALONER: "WHO'S LOONY NOW?"

The robust, virile "ghost" of John Armstrong Chaloner, millionaire, who was adjudged insane by a New York court 22 years ago, and later pronounced "legally dead" by a sheriff's jury after his escape from the Bloomingdale insane asylum, has returned to New York after an absence of 22 years to prosecute a suit for alleged libel against a newspaper for $100,000 there.

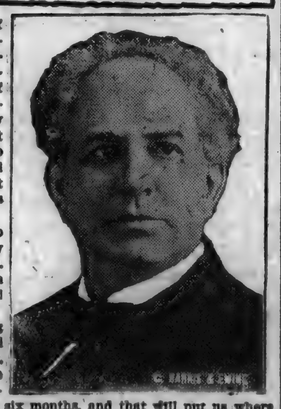
The "ghost" went to the city from his home at Merry Mills, Va., where he has been held to be both "alive" and sane, under a writ of protection granted by Federal Judge Hand. This writ restrains New York authorities from rearresting and committing him to Bloomingdale.

Mr. Chaloner, once a prominent Wall street attorney, is a brother of Lewis Stuyvesant Chanler former lieutenant governor of New York, and great-grandson of John Jacob Astor. He had his name changed at the time the Virginia courts pronounced him sane, because of his belief that members of his family had brought about his incarceration.

Since his escape from Bloomingdale he has made persistent efforts to have the insanity judgment against him in New York invalidated in order that he might regain a fortune of $1,500,000, of which he was deprived at the time of his commitment.

Mr. Chaloner says he has an "X-faculty," through which he develops "graphic automotion" and "vocal automatism." In the former state a pencil in his hand will write without direction from him; in the latter, he speaks instead of writing.

KAHN SEES LURKING DANGERS



Representative Julius Kahn of California, chairman of the house committee on military affairs, is in Germany to study the situation in its relation to the future military policy of the United States, and he says his investigation has convinced him not only that the peace conference will not smooth out the affairs of the world to an everlasting level of satisfaction and contentment to everyone, but also that four years and three months of wars has not cured Europe of fighting.

"More and more I am coming to the conviction that we had better stay on our side of the ocean," he says. "The president and his conferees in Paris cannot make self-moral laws and expect the world to abide by them.

"Because dangers are lurking ahead, I am more than ever convinced of the wisdom of universal training. I find the army agrees with me. Give us a standing army of 100,000 volunteers, and train every youth, perhaps six months, and that will put us where we can protect ourselves—which we may have to do, for we will not emerge from the Paris conferences beloved of all the world. We might as well face that fact and be in a position to make those who do not love us, at least respect us. The American people will never ratify any pact under which we are bound to ship our soldiers to Europe to settle the little or big wars which will come."

FILIPINOS WANT INDEPENDENCE

Manuel L. Queson is chairman of a special commission of 40 members from the Philippine legislature which the other day presented in Washington a petition for the immediate independence of the islands.

The petition declared there now is a stable government in the Philippines managed and supported by the people themselves, and that it can and will be maintained if independence is granted the islands, and urged that now is the opportune time for presenting claims because of the principles for which the United States entered the world war, "for liberty, the self-government and the indicated development of all peoples."

The commission was treated very nicely. Secretary Baker spoke for President Wilson and said that the president believed the time had come to grant complete independence. The commission would be able to carry home word that the American people love liberty too dearly to deny it to others.

How time flies! It was less than 20 years ago that United States troops were chasing Aguinaldo and his followers all over the island.

CLUBS BEING ORGANIZED TO ENCOURAGE FARMING—MAKE BOYS AND GIRLS HAPPY

Working Alone Is Lonesome Job—Clubs Give Many Good Times as Well as Training.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Farm and home work loses drudgery and becomes an interesting game for boys and girls as a result of the club work organized by the United States department of agriculture and the state colleges. These clubs set standards of achievement in home activities and dignify common labor. Boys and girls, both rural and urban, in the clubs have their point of view changed so they want to make further preparation and study in the business of farming and home making. The work is as permanent as the public school system because it is backed by permanent institutions, state and federal, and is a definite part of the co-operative extension program in every state in the union.

Things Club Work Does.

Club work socializes community life through the boys and girls and gives young people a real motive in all their work. They are trained through it for community leadership and co-operative work of every kind and are taught that it is infinitely better to be a proprietor of farm land, farm animals, machinery, crops or kitchen equipment, than to be a mere wage-earner. The state and national governments in 1918 employed 985 club leaders to superintend the boys' and girls' club work in the counties and states, while several hundred more were employed during the summer. An average of ten projects a state was conducted during the last year under the supervision of the club organization.

Results for Junior Farmers.

Certified reports were turned in last year by 744,703 boys and girls in the clubs. Total quantities produced by these junior farmers were:

313,778.7 bushels of corn; 646,508 bushels potatoes; 2,987,983.7 square rods of home garden; vegetables, fruit, meat, and soup canned, 3,471,018 quarts; made 349,587 jars jelly; dried 40,874 pounds fruit and vegetables; mother-daughter canning, 96,175 quarts fruits, vegetables, meat and soups; 29,437 jars jelly; 2,125 pounds dried products; 22,399 tons sugar beets; poultry, 70,276 laying hens; 437,430 chicks hatched; 165,935 dozen eggs; baby beef, 1,426 animals managed, 920,442 pounds beef produced; pigs, 35,084 animals managed, 1,101 pigs raised, 6,220,277 pounds pork; bread, 539,905 loaves baked; 7,197 dozen muffins; garment clubs, 291,012 garments made and repaired; handicraft club, 4,300 pieces handicraft; dairy calf club, 3,073 calves raised; home economics, 1,297 dishes prepared, 616 meals served; sheep clubs, 8,005 lambs raised; 32,653 pounds mutton; beans, 4,974 bushels; rabbits, 28,822 raised.

Work in One County.

The boys and girls in Saunders county, Nebraska, were unorganized until last year, and, like any other unorganized group, did little work. Eighteen boys and girls there tried to do club work by themselves, but it is not much fun to raise extra large pumpkins or have your pig make wonderful gains unless you have some body with whom to compare results. The stimulus is gone unless you can measure your work up with some one and there isn't much fun in any work unless you can make a contest or game out of it. The club organization supplies this and the rapid way it has spread over the whole country indicates it has met a real need.

In 1918, the fathers and mothers, the chamber of commerce, and the county agent in Saunders county decided the boys and girls were not getting a square deal, that they were too important to be neglected in this way and that what they needed was some one to superintend their work. Money was raised to employ a county club leader who was to work 365 days in the year with Saunders county's biggest asset—its boys and girls—and in six months' time there were few of them who pined for city life. They were having a good time in the country and making money—the two things that made city life look desirable.

In one year's time there were 18 boys and girls in the county who were doing club work, although they were unable to join a club; 54 boys and girls working in groups and having the benefit and joy of working together but without club organization; and most important of all, 28 clubs of various types with a membership of 184.

Altogether 256 boys and girls in Saunders county in 1918 produced food for the United States and the allies. They also demonstrated to other boys and girls and to some conservative older people that work is drudgery only when there is no interest in it, and that the best enjoyment comes from working together in an intelligent way on a job worth while.

BETTER DISPLAY IS HELP IN MARKETING

County Agent Shows Farmers How to Attract Customers.

Bruised, Poorly Colored and Specked Tomatoes Are Removed From Box and Good Ones Sold Readily at Advantage.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

An assistant county agent in Middlesex county, Mass., noticed that many farmers selling produce at one of the community markets took no pains to make their goods attractive to purchasers. On several occasions the agent was able to help farmers make better displays of products.

An instance occurred at Haverhill. One morning the agent asked a farmer how his tomatoes were selling and was told that practically no sales were being made. An examination showed that the box of tomatoes was partly hidden by other products and that the box showed some bruised, some poorly colored, and an occasional specked tomato. The lot as a whole, however, consisted of well-shaped, well-colored tomatoes. With the consent of the farmer the agent picked out six rather unsightly tomatoes and placed them in another box, properly arranged, the remainder, and placed the box in a slanting position on the stand.

Before this box was well placed in position a customer inquired the price a pound and bought three pounds. Other customers followed and the box was quickly emptied. The farmer in his spare moments began refilling the box, but before it was filled other customers appeared and bought all his product. The few tomatoes that had hindered sales were sold at a lower figure. This illustrates how a little attention to small details makes advantageous marketing possible.

America's Immortals

Most striking instances of gallantry for which the Distinguished Service Cross has been awarded

Among the thousands of American soldiers who were awarded the Distinguished Service Cross for conspicuous bravery on the field of battle in France, there were a few whose feats were of such an unusual character as to stand out above the others. General Pershing's staff has selected a number of these most notable cases of bravery on the part of the fighting Americans, and a few of them are given below. They present only a few of the thousands of acts of heroism that are given recognition in the official records of the war department.

OSCAR F. MILLER,
Major, 361st Infantry.

Maj. Miller received the Distinguished Service Cross for conspicuous gallantry in action near Gesnes, France, September 28, 1918. After two days of intense physical and mental strain, during which Maj. Miller had led his battalion in the front line of the advance, through the forest of Argonne, the enemy was met in a prepared position south of Gesnes. Though almost exhausted, he energetically reorganized his battalion and ordered an attack. Upon reaching open ground, the advancing line began to waver in the face of machine gun fire from the front and flanks and direct artillery fire. Personally leading his command group forward between his front line companies, Maj. Miller inspired his men by his personal courage and they again pressed on toward the hostile position. As this officer led the renewed attack he was shot in the right leg, but he nevertheless staggered forward at the head of his command. Soon afterward he was again shot in the right arm, but he continued the charge, personally cheering his troops on through the heavy machine gun fire. Just before the objective was reached he received a wound in the abdomen, which forced him to the ground, but he continued to urge his men on, telling them to push on to the next ridge and leave him where he lay. He died from his wounds a few days later. Maj. Miller's widow lives at 1727 West Fifty-first street, Los Angeles, Cal.

HENRY G. COSTON,
Private, Company, H, 15th Infantry.

Conspicuous gallantry resulting in wounds which caused his death won the Distinguished Service Cross for Private Coston. Near Bois de Consenvoye, France, October 8, 1918, when the advance of his platoon had been held up by machine gun fire, and a request was made for an automatic rifle team to charge the nest, Private Coston was the first to volunteer. Going forward with his team under terrific fire of enemy artillery, machine guns and trench mortars, Private Coston continued to advance after all his comrades had become casualties and he himself had received serious wounds. He operated his gun until he collapsed, but his act resulted in the capture of about 100 prisoners and several machine guns. He died shortly after from the effects of his wounds. Private Coston's widow lives at 615 Mason avenue, Cape Charles, Va.

JESSE N. FUNK,
Private, First Class, Co. L, 354th Infantry.

Private Funk received the Distinguished Service Cross for conspicuous gallantry in action near Bois de Bantheville, France, October 31, 1918. Learning that two daylight patrols had been caught out in No Man's Land and were unable to return, Private Funk and another stretcher bearer, upon their own initiative, made two trips five hundred yards beyond our lines, under constant machine gun fire and rescued two wounded officers. His father, Martin Funk, lives in Calhan, Colo.

JOSEPH A. BUFFALO,
Private, Company F, 358th Infantry.

Private Buffalo, who lives with his mother, Mrs. Pearl E. Buffalo, at Boxby, Okla., was decorated for extraordinary heroism in action near Fey-en-Have, France, September 12, 1918. Although he was seriously wounded early in action, Private Buffalo remained in the fight throughout the day, leading small parties of men against machine gun emplacements, killing two of the enemy himself and refusing to be evacuated until late at night, unable to fight further.

CLIFFORD E. MELLEN,
Private, Company A, 104th Infantry.

Disregard of his own safety in an effort to save his comrades won the Distinguished Service Cross for Private Mellen. The act was performed in the Bois Haumont, France, October 15, 1918. Private Mellen, an officer, and eight other soldiers, were surrounded by the enemy in a shell hole, into which an enemy grenade was thrown, landing directly in the midst of the group. Disregarding his own safety, this soldier seized the grenade and attempted to throw it out, but it exploded in his hand just as he succeeded in getting it above the level of the ground. His prompt action saved the lives of the men in the shell hole, but he was severely wounded. Private Mellen lives with his mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Mellen, 28 Worcester street, Worcester, Mass.

PARKER C. DUNN,
Private, First Class, 1st Battalion, 312th Infantry.

Private Dunn (deceased) was decorated for conspicuous gallantry in action near Grande-Pre, France, October 23, 1918. When his battalion commander found it necessary to send a message to a company in the attacking line and hesitated to order a runner to make the trip because of the extreme danger involved, Private Dunn, a member of the intelligence section, volunteered for the mission. After advancing but a short distance across a field swept by artillery and machine gun fire he was wounded a second time. Still undaunted, he persistently attempted to carry out his mission until he was killed by a machine gun bullet before reaching the advanced line. He lived in Albany, N. Y.

ALEXANDER R. SKINKER,
Captain, 138th Infantry.

Capt. Alexander R. Skinker (deceased) was decorated for conspicuous gallantry in action at Cheppy, France, September 26, 1918. Unwilling to sacrifice his men when his company was held up by terrific machine gun fire from iron pill boxes in the Hindenburg line, Captain Skinker personally led an automatic rifleman and a carrier in an attack on the machine guns. The carrier was killed instantly, but Captain Skinker seized the ammunition and continued through an opening in the barbed wire, feeding the automatic rifle until he was killed, too. His widow lives at 646 Elmwood avenue, St. Louis, Mo.

PATRICK GARRITY,
Private Company C, 354th Infantry.

Private Garrity was decorated for conspicuous bravery in action near Remonville, France, November 1, 1918. When his company was advancing across an open field an enemy machine gun opened fire upon it from the left front. Private Garrity and two other soldiers being on that flank of the company, immediately advanced upon it. His two comrades were shot down, but Private Garrity advanced alone at a run; and with his bayonet drove the three Germans from their guns into a near-by dugout, capturing them and the gun. Private Garrity's home address is 3741 Kenmore avenue, Chicago, Ill.

ROBERT L. BLACKWELL,
Private, Co. K, 119th Infantry.

Robert L. Blackwell (deceased) was decorated for conspicuous gallantry in action near St. Souplet, France, October 11, 1918. When his platoon was almost surrounded by the enemy and his platoon commander asked for volunteers to carry a message calling for reinforcements, Private Blackwell volunteered for this mission, well knowing the extreme danger connected with it. In attempting to get through the heavy shell and machine gun fire this gallant soldier was killed. The address of his father is James B. Blackwell, R. F. D. No 2, Hindles, N. C.

CLAYTON K. SLACK,
Private, Company D, 124th M. G. B.

Private Slack received the Distinguished Service Cross for conspicuous intrepidity in action near Consenvoye, France, October 8, 1918. Observing German soldiers under cover fifty yards away on the left flank, Private Slack, upon his own initiative, rushed them with his rifle, and single-handed captured ten prisoners and two heavy machine guns, thus saving his company and neighboring organizations from heavy casualties. His home is with his mother, Mrs. Jennie Mae Slack, Lampson, Wis.

HOWARD E. MADSEN,
Sergeant, Co. D, 115th Infantry.

Sergeant Madsen was decorated for conspicuous gallantry in action at Bois-de-Consenvoye, France, October 22, 1918. When the platoon which he was commanding was held up by an enemy machine gun nest, Sergeant Madsen, taking an armful of grenades, advanced alone over ground swept by machine gun fire, put the machine gun out of action, routed the enemy and permitted the platoon to advance without casualties. His mother, Mrs. Mary V. Madsen, lives in Baltimore, Md.

Chicken on a Jag.

A chicken owned by a woman living near Jeffersonville, Ind., "got on a jag" a day or two ago but it was the owner's fault, the chicken might plead. She had some whisky put away, used on physician's prescription for her heart. The chicken was sick and she diagnosed the case as heart trouble so thought she would try the same remedy. She gave it "the tiniest drop," but the chicken did not need much. Neighbors say they are satisfied the chicken was cured, but it immediately began a furious war dance, exemplified the different steps of all the different redskin tribes, passed from these to the waltz, two-step, one-step and other dances not yet invented, and according to the faithful narrator tried to sing "The Star-Spangled Banner," but this is probably an exaggeration, even if not actually untrue.

WOLVES OF THE SEA

Fate Gives Carlyle Chance He Has Been Seeking.

Synopsis — Geoffry Carlyle, master of sailing ships at twenty-six, is sentenced to 20 years' servitude in the American colonies for participation in the Monmouth rebellion in England. Among the passengers on board the ship on which he is sent across are Roger Fairfax, wealthy Maryland planter; his niece, Dorothy Fairfax, and Lieutenant Sanches, a Spaniard, who became acquainted with the Fairfaxes in London. Carlyle meets Dorothy, who informs him her uncle has bought his services. Sanchez shows himself an enemy of Carlyle. The Fairfax party, now on its own sloop in the Chesapeake bay, encounters a mysterious bark, the Namur of Rotterdam. Carlyle discovers that Sanchez is "Black Sanchez," planning to steal the Fairfax gold and abduct Dorothy. He fights Sanchez and leaves him for dead. In a battle with Sanchez' followers, however, he is overpowered and thrown into the bay. In a desperate effort to save Dorothy, Carlyle decides to swim to the Namur. By a ruse he gets aboard and mingles with the crew. The pirates return to the Namur with Dorothy, the captured gold and Sanchez, badly wounded but still alive. Carlyle finds a friend in Watkins, an English sailor.

"If I had any to use; after a sailor has been drunk there is not apt to be much left in his pockets."

"The fact is," he began doubtfully, "what you just said to me on deck chanced to be of interest. You are a navigator?"

"I was in command of ships for four years, senor; naturally I know navigation."

"I will soon learn if you have lied, and that will be a sorry day for you. I'll tell you, Gates, how matters stand aboard, and why I have need of your skill. Then you may take your choice—the forecastle or the cabin?"

"You invite me aft, senor?"

"I give you a chance to move your dunnage if you will do my work. Listen now. Sanchez has been badly hurt. It may be weeks before he leaves his cabin, if, indeed, he ever does. That leaves me in command with but one officer, the mulatto, LeVere. This might answer to take us safely to Porto Grande, as we could stand watch and watch, but Francois is no sailor. It was his part on board to train and lead the fighting men—he cannot navigate. Saint Christopher! I fear to leave him alone in charge of the deck while I snatch an hour's sleep."

"I see," I admitted. "And yourself, senor? You are a seaman?"

"Enough to get along, but not quite sure as to my figures. I have taken no sights except as we came north on this trip. 'Tis for this reason I need you—but you will play me no smart English trick, my man, or I'll have you by the heels at once. I know enough to verify your figures."

"I thought of no trick, Estada," I said coldly, now satisfied as to his purpose and confident of my own power. "You would have me as navigator, very well—at what terms?"

"With rating as first officer and your fair proportion of all spoils."

"You mean then to continue the course? To attack vessels on the high seas?"

"Why not?" sneeringly. "Are you too white-livered for that sort of job? If so, then you are no man for me. It is a long voyage to Porto Grande, and no reason why we should hurry home; the welcome there will be better if we bring chests of gold aboard. Ay, and the thought will put hope into the hearts of the crew; they are restless now from long waiting."

"But Captain Sanches? You have no surgeon, I am told. Will he not suffer from neglect of his wound?"

"Suffer? No more than under a leech ashore. All that can be done has been. His was a clean knife thrust, which has been washed, treated with lotion and bound up. No leech could do more."

"And my quarters—will they be aft?"

"You will have your choice of those at port. Come now—have you an answer ready?"

"I would be a fool not to have," heartily. "I am your man, Estada."

CHAPTER XIV.

I Warn Dorothy.

The Portuguese, evidently well pleased at my prompt acceptance of his proposal, talked on for some time, explaining to me something of the situation aboard the Namur, and pointing out what he believed to be our position on the chart. I asked a few questions, although I paid but little attention to what he said, my mind being busied with searching out his real purpose. No doubt the situation was very nearly as he described it to be—LeVere was no navigator, and Estada himself only an indifferent one. Yet at that the course to the West Indies was not a long one, and if the Portuguese had been able to bring the bark from there to the Chesapeake, the return voyage should not terrify him. No, that was not the object; he was planning to keep at sea, to waylay and attack merchant ships, and then, after a successful cruise, arrive at Porto Grande laden with spoils and hailed as a great leader. His plan was to dispose of Sanches—even to permit the Spaniard to die of his wounds; possibly even to hasten and assure that death by some secret resort to violence. No doubt LeVere was also concerned in the conspiracy and would profit by it, and possibly these two were likewise assured of the co-operation of the more reckless spirits among the crew. I remembered what Watkins had whispered to me forward—his suspicions of them both. He had been right; already the fuse was being laid, and, very fortunately, I happened to be chosen to help touch it off. The chance I had sought blindly was being plainly revealed.

It was evident enough, however, that Estada had no intention of trusting me immediately with his real motives. His confidence was limited, and his instructions related altogether to mere matters of ship routine. I could await developments. But I was becoming wearied by the man.

"I understand perfectly, senor," I broke in at last impatiently. "You will have to take for granted that I can enforce sea discipline and navigate your boat to whatever part of the ocean you desire to sail. All I need is your orders. This, I take it, is all you require of me?"

"Yes; I plan, you execute."

"Very good; now about myself," and I arose to my feet, determined to close the interview. "You say I may choose any stateroom on the port side?"

"They are all unoccupied, except one, used by the steward as a storeroom."

I opened the door and stepped out into the main cabin, the roll of charts under my arm. Estada didn't wait for me to question him.

"Captain Sanches' stateroom is aft," he said, with a wave of the hand. "There are two rooms. Jose is with him—a negro with a knack at nursing."

"Who else is quartered aft here?"

He ignored the one thing I most desired to learn, but I did not press it, believing I knew the answer already.

"LeVere has this middle stateroom, and Mendez the one forward. Mendez is third officer and carpenter. Just at present with LeVere required on deck he has charge of the men below. Not the working crew; they are quartered in the forecastle and are largely English and Swede. But we have to carry extra men, who bunk amidships—hellhounds to fight—mongrels of course. They are allowed on deck amidships when we are at sea, but are not encouraged to mingle with the sailors. We're over a powder magazine all the time, Gates—any spark might set it off."

I opened one of the doors opposite and glanced within. The interior differed but little from that of the stateroom occupied by Estada, except it was minus the table. No doubt they were all practically alike.

"This will do very well," I said quietly. "Now how about clothes? These I wear look rather rough for the new job."

"I'll send you the steward; he'll fix you out from the slop chest."

I was glad to see him go and closed the door on him with a sigh of relief. It had all occurred so quickly, almost without effort on my part, I could do little but wonder what strange occurrence would be next. What, indeed, was there for me to do except to await developments? Only one thing occurred to me—I must discover some means immediately of communicating with Dorothy Fairfax.

The importance of this could not be overestimated. With myself quartered aft and eating in the cabin we were bound to meet sooner or later, and the girl must previously be warned of my presence aboard, or in her first surprise at the recognition I should be instantly betrayed. If I was to serve the girl there must be, first of all, intelligent co-operation between us. She must not only know of my presence on the Namur but also the purpose actuating me. I had reached this conclusion when a light, hesitating knock sounded at the door.

Gunsanles entered, garments over his arm, and laid out the pieces carefully one by one, evidently proud of his selection.

"The clothes seem to be all right, steward," I said, "and I judge will fit. Now hunt me up first of all some thing to shave with, then some tobacco and a pipe, and—yes, wait a second—writing materials. And, by the way, there are two staterooms astern. Who occupies the one to starboard—Senor Estada?"

"No, senor; it is the young lady."

"Oh, the one brought aboard last night. Have you seen her?"

"Si, senor; she is English and good to look at, but she sit and stare out the stern port. She will not speak or eat. I take in her breakfast, but she touch not a morsel. So I tell Senor Estada, and he say, 'then bring her out to dinner with me; I'll make the hussy eat if I have to choke it down her dainty throat.'"

"Good; I'll have a look at her myself then. Now hurry up those things steward, and remember what I sent you after."

He brought the shaving set and writing materials first, explaining that he would have to go down into the lazaret and break open some packages for the tobacco and pipe. The moment the fellow disappeared I grasped the opportunity. I dashed off a note hurriedly—a brief line merely stating my presence on board and begging her not to exhibit surprise at meeting me. I had no time in which to explain or make clear the situation. With this folded and concealed in my hand I silently pushed open the door.

I crept swiftly forward, following the circle of the staterooms, until I came to the closed door of the one I sought aft. I bent here an instant, listening for some sound from within, but heard none. Beyond doubt the girl was within and alone, and I must trust her quick intelligence to respond to my written message. I thrust it through the narrow opening above the sill, and the moment it disappeared within stole swiftly back to my own room. The action had not been seen, and yet I had scarcely a moment to spare. Before I could lather my face the steward returned, bearing in his hands tobacco and pipe.

Estada, however, remained away longer than I had anticipated he would, and I was fully dressed and comfortably smoking before he came down from the deck and crossed the cabin to my partially open door.

"The starboard watch has been called," he said, "and you are to take charge of the deck, relieving LeVere. I waited to explain the situation to the men before you appeared. I suppose you are ready?"

"Ay, ay, senor," knocking the ashes out of my pipe and rising. He eyed my clothes disapprovingly.

"Rather a fancy rig, Gates, for a first officer on duty."

"Some style, I admit, senor, but they were all the steward offered me."

"You'll have to carry a hard fist, my man, to back up that costume aboard the Namur," he said coldly. "Those black devils are apt to mistake you for a plaything." I followed him up the stairs to the deck. LeVere was still on duty, and came forward and shook hands at my appearance.

"Rather glad I didn't drown you," he said, intending to be pleasant. "But hope you'll not run amuck in the after cabin."

"I shall try not to unless I have cause," I answered, looking him square in the eyes and determining to make my position clear at once. "Senor Estada tells me I am to relieve you. What is the course?"

"Sou'west by half sou'."

"Do you know your position?"

"Only in a general way. We have held an east by south course since leaving the capes, until an hour ago, making about ten knots."

"Very well; I will figure it out as best I can. There is nothing further to report?"

"No, senor; all has been as it is now."

He glanced toward Estada, not greatly pleased, I presume, with my brusqueness, yet finding nothing in either words or manner from which to evoke a quarrel. The latter had overheard our conversation, but he stood now with back toward us looking out on the sea off the port quarter. His silent indifference caused LeVere to shrug his shoulders and disappear down the ladder on his way below. I turned my face to the man at the wheel—it was the giant negro, Cochoee.

Peace or war? Dorothy is offered the choice by her brutal captors. Whichever she chooses, what hope is there for her amid the Wolves of the Sea? Carlyle, watching intently, longs for the chance to go to her aid.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

Long Day and Night.

The north pole has six months day and six months night, the sun apparently traveling in a circle around it from the time it appears in March until it disappears in September.

The hump of a camel is considered a great delicacy by the Arabs. It is white, [illegible], but tastes like beef.

New Spring Furs Make Their Bow

Now it seems we divide our furs into three seasons at least—spring, summer and winter. The newest furs are called spring furs. They are very new and they are very lovely. For the most part this spring, writes a prominent fashion correspondent, the newest neckpieces are soft little stoles and scarfs of mink, Hudson bay sable and fisher. One animal is used for the whole piece to give a smart effect and clasps the wearer's neck tight and close. No furry animal is ever softer and richer than the light brown sable. The little head and paws and tail are left on to attest the beauty of the little creature after the furriers have done their utmost to him. The small neckpieces for which the sables are used are worn by the greater number of women clasped in the back or at one side. These little fur pieces have not been so much in favor for the last few years as they were some years back, and because of their return to favor this spring we may say they are having a revival. I have seen no fur pieces in years prettier or more becoming to almost every wearer than the new ones made of three animals to give length sufficient to wrap around the throat and leave a long end on each side. Worn with one of the new, jaunty tricorne hats and a smart frock this sort of fur neckiace, if one may so style it, is intensely stylish and becoming. These are not very wide and as they are not flattened out, but are left the natural size, they make close-fitting collars of just the right height for the average neck.

Mink Stole and a Hudson Bay Seal Cape With Stole Ends Tied in the Back, Among the Distinctive Models Being Shown for Spring Wear.

All women know that furs worn close about the throat and well up to the chin are more becoming than the wide and flat pieces, however long and luxurious the hair of the latter may be.

It must be borne in mind that I am speaking now of the spring fur pieces, for later on we shall doubtless turn with the same enthusiasm we have shown the last three years toward our foxes and lynxes and wide, flat stoles of mole and mink, kolinsky and wolf. As it is, the smaller creatures are in just at this time and are being received with much enthusiasm.

Mole and Squirrel Blend.

It is astonishing how beautifully some skins combine, as I observed in a splendid new narrow stole of mole with squirrel trimming and big round fur balls finishing each end. This is to be worn much as the skating scarfs of Angora wool are worn, with one end thrown over a shoulder, or if one fancies, by belting in each end and letting the fur stole fall thus over each shoulder and down the front.

Russian sable is the fur de luxe, rich and equisite in texture, as in color. Three skins have been put together in a charming manner which reveals the coloring underneath as well as on top. Fisher resembles somewhat the pointed fox, but is not quite so soft. It is tipped with a tiny fleck along the hairs and thus has a silvery look which is attractive.

Fashion seems to lean heavily, however, to the Russian and Hudson Bay sables and because the Hudson Bay sable is smaller than the Russian kind it seems to be in the lead. Stone marten, too, is in demand. Though much larger, it has a lighter color underneath and is softer than these others.

Now as to the jackets, coatees and capes—it resolves itself literally into the matter of paying your money and taking your choice, for these little fur wraps are enchanting and really almost indispensable in the cool days of spring. Many of them have long, tight sleeves of the fur and others are nothing more than high and deep collars, sometimes with revers of a contrasting fur added.

White Furs Out.

We see no white furs at all; even ermine, which used to represent a "lady" of the highest degree, is having a quiet rest. Can it be because ermine is so closely associated with royalty and now royalty is just about to be no more? Anyway, ermine is entirely out of the running and white fox, too, has had its day and is quiet also for a while.

To return to the jackets and coatees—the most sumptuous and lovely wrap one can see on a spring day is made with a loose hanging cape-like back of the softest, richest Russian sables. The upper part has the skins forming a yoke and going across and around the shoulders rather than down the back as the other skins which form the lower part of the wrap do. The front is formed into a sort of waistcoat, and is held in by a girdle of fur—oh, yes, of course the fur things of this sort have waistcoats, too. Indeed, one or two I have seen are really nothing but little waistcoats with sleeves added, and one model, at least, is a waistcoat in front with pointed ends and pockets, fur buttons and has no sleeves at all. The back hangs perfectly straight and loose from the shoulders.

Distinctive Seal Piece.

Seal has not been entirely neglected. An unusual effect has been achieved by making a seal cape, stopping just at the waist in the back and finishing with long stole ends in front which pass around the waist and tie, or rather loop, in the back. The upper part of this smart wrap reveals a high upstanding collar, which comes well up to the ears.

A new moleskin cape has the usual cape effect in the back and a short jacket effect in front where it ties with heavy silken cords and tassels. The upper part of the front is built much like a surplice and buttons just above the cord at the waistline.

To turn the fur of the Belgian hare into a near-seal is the intention of some Canadian furriers this season. So there will be a new fur on the market for next fall, Sealine it is to be named. Some coats will be made of it, but capelines, coatees, and small furpieces are what it will show itself in chiefly. A lower price than some of the other dyed furs is promised as one of its attractions.

Of the expensive furs, gray squirrel seems at present to be the spring fur for fashionably dressed people.

Later on it will be interesting to see further developments, when the summer fur season is at hand.

Being Correctly Tailored.

One doesn't have to wait to grow up to be correctly tailored; one can be just 12 years old and wear a pleated skirt of shepherd's plaid, a plain box coat of black velvet trimmed with black silk braid, and a smart little hat in dark blue satin with a dashing smoked pearl buckle studding the front, says Vogue. There is a blouse, too, of white pussy-willow silk with tucks on the shoulders and a pleated collar and cuffs to match.

Separate Skirts Short.

Separate skirts are to be worn a little shorter than skirts of dresses or suits, and as narrow as the style and purpose will permit.

DAIRY PROFITS BIG

Splendid Returns From Farms In Western Canada.

Production of Butter and Cheese, Commanding Highest Prices, Increases Steadily — Live-Stock Raisers at Height of Prosperity.

Dairying is rapidly approaching one of the first positions in Western Canada agriculture. This does not apply particularly to any one of the three Western Canada provinces, as they all participate in the distinction.

A report recently published by the Alberta Department of Agriculture shows that in 1918, in spite of adverse conditions of labor and the high cost of feed, there was no decline in the industry. It will be interesting to know that the average number of milch cows per farm is 5.6. The total production of creamery butter in the provinces in 1918 was 9,100,000, as against 8,944,000 pounds in 1917.

No better evidence of the growth of Western Canada can be given than by the fact that in ten years the production of butter has increased from 2,500,000 pounds and of cheese from 88,570 pounds to 650,000 pounds. When it is known that in the production of grain so much energy was placed, and through which bank deposits were increased, homes made comfortable, farms carefully tilled, it will be realized that the increase in dairy production has been remarkable. During the past four years the price of the producer increased 75 per cent.

Further evidence of the great interest taken in the dairy and livestock industries is found in recent bull sales. At Edmonton the average price of 141 was $321.06; at Calgary 784 head were sold, bringing an average price of $269.13; while at Lacombe 179 bulls brought an average of $191.34. Sales in Manitoba a few days ago gave fully as good an average, or better. The sales were attended by farmers from all parts of the country. The high prices paid show that good stock was required, and, no matter the price, the farmer had the money to pay for it. As evidence of this we find that at a sale recently held at Carman, Manitoba, buyers were present from all parts of the province, besides some from Saskatchewan points. Five head of Herefords brought $590 each. A Shorthorn bull was sold for $700 and registered Shorthorn cows brought $500 each.

The establishment of creameries and cheese factories throughout the entire West is on the increase, and it will only be within the period of a very few years before Western Canada will occupy a position in the first ranks in the dairy production of the continent.

There is complete government supervision over creameries and cheese factories. The government takes care of the sales, looks after the manufacturer and employs as heads of the institutions highly paid and efficient managers.

It may well be said that the dairy industry of Western Canada is rapidly coming into its own. At present it is but an adjunct to the parent or foremost industry of the country—the growing of grain, but while an adjunct, it is a highly important one. The price of farm lands is gradually increasing, but not in the rapid proportion that has been shown in other countries. This rise in price does not materially increase the cost of production, nor lessen the profits that may be derived from an acre of wheat, oats or barley. The advance in the prices of these grains has more than doubled; the use or tractors has lessened the cost.

The reports from government sources are that the present year will show a great increase in immigration over the past four or five years. The man who has made a tour of inspection of the country will give you the reason. He will speak of the fertile soil, of the good crops, of the attractive climate, of compliance with the law, the splendid school system, the almost perfect social conditions that prevail. He will have visited settlements composed almost solely of Americans, who have built up their homes and villages, who have brought, and are applying today, their experience in economic land culture as applied to large tracts with the result that he obtains yields on $30 an acre land equal to that formerly produced on land that he had sold for $200 an acre. The story of his success he has sent back to his friends in his home state. They in turn follow him, and so it goes on, and immigration to Western Canada increases.—Advertisement.

Landlord's Experience With Glando

Mr. Haushalter, the well known and energetic proprietor of the Hotel Paulding, Paulding, Ohio, says that for several years he suffered from a sluggish liver, backache and kidney trouble. He felt so drowsy and languid he could scarcely drag. He says: "I tried a number of kidney pills and liver remedies and found no relief until I used Glando, the great gland tonic. It proved to be just what I needed. I am thoroughly convinced I would have been flat on my back if I had not used this treatment; but, instead of being laid up, I am feeling fine and looking after my business every day. If I feel any indication of my old trouble returning, I take a Glando treatment and that sets me right."

Mr. Haushalter was dying of self-poisoning caused by an inactive liver. This weakened the kidneys and other glands of the body. If he had not found a remedy that renewed glandular activity and removed the poison, his life undoubtedly have paid the penalty.

Glando Tonic is the only remedy of its kind on the market and its numerous cures is proof enough of its great value to mankind. It is sold by druggists or will be sent direct by the Gland-Aid Co., Fort Wayne, Ind. Large treatment, $1.00.

THIS WOMAN SAVED FROM AN OPERATION

By taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, One of Thousands of Such Cases.

Black River Falls, Wis.—"As Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound saved me from an operation, I cannot say enough in praise of it. I suffered from organic troubles and my side hurt me so I could hardly be up from my bed, and I was unable to do my housework. I had the best doctors in Eau Claire and they wanted me to have an operation, but Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound cured me so I did not need the operation, and I am telling all my friends about it."—Mrs. A. W. BINZER, Black River Falls, Wis.

It is just such experiences as that of Mrs. Binzer that has made this famous root and herb remedy a household word from ocean to ocean. Any woman who suffers from inflammation, ulceration, displacements, backache, nervousness, irregularities or "the blues" should not rest until she has given it a trial, and for special advice write Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass.

MY HEAD!

When the head feels thick or aches, when one feels all out-of-sorts—perhaps a coated tongue—it is the signal that poisons are accumulating in the system, and should be cleaned out at once.

Auto-intoxication can be best ascribed to our own neglect or carelessness. When the organs fail in the discharge of their duties, the putrefactive germs set in and generate toxins—actual poisons, which fill one's own body.

Sleepiness after meals, flushing of the face, extreme lassitude, biliousness, dizziness, sick headache, acidity of the stomach, heartburn, offensive breath, anemia, loss of weight and muscular power, decrease of vitality or lowering of resistance to infectious diseases, disturbance of the eye, dyspepsia, indigestion, gastritis, many forms of catarrh, asthma, ear affections and allied ailments result from auto-intoxication or self-poisoning.

Take castor oil, or procure at the drug store, a pleasant vegetable laxative, called Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets, composed of May-apple, aloes and jalap.

STAGGERING WASTE OF MILK CONTAINERS ADDS GREATLY TO COST OF DISTRIBUTION

This Picture, Taken by the Boston City Health Department, Illustrates How Milk Bottles Are Thrown Away by Consumers—Practice Is Insanitary, Wasteful and Adds to the Cost of Milk.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Who is to blame for the staggering waste of milk bottles in the United States—a waste amounting to millions of these containers annually, which adds to the cost of distribution, is a factor in the price of milk, and in the end is paid for by consumers? To answer this question and determine ways of remedying the situation, dairy specialists of the United States department of agriculture made an investigation. Responsibility for the waste, they learned, is widely distributed.

The average milk bottle is short-lived. It makes only about 17 trips before it is broken or lost, the specialists found. For every consumer who has a quart of milk delivered at the door each day, the dealer in the course of a year has to supply 20 new bottles. The investigation, conducted in 86 cities, shows that the average milk dealer buys 17,649 new bottles a month, and the large dealers buy more than 90,000 a month, which are largely, though not entirely, replacement stock.

Junk Dealers Profit.

In 16 cities included in the investigation, more than 8,000,000 sound milk bottles are collected annually from the city dumps. In some cities the business carried on by junk dealers is one of the most serious sources of milk-bottle loss. Not only do they sell the bottles to dealers in the city, but often ship them to other towns. Most states have no laws restricting this traffic.

Of 86 cities furnishing information to the department only 33 had milk bottle exchanges or places where milk bottles from all sources are sorted out and returned to the owner, provided he is a member of the exchange.

Few States Regulate.

Only 19 states have regulations governing the use of milk bottles, and of the 86 cities studied 72 reported the use by dealers of other dealers' bottles.

Various plans, inducements, and charges for bottles have been tried according to reports from 61 dealers and 47 health officers. The department of agriculture has summarized the most practical methods, as given above, and is now distributing the information to milk plants and other persons interested. Federal experts are still working on the problem of milk bottle losses and point out that the abnormal waste is ultimately borne by the public, which should take an active interest in the question, encouraging educational efforts and suitable regulations.

GRAIN MIXTURE TO FEED YOUNG CALVES

When One Month Old Quantity May Be Gradually Increased.

Experiments Tend to Show That Corn Should Be Cracked Rather Than Finely Ground—Use Corn in Feeding Alfalfa.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

When the calf is in its second week it should begin to receive grain, and when one month old it should eat about half a pound a day. After this time the quantity of grain may be gradually increased, feeding all that the calf will eat until three pounds a day is reached, probably during the third month. Grain fed to supplement separated milk should never be mixed with the milk. It is questionable whether the preparation of grain in any way, such as soaking or boiling, is advisable under most circumstances.

Wheat bran is eaten readily by young calves. Corn has an excellent physiological effect and to a great extent may take the place of fat removed from skim or separated milk. Experiments tend to show that corn fed to calves should be cracked rather than finely ground. Ground oats are good in grain mixtures when available, but in many cases cost much more per unit of feed than corn and bran. The following grain mixtures are recommended by dairy specialists of the United States department of agriculture:

(1) Three parts cracked corn and one part wheat bran.

(2) Three parts cracked corn, one part wheat bran, and one part ground oats.

(3) Three parts cracked corn, one part wheat bran, one part ground oats, and one part linseed meal.

(4) Five parts cracked corn, one part wheat bran, one part ground oats, and one part blood meal.

(5) Oats, ground.

Clover hay, alfalfa hay, or the most palatable roughage available should be given the calf after the second week. Alfalfa is likely to cause scours, and should be fed sparingly at first and increased only after the calf gets accustomed to it. At first hay should be furnished only a handful at a time, and be placed so that it cannot be soiled. For the first six months, at least, the calf should receive all the roughage of good quality that it will eat up clean. When the calf has access to good pasture during the first six months, it need not receive other roughage. It is not advisable, however, to have the calf under two months of age on pasture in the early spring.

FLORIDA RAISING MORE HOGS

Sharp Upward Curve in Production Is Seen by Specialist—Increase in Pure-Breds.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Production of hogs in Florida is taking a sharp upward curve, according to reports recently compiled by the extension specialist of the United States department of agriculture, who is working in Florida in co-operation with the state agricultural college. Twenty-seven hog-growing counties reporting show an average increase of 58.54 per cent during the year 1918. Holmes county leads with an estimated increase of 200 per cent; Brevard county is second, with 125 per cent increase; while Taylor and Madison counties each reported 100 per cent increase.

All counties reported that the farmers were successfully growing their own supply of feed, such as corn, beans, cowpeas, chufas, oats, rye, rape, sweet potatoes and soy beans. Records on file in the office of the state boy's club agent show that those counties reporting the greatest increase in pure-bred swine and the lowest increase in scrub and grade hogs are those counties in which the boys' pig club work has been established longest, and is being pushed hardest by the county agents.

LESSON FOR MAY 4

MAN MADE IN THE IMAGE OF GOD.

LESSON TEXTS—Genesis 21:26-28; Ephesians 4:20-24; Genesis 2:7-9.

GOLDEN TEXT—God created man in his own image.—Gen. 1:27.

DEVOTIONAL READING—Psalms 8.

PRIMARY TOPIC—God Our Creator and Father.

JUNIOR TOPIC—What God Expects From His Children.

INTERMEDIATE TOPIC—Loyalty to Our Heavenly Father.

SENIOR AND ADULT TOPIC—The Dignity and Worth of Man.

I. The Creation of Man (Gen. 1:26-28).

1. Time—when the earth, his home, was ready for him. The order in creation shows design on the part of God. He anticipated man's need in storing the coal in the earth, piling up minerals in the rocks, storing electricity everywhere, causing the water to gush from the valleys and hillsides, preparing plants and herbs for the healing of man's injuries and food and raiment adapted to every climatic condition.

2. His nature (vv. 26, 27). He was created in the likeness and image of God. This act was preceded by a special counsel of the Godhead. It was said, "Let us make man." This precludes the foolish and wicked assumption that man ascended from or through the brute. He came into being by a special creative act of God. This creative act is confirmed by Christ (Matt. 19:4; Mark 10:6). With such testimony we can dismiss the evolution theory as to man's origin as a human vagary. This likeness and image is not physical and bodily, but intellectual, (Eph. 4:24), and moral, (Col. 3:10). Man is spirit, soul and body (1 Thess. 5:23). God's likeness is reflected in man's tripartite nature. As there is a trinity and unity in God, so there is a trinity and unity in man. Spirit is the highest part of man, that which makes it possible for him to know God. The soul is man's self-conscious life, the seat of his emotions and desires. The body is the seat of the senses, the agency by which he knows the world. God made man with a personality capable of having fellowship with himself, with whom he could share his glory.

3. His rank and power (vv. 26, 28). Man, the last in creation, was placed above all else, over all the rest of creation. Being in the likeness and image of God, he was fitted to rule. How far short man comes of living up to the position given him by the Creator! The first man was not a savage, neither a baby. Fresh from the Creator's hands he possessed such lofty powers of intellect as to enable him to name the beasts as they passed before him, (Gen. 2:19, 20).

II. Man Alone in Paradise (Gen. 2:7-9).

Adam had a most beautiful place in which to live. "Pleasant to the eyes, and good for food" describes his surroundings. His environment was in keeping with his nature. Eden was only fit for him in an unfallen state. As soon as his nature was wrecked, out he must go. Paradise with all its splendor could not satisfy man. His heart was desolate. Reciprocal love is the only thing that can satisfy the heart of man. Animals of all varieties surrounded him, but none were adapted to be his companions. To accentuate this need God caused the animals to pass before Adam. He was differentiated from all the animals in that he was a personality. He was endowed with the power of love, therefore only a being who could love in return could satisfy him. To meet this need woman was made for man. They had minds alike; they had spiritual natures alike; therefore they could commune together about the things that surrounded them and about God.

Man was made from the dust of the ground, and woman was taken from his side. She is therefore one remove further from the earth than man. The fact that woman was made from man's rib points to unity, similarity and equality. God charged this first pair with the responsibility of replenishing the earth, (Gen. 1:28). Marriage is a divine institution and most sacred; for God made them male and female and performed the first marriage ceremony. In view of this, polygamy and divorce are grossly criminal. Marriage is the fountain-head of all life, religious, social and national, therefore corruption here is most fatal.

A Joy Forever.

An aspiration is a joy forever. To have many of these is to be spiritually rich.—Stevenson.

Motives.

Mr. Gladstone was once heard to remark that if all the wits of men were to be united in one brain, that man would be unable to appraise with perfect justice any single moral action. "The shades of the rainbow," he wrote, "are not so nice, the sands of the seashore are not such a multitude, as are the subtle, shifting, blending forms of thought and of circumstances that go to determine the character of one act. But there is one that seeth plainly and judgeth righteously."

OLD AGE STARTS WITH YOUR KIDNEYS

Science says that old age begins with weakened kidneys and digestive organs.

This being true, it is easy to believe that by keeping the kidneys and digestive organs cleansed and in proper working order old age can be deferred and life prolonged far beyond that enjoyed by the average person.

For over 200 years GOLD MEDAL Haarlem Oil has been relieving the weaknesses and disability due to advancing years. It is a standard old-time home remedy and needs no introduction. GOLD MEDAL Haarlem Oil is inclosed in odorless, tasteless capsules containing about 5 drops each. Take them as you would a pill, with a swallow of water. The oil stimulates the kidney action and enables the organs to throw off the poisons which cause premature old age. New life and strength increase as you continue the treatment. When completely restored continue taking a capsule or two each day. GOLD MEDAL Haarlem Oil Capsules will keep you in health and vigor and prevent a return of the disease.

Do not wait until old age or disease have settled down for good. At the first sign that your kidneys are not working properly, go to your druggist and get a box of GOLD MEDAL Haarlem Oil Capsules. Money refunded if they do not help you. Three sizes. But remember to ask for the original imported GOLD MEDAL brand. In sealed packages.

HAPPY DREAM COMES TRUE

Her Hope of Six Months Realized in a Few Weeks After She Started Taking Pepgen.

This is the delightful experience of Miss Myrtle Johnson, 1216 Seventh street, Muncie, Ind.: "For six months," says Miss Johnson, "I suffered with nervous dyspepsia. I took all manner of remedies without avail. Even dieting did not help me. Food in any form was absolutely repellent at most times, and worst of all was the constant nerve strain. And then came the joyful surprise. It seemed as if a happy dream came true. After the first few doses of Pepgen I was relieved and my hope of six months was realized. I could almost feel new strength running through my body. My appetite returned and I could eat a hearty meal with relish. I did not have any fear, as bedtime approached, of a sleepless night, and when morning came I awoke refreshed. I have gained five pounds."

Work Too Hard?

This time of the year finds everyone hurrying to get the home cleaned up for summer. It's a pleasure, too, when you're well, but no man or woman with a "bad back" enjoys doing anything. If your back is lame, if sharp twinges catch you when lifting and you feel tired and worn out, kidney weakness is likely causing your trouble. Don't wait! Delay may cause gravel, dropsy or Bright's disease. Doan's Kidney Pills have helped people the world over.

My kidneys began acting regularly and the backache left me. Doan's cured me permanently."

PRESIDENT WILSON TELLS POSITION ON ADRIATIC QUESTION

Declares Italy Not Entitled to Fiume; Latins Defiant.

ROME CALLS CHIEFS HOME

Premier Orlando Says: "We Will Hold What We Have"—U. S. President Declares 14 Points Are Basis of Peace.

Paris, April 24.—The Italian vice admiral, Thaon Di Revel, former chief of staff, has left Paris for Rome. Gen. Armando Diaz, commander in chief of the Italian armies, it is announced, also is leaving.

"I have not yet decided whether to reply to President Wilson with a statement or with an act," was Premier Orlando's remark when the Wilson statement was translated to him.

The Italian peace headquarters is practically unanimous in the belief that the president's statement means that Italy must withdraw from the peace conference.

"We have no peace terms to make with Germany, except a trifling bill for reparations," an Italian diplomat said. "We can arrange that any time or let it go. We can't very well make peace with Austria, as the Austro-Hungarian empire doesn't exist. We can, however, return to Rome and keep what we have, which is all we demand."

President's Statement.

In a statement issued by President Wilson explaining his position on the Adriatic question he declares that Fiume cannot become a part of Italy. The text of the statement follows:

"In view of the capital importance of the questions affected, and in order to throw all possible light upon what is involved in their settlement, I hope that the following statement will contribute to the final formation of opinion and to a satisfactory solution.

"When Italy entered the war she entered upon the basis of a definite private understanding with Great Britain and France, now known as the pact of London. Since that time the whole face of circumstances has been altered. Many other powers, great and small, have entered the struggle with no knowledge of that private understanding.

"The Austro-Hungarian empire, then the enemy of Europe, and at whose expense the pact of London was to be kept in the event of victory, has gone to pieces and no longer exists. Not only that, but the several parts of that empire, it is agreed now by Italy and all her associates, are to be erected into independent states and associated in a league of nations, not with those who were recently our enemies, but with Italy herself and the powers that stood with Italy in the great war for liberty.

"We are to establish their liberty as well as our own. They are to be among the smaller states whose interests are henceforth to be safeguarded as scrupulously as the interests of the most powerful states.

How War Ended.

"The war was ended, moreover, by proposing to Germany an armistice and peace which should be founded on certain clearly defined principles which set up a new order of right and justice. Upon those principles the peace with Germany has been conceived, not only, but formulated. Upon those principles it will be effected.

"We cannot ask the great body of powers to propose and effect peace with Austria and establish a new basis of independence and right in the states which originally constituted the Austro-Hungarian empire and in the states of the Balkan group on principles of another kind. We must apply the same principles to the settlement of Europe in those quarters that we have applied in the peace with Germany.

"It was upon the explicit avowal of those principles that the initiative for peace was taken. It is upon them that the whole structure of peace must rest.

"If those principles are to be adhered to Fiume must serve as the outlet of the commerce, not of Italy, but of the land to the north and northeast of that port; Hungary, Bohemia, Roumania and the states of the new Jugo-Slav group. To assign Fiume to Italy would be to create the feeling that we have deliberately put the port upon which all those countries chiefly depend for their access to the Mediterranean in the hands of a power of which it did not form an integral part and whose sovereignty, if set up there, must inevitably seem foreign, not domestic or identified with the commercial and industrial life, of the regions which the port must serve. It is for that reason, no doubt, that Fiume was not included in the pact of London, but there definitely assigned to the Croatians.

"And the reason why the line of the pact of London swept about many of the islands on the eastern coast of the Adriatic and around the portion of the Dalmatian coast which lies most open to the sea was not only that here and there on those islands, and here and there on that coast, there are bodies of people of Italian blood and connection, but also, and no doubt chiefly, because of the extraordinary military importance of the islands and of the control of the waters which they command.

"And on the north and northeast her natural frontiers are completely restored, along with the whole sweep of the Alps from northwest to southeast to the very end of the Istrian peninsula, including all the great watershed within which Triest and Pola lie, and all the fair regions whose face nature has turned towards the great peninsula upon which the historic life of the Latin people has been worked out through centuries of famous story ever since Rome was first set upon her seven hills.

"Her ancient unity is restored. Her lines are extended to the great walls which are her natural defense. It is within her choice to be surrounded by friends; to exhibit to the newly liberated peoples across the Adriatic that noblest quality of greatness, magnanimity, friendly generosity, the preference of justice over interest.

"The nations associated with her, the nations that know nothing of the pact of London or of any other special understanding that lies at the beginning of this great struggle, and who have made their supreme sacrifice also in the interest, not of national advantage or defense, but of the settled peace of the world, are now united with her older associates in urging her to assume a leadership which cannot be mistaken in the new order of Europe.

U. S. Italy's Friend.

"America is Italy's friend. Her people are drawn, millions strong, from Italy's own fair countryside. She is linked in blood, as well as in affection, with the Italian people. Such ties can never be broken. And America was privileged, by the generous commission of her associates in the war, to initiate the peace we are about to consummate—to initiate it upon terms which she had herself formulated and in which I was her spokesman.

"The compulsion is upon her to square every decision she takes a part in with those principles. She can do nothing else. She trusts Italy, and in her trust believes that Italy will ask nothing of her that cannot be made unmistakably consistent with those sacred obligations.

"The interests are not now in question, but the rights of peoples, of states new and old, of liberated peoples and peoples whose rulers have never accounted them worthy of a right; above all, the right of the world to peace and to such settlements of interest as shall make peace secure.

"These, and these only, are the principles for which America has fought. These, and these only, are the principles upon which she can consent to make peace. Only upon these principles, she hopes and believes, will the people of Italy ask her to make peace."

America's peace delegates are not alarmed over possible effects of the Italian situation at home. In other quarters anxiety is freely expressed lest Rome-inspired agitation might spread to the Italian colonies in the various big American cities, but it is generally believed this sort of threat will blow up in the same way as did the German-American scare immediately prior to America's entry into the war.

As for Italy's threats of military action, they are not taken too seriously. The Italian money standards today are absolutely and solely maintained by the backing of the United States treasury, while her food situation also depends largely on American shipments. Application of economic pressure would be a very simple problem. Withdrawal by Italy from the peace conference would immediately result in her loss in the right to charter membership in the league of nations, in which case she might come at some future time as a new member, when the Adriatic question is settled.

"The Store Where Real Bargains Abound"

Business Logic

This nation—your country and ours—has an unpaid balance of some billions of dollars of war debt—for a victory we are now enjoying.

The nation must pay this debt, if it is to continue to exist as a nation among the nations of the world.

There are only two ways that the nation can secure the money to pay for this debt, by the sale of bonds or notes, and by taxes

Taxes are already high and yet are insufficient to meet our outstanding war obligations. Thereforoe, bond or notes, must be sold.

Again, there are only two ways that bonds or notes can be sold—to the banks and to the people.

If they are sold to the banks, then industry and commerce—your business will suffer. The banks would be unable to purchase several billion dollars worth of Victory Notes and still continue to loan money to business men at a fair rate and in sufficient quantities to supply their needs.

It is therefore, good business logic—your business and our business to invest in the Victory Notes as large as we can for America's welfare and for our own.

Outdoor Living Brings Health From Babyhood to Old Age

By SAMUEL G. DIXON, M. D.
Commissioner of Health of Pennsylvania

God breathed into his nostrils the breath of life and man became a living soul.—Genesis.

Air is life; without it man ceases to live. Living in impure air, his health gradually depreciates and he becomes a dyspeptic, predisposed to tuberculosis and other diseases. Often after suffering for years, during which time he is unable to enjoy the good things of life, he meets an untimely death.

The majority of us have to work in offices and buildings artificially heated during the cold season. Our places in which we spend so many hours during the winters and early spring days are far from having perfect ventilation. This therefore is the reason for us all to take advantage of mild weather conditions to get all the fresh air possible to build our physical bodies up so as to resist the unfavorable conditions we must submit to during the cold months of the year.

This should apply to all ages, especially including babyhood and on up to old age. It means outdoor living as much as possible both day and night. When compelled to be in buildings keep the windows up; otherwise you have dead pockets of air in your rooms at your homes and place of occupation.

Clean, well aired, homes built so as to admit of plenty of fresh air all the year around and outdoor living as much as possible during the summer, will do much to bring health to the home and just in proportion to your health your life will be worth living.

Obituary

DARIUS KOHLER HORN, son of Henry and Mary Horn, was born in Jeromeville, Ashland Co., Ohio, Dec. 6, 1846, and departed from this life April 25, 1919, at the age of 72 years, 4 months, 19 days.

He leaves a wife, son and daughter, five brothers—Walter S. Horn, of LeRoy, Minn.; John L. Horn, of Ft. Wayne; George A. Horn, Esra Horn and Frank A. Horn, of Spencerville, and many friends to mourn his passing.

The first eight years of his life was spent in Jeromeville after which his parents moved to a farm in Allen Co., Ind, in 1855, which was then very densely timbered. His early manhood was spent in helping to clear the forests and make his father's home inhabitable.

He was married to Mary J. Shutt of Allen Co., Ind., Feb. 11, 1873, to this union three children were born two daughters and one son, Lotie M. Horn, who died in infancy, and Geary W. Horn and Arizona L. Horn, of this place.

The deceased moved to his present home in the year 1875 where he spent the last 44 years of his life, moving among his fellow men in a quiet and unobstrusive way, loving nature in its visible forms but recognising and admiring with reverence the invisible and ommpotent forces to which all must bow.

His life needs not be eulogized his honesty, integrity and morality speaks for itself. His life is like an open book, read and known by all who knew him. His greatest aim was to follow the Golden Rule, "To do as you wish to be done by."

The funeral services were conducted at the residence Monday afternoon, April 28th., by the Rev. A. K. Mumma. His body was laid to rest in the Spencerville cemetery.

LODGE NOTES

Tuesday evening after the regular meeting of the Pythian sisters the following new members were initiated into the mysteries of the order: Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Rice, Mrs. Belle Ridgway, Mrs. Alta Freeburn, Mrs. Emma Freeburn, Mrs. Lucile Shroyer, Durwood Ridgway, F. R. Bowman and Dr. Price. A banquet was served in honor of the new members.

Officers Are Elected.

Mrs. Eva Sheffer entertained the final meeting of the Culture club, Wednesday evening of last week, at which twelve members responded at roll call, after which Mrs Sheffer conducted a parliamentary drill. The following officers were then elected to serve the coming year: President, Hazel Herrick; vice president, Franc Wiers; secretary, Esther Bowman; treasurer, Lena Maxwell; critic, Stella Baker; parliamentarian, Anna Rickett. Two new members were added to the roll, namely, Miss Nellie Shull and Mrs. Minnie Gee. Mixed candy was served.

Does Price Make Quality?

Here is a very pertinent question to be answered. If the above question is answered in the affirmative then our home mill has not discovered the key to success, and has been laboring under a load of mistaken ideas, that the people of St. Joe want to pay well and high for their living, and to hear people talk of the high cost of living is only a joke.

If we judge the people by the different high priced flours offered by our merchants, and urged upon their customers as being so much better than our home product, it dawns upon us that a grist mill in St. Joe is a nuisance, and should move to Kansas, Minnesota or some foreign country where it might become popular by making flour from DeKalb County wheat being shipped to some other state, made into flour and shipped back to St Joe as a superior grade of flour to that produced from the same wheat milled in St. Joe, under practically the same system. If we answer the question at the heading of this article by saying that price (High) makes quality then St Joe flour should retail at $2.00 for a 25 pound sack instead of $1.65 as it is now. Do not let your dealer pull the wool over your eyes and befuddle your judgement by saying to you that because a thing is made in Germany it is far superior to that made at home. Buy home made goods first and save transportation charges and double profits which you are paying for whenever you buy a foreign made flour.

Patronize your home flour mill where you can get fair play and an honest deal.

Heavy Rain Storm Sunday

The size of river and creek here gives conclusive evidence to the fact, that the heavy rain of Sunday was quite general. It is estimated that 2 inches of rain fell during the day besides that of Saturday. On Sunday the day begun with heavy showers and continued at frequent intervals until seven o'clock when the climax came in a wind storm and rain. Damages of every description are seen on every hand. Trees blown down, telephone wires twisted, bridges and culverts washed out, cellars were damaged by flood, and chimneys blown over, fences torn down, barns struck and some stock killed in sections of the county.

Another Soldiers Recept'on

Over four hundred people attended the reception at the Lutheran church on Wednesday evening that was given in honor of the returned soldier boys. The banquet was held in the large basement of the church which was followed by the crowd being invited upstairs, all available space being full. The meeting opened by singing America; prayer by Rev. Mumma; vocal duet Mesdames Minta Rhodes and Audra Wade; the welcome address was delivered by Rev. Wright followed by a number of war time choruses by the audience; song by the soldier boys; addresses were given by Arthur Emrick, Don Gorrell, Alfred Wasson, Rev. Lindstrom and Lieut. George Carroll of Garrett. There were eighteen boys present many recently returned from overseas. Those present besides the above named were Stanley Shutt, Forrest Kain, Beeks Erick, John Shutt, Henry Walter, Glenn Luce, Delt McKinley, Walter Coburn, Russel Gratz, Carl Watt, Mr. Holton, Samuel Wearley and Eugene Baker.

Howard Gee of Fort Wayne, joined his wife and daughter here Sunday, they having spent the past week with his parents, S. D. Gee and wife. He returned home Sunday evening while his family went to Hicksville Monday morning to visit relatives.

Dunkle Block Is Sold.

Last Friday Mrs. J. D. Leighty, became the owner of the H. L. Dunkle lots, formerly occupied by the Big Four Store and the Drug Store. Already work of clearing the debris has begun and it will only be a short time until the appearance of this prominent corner will be wonderfully changed.

Just what will be the action taken by Mrs. Leighty, concerning the erection of some modern store rooms, we have not learned, but you can rest assured that she has purchased the lots for a good purpose and that St. Joe will be the better off.

Mr. Dunkle, in a conversation with the editor stated he had refused an offer to sell the building site for a good sum of money, the business being a garage, but that in his judgement he would not be doing the right thing by St. Joe to do so, and that the site was worthy of a good business block. He said further that, had he desired to locate in business he would have rebuilt himself, but seeing that he did not, he would sell to some one who would give St. Joe what she deserved.

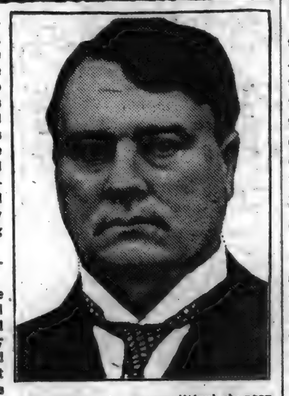
In the PUBLIC EYE

LLOYD GEORGE VS. NORTHCLIFFE



It looks like war to the knife between Lloyd George and Northcliffe. The British premier turned on the newspaper man viciously, and gave him a scarifying that left nothing to be said. The viscount was pictured as a disappointed seeker after glory and power, whose failure to achieve his ambition as dictator in war and peace had left him suffering from injured pride. "Diseased vanity" was the diagnosis of Lloyd George—diseased vanity that sought to avenge itself by creating discord and suspicion among the allies.

The premier has challenged a powerful foe, but challenged him boldly.

Lloyd George and Lord Northcliffe probably are the two most influential personal forces in British politics, and now that they are fiercely and publicly at war, the effect on Mr. Lloyd George's political fortunes and the test of the influence of the Northcliffe press which is expected to follow, will mark the beginning of a new political chapter, the developments of which are being discussed with the liveliest interest.

Each man is an eager fighter, and the battle between the little Welsh "giant" and the "newspaper Napoleon" is not likely to be a tame one.

ISHII'S DEPARTURE MEANS WHAT?

© Western Newspaper Union

Conflicting versions of the impending return of Viscount Ishii, the Japanese ambassador, to Tokyo, announced by the Japanese embassy, are the subject of animated speculation in American official and diplomatic circles.

According to the embassy, the ambassador is going home on leave to consult with his government on various questions relating to the relations of the United States and Japan, and is expected to return to Washington to resume his duties. The embassy was at pains to emphasize that there is no friction between the American and Japanese governments which might account for it.

The other version of the incident is that the ambassador has been recalled by his government, is taking his family with him, and will not return to Washington.

Viscount Ishii was sent to Washington by the Terauchi government, an imperialistic and militaristic ministry, which was driven from power a few months ago by popular disapproval of the Siberian adventure. Although Viscount Ishii successfully negotiated the Lansing-Ishii agreement, in which the United States recognized the special interest of Japan in China, he is said to be out of favor with the present Hara ministry, controlled by his political opponents.

LOUIS J. STASKO, "DOUGH" BOY

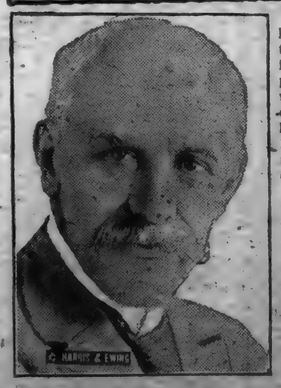
The United States army points with pride—though individual soldiers at times viewed with alarm—to Private Louis J. Stasko, champion crap shooter, A. E. F. He has been nine months in the army and now he is going to Joliet with $17,000 in his clothes, all of it won at craps. No; not to the penitentiary—Joliet, Ill., is his home. And no man can win $17,000 with "phony" dice in the A. E. F.; there are too many quick-eyed and hard-fisted players in the game.

Well, Private Stasko was born twenty-eight years ago in Joliet of Slav parents. He was earning $40 a week as a machinist in a rolling mill when Uncle Sam put him on his pay roll at $30 a month. Stasko had "rolled the bones" at home; after enlistment he spent his leisure and the other doughboys spent their money shooting craps.

From Joliet Stasko went to Jefferson barracks, Missouri. His first two weeks showed a profit of $1,100. Four weeks at Fort Leavenworth yielded another thousand. At Camp Merritt, the embarkation camp on the edge of New York, money was plenty and his winnings were large. At Havre, France, he trimmed the negro stevedores. At Knotty Ash, Liverpool, England, a distribution camp, he had a constant stream of new customers.

Stasko's working capital was $30. He never made a pass for more than $80. He is taking his $17,000 winnings home with him.

NANSEN TO FEED STARVING RUSSIA



© HARRIS & EWING

Dr. Fridtjof Nansen of Norway, head of the commission appointed by the peace conference to feed Russia, is famous by reason of his arctic explorations and experiences. His "Farthest North" (1897), which tells of his drifting for two years on the Fram, is his best-known book. Doctor Nansen's letter to Wilson, Lloyd George, Clemenceau and Orlando, suggesting the commission, reads in part:

"The present food situation in Russia, where hundreds of thousands of people are dying monthly from sheer starvation and disease, is one of the problems now uppermost in all men's minds. As it appears that no solution of this food question has so far been reached in any delegation, I would like to make a suggestion from a neutral point of view for the benefit of this gigantic misery, on purely humanitarian grounds.

"It would appear to me possible to organize a purely humanitarian committee for the provisioning of Russia; the foodstuffs and medical supplies to be paid for, perhaps to some considerable extent, by Russia itself, the justice of distribution to be guaranteed by a committee. The general make-up of the commission would be guaranteed by Norwegian, Swedish, and possibly Dutch, Danish and Swiss nationalities.

"It does not appear that the existing authorities in Russia would refuse the intervention of such a committee of a wholly nonpolitical order, devoted solely to the humanitarian service of saving life."

Doctor Nansen in conclusion points out that such a commission would raise no question of political negotiations.

America's Immortals

Most striking instances of gallantry for which the Distinguished Service Cross has been awarded

The only criticism that foreign military leaders had to make of the American soldiers was that they would not stop when their objective was reached. The records of the war department bear out this "criticism." They show that the American soldiers would not stop though they faced seemingly certain death from the hail of German machine gun bullets and German shrapnel. The story of these soldiers is told in the records of the men who were awarded the Distinguished Service Cross for conspicuous bravery on the field of battle. Below are the records of a few of these Americans who did not know when to stop.

FRANK B. STOCKTON,

Private, Co. E, 167th Infantry.

Private Stockton was decorated for unusual bravery in action near Landres-et-St. Georges, France, October 14, 1918. After working all morning in rescuing wounded soldiers, Private Stockton, a stretcher bearer, learned that a man from another company was lying wounded in a shell hole, one hundred yards in advance of the company's position. Ignoring all warnings as to the danger involved, he and another stretcher bearer crawled to the shell hole under violent machine gun fire and found that the man was so severely wounded that he could only be carried on a litter. Although the wounded soldier attempted to dissuade him from so doing, Private Stockton returned to our line, secured a litter and proceeded once more to the shell hole in direct view of the enemy and under the most intense fire from machine guns 250 yards away. He succeeded in reaching the shell hole safely, but as he was placing the wounded patient on the litter he was instantly killed. Private Stockton was a son of Rev. J. A. Stockton, New Decatur, Ala.

FREDERICK O. GASKINS,

Corporal, Company I, 118th Infantry.

The Distinguished Service Cross was awarded to Corp. Gaskins in recognition of distinguished gallantry resulting in his death in action near La Hale Meneresse, France, October 16, 1918. When the advance of his company was held up by two machine gun nests, Corp. Gaskins led his squad, entirely on his own initiative, in the face of intense machine gun fire, against an enemy post on the right flank. Followed by his men, he rushed the position, taking it and killing two of the gun crew. He then rushed a second post alone, with his rifle, killing one of the crew. He was himself killed before he could reach the post. Corp. Gaskins' home was in Chesterfield, S. C.

JACKSON D. BURKE,

Sergeant-Major, 1st Battalion, 28th Infantry.

Sergt.-Maj. Burke was decorated for the display of exceptional energy, bravery and loyalty to duty at Cantigny, France, May 28 to 30. At one period in the fight, it was necessary to send a message of great importance to the regimental commander. It was considered impossible for a runner to reach regimental headquarters, because of the intensity of the enemy fire. He, nevertheless, volunteered to carry the message; and, by crawling several hundred yards through machine gun fire, he successfully executed his mission. Sergt. Maj. Burke's home is at Maloneton, Ky.

ARTHUR J. FORREST,

Sergeant, Co. D, 354th Infantry.

Sergeant Forrest received the Distinguished Service Cross for conspicuous gallantry in action with the enemy near Remonville, France, November 1, 1918. While the progress of his company was held up by a rain of fire from six enemy machine guns, Sergeant Forrest alone went forward, working his way to within fifty yards of the nest before being discovered. Charging the nest, he drove out the entire company in disorder, killing one with his rifle. His home is in Hannibal, Mo.

KELAND BROWN,

Corporal, Company B, 61st Infantry.

Corporal Brown, whose home is at Iowa Falls, Ia., was decorated for unusual bravery in action on the Cote St. Germaine, France, November 5, 1918. He attacked a machine gun nest single-handed and in the face of heavy fire reduced the nest, capturing one prisoner. Later in the same day he patroled alone under heavy fire in advance of his company and attacked another machine gun position, capturing the gun and four prisoners.

THOMAS D. AMORY,

Second Lieutenant, 26th Infantry.

Lieutenant Amory (deceased) was awarded the Distinguished Service Cross for conspicuous gallantry in action near Verdun, France, October 2, 1918. Lieutenant Amory was detailed to lead a patrol on a hazardous and important mission of locating the main defense line of the enemy. Fighting his way under their heavy artillery and machine gun fire, and with no assistance from our batteries, he established his command two kilometers within the enemy territory. Although wounded and his small command badly cut to pieces and almost entirely surrounded, he refused to give up the ground he had taken, but by stubbornly resisting with his small detachment he finally succeeded in driving the enemy from this important position. His home was in Wilmington, Del.

DAVID B. BARKELEY,

Private, Co. A, 356th Infantry.

Private Barkeley (deceased) was decorated for conspicuous gallantry in action near Pouilly, France, November 9, 1918. When information was desired as to the enemy's position on the opposite side of the river Meuse, Private Barkeley, with another soldier, volunteered without hesitation and swam the river to reconnoiter the exact location. He succeeded in reaching the opposite bank, despite the evident determination of the enemy to prevent a crossing. Having obtained his information, he again entered the water for his return, but before his goal was reached, he was seized with cramps and drowned. His mother, Mrs. Antonio Barkeley, lives in San Antonio, Tex.

FRANK J. BART,

Private, Co. C, 9th Infantry.

Private Bart was decorated for conspicuous gallantry in action with the enemy near Medeah farm, France, October 8, 1918. Private Bart, being on duty as a company runner, when the advance was held up by machine gun fire, voluntarily picked up an automatic rifle, ran out ahead of the line, and silenced a hostile machine gun nest, killing the German gunners. The advance then continued and, when it was again hindered shortly afterward by another machine gun nest, this courageous soldier repeated his bold exploit by putting the second machine gun out of action. His home address is Newark, N. J.

ARTHUR L. WALTERS,

Sergeant, Company B, 2nd Ammunition Train.

Sergeant Walters risked his life to save others while on duty near Beaumont, France, November 9, 1918, thereby winning the Distinguished Service Cross. Sergeant Walters was in charge of a company of ammunition trucks which was halted in the town. An enemy shell struck the train and set one of the trucks on fire. Although knocked down by the explosion, Sergeant Walters quickly recovered himself and moved his convoy to safety, after which he returned and, jumping to the wheel of the blazing truck, drove to a place where it no longer endangered the lives of others. He then extinguished the fire, saving both truck and ammunition.

WALDO M. HATLER,

Sergeant, Co. B, 356th Infantry.

Sergeant Hatler was decorated for exceptional heroism in action near Pouilly, France, November 8, 1918. While a member of a patrol sent to reconnoiter the banks of the Meuse river, when all means of crossing the river had been destroyed, Sergeant Hatler and another soldier volunteered to swim across, though the other bank was held in force by the enemy. His companion was seized with the cramps caused by the cold water and drowned, but Sergeant Hatler continued on and, after securing the information desired, swam back again and made his report. Sergeant Hatler's home is in Neosho, Mo.

ABE L. ALLEN,

Corporal, Co. B, 28th Infantry.

Corporal Allen won the Distinguished Service Cross for bravery in action near Cantigny, France, May 22, 1918. During a heavy bombardment of the front line, although severely injured by the explosion of a shell, which buried two comrades, he promptly and courageously dug them out with his hands and took them to shelter, being subjected all the time to severe fire of shell and shrapnel. Corporal Allen's home is in Leesville, La.

GAIL H. SAGER,

Corporal, Co. D, 108th Infantry.

Corporal Sager was decorated for extraordinary heroism in action near Ronssoy, France, September 29, 1918. Upon being wounded in the hand, Corporal Sager bandaged the wound himself and advancing alone toward machine gun nests, which were holding up his company, was killed after proceeding only a short distance. Corporal Sager's widow lives in Buffalo, N. Y.

Was He From Kentucky?

The principal of a certain high school found a cigarette stub in the basement of the building. She began an investigation. From one room to another she went, taking the names of all the boys that had ever smoked. Finally she came to the door of one of the second-grade rooms.

"There surely isn't any use of my going in here," she said to a companion. "They are all too tiny even to think of such a thing."

But finally she went on into the room and put her question. Then up went a hand and a treble voice piped out: "Do you want the names of the boys who chaw tobacker, too?"—Indianapolis News.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

(By REV. P. B. FITZWATER, D. D., Teacher of English Bible in the Moody Bible Institute of Chicago.)

(Copyright, 1919, by Western Newspaper Union.)

LESSON FOR MAY 11.

SIN AND ITS CONSEQUENCES.

LESSON TEXT—Genesis 3:1-24.

GOLDEN TEXT—The wages of sin is death; but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord.—Rom. 6:23.

DEVOTIONAL READING—Psalms 51: 1-13.

ADDITIONAL MATERIAL—Rom. 1:18-32; James 1:15.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Disobeying Our Heavenly Father.

JUNIOR TOPIC—How Disobedience Separates Us From God.

INTERMEDIATE TOPIC — Destructive Power of Sin.

SENIOR AND ADULT TOPIC—The Nature and Results of Sin.

An outlook upon the world proves that man is not what he should be. Then, too, apart from gospel influence there is no sign of improvement. The only way of accounting for the discrepancy between what man is and what he should be is by the Fall. This is the way that the Bible accounts for it. The introduction of sin is the answer.

I. The Temptation (Gen 3:1-6).

Man possessed a free will, in the exercise of which he turned away from God and his commandment. This was done at the instance of the devil working through the serpent. He did not appear as he really was, but in disguise. The method employed was (1) finding the woman while alone; (2) insinuating doubt into her mind as to God's word and love. At his suggestion she began to believe that God did not mean what he said, and that he was unkind in placing restrictions upon them. In this the devil slandered God, even accusing the Almighty of jealousy and fraud. (3) Appeal to innocent appetite. (4) She gazed upon the fruit which God had forbidden. Looking soon begat lust. (5) She lusted after that which God had forbidden. That which God has forbidden should not be looked at lest the flesh should lust for it.

II. The Fall (3:6-8).

From lusting to indulgence was a short step. This act of disobedience has brought on all the world's woe and misery. Eve not only disobeyed, but involved Adam in her sin. Aspiring to be gods, they became the slaves of sin. They came to know good and evil, but by sad experience. They knew sin without the power to free themselves from it.

III. The Consequences of the Fall (3:9-24).

1. The disturbed relationship with God (vv. 9, 10). The familiar intercourse which man enjoyed with the Almighty was marred and broken by sin. Sin makes life intolerable in the divine presence. Adam and Eve not only hid from God's presence, but Adam began to make excuses and even laid the blame on God.

2. The serpent was degraded and henceforth became a type of sin and Satan (v. 14; cf. Num. 21:9; John 8:44; Rev. 12:9). This doom was pronounced without trial. In the case of man it was not so.

3. The undying enmity between the two seeds (v. 15; cf. John 8:40-45; Matt. 23:33). The antagonism thus begun reached its climax in the crucifixion of Christ. Satan's seed has been ever since endeavoring to destroy the Lord's work and his workers.

4. The ultimate victory of the woman's seed (v. 15). Satan harnassed the woman's seed; bruised his heel, but finally the stroke was made which crushed the serpent's head (John 12: 31; Heb. 2:14; 1 John 3:8). This was the first gleam of the glorious light of the gospel of Christ. The victory was marvelous, but the cost was infinite (Isa. 53; 2 Cor. 5:21).

5. Judgment upon the woman (v. 16). This relates to her as a wife and mother; also to her subordination to man. This is God's decree, and all efforts of freeing one's self from it are fightings against God.

6. Man's new relationship to the earth (vv. 17-19). The earth was cursed on his account. Because of the rank growth of thorns and thistles man must make an increased effort to exist. Man with his sinful nature would be in a bad state without the necessity of toil (Rom. 8:19-22).

7. Death (v. 19). This includes physical and spiritual death—both the result of sin.

8. Expulsion from the garden (v. 24). This was an act of great mercy. To have partaken of the tree of life and live forever in a sinful state would have been intolerable.

Exercise Is Necessary.

If a man does not exercise his arm he develops no biceps muscle; and if a man does not exercise his soul he acquires no muscle in his soul, no strength of character, no vigor of moral fiber, no beauty of spiritual growth.—Henry Drummond.

Sermon Crowded Out.

Go to that little church of yours and quit your hankering for the fine music and singing and pomp and splendor of the large churches in the city. By the time they get through with their preludes and interludes and postludes there won't be much time for a sermon.

Joy Is to Obey the Laws.

The stars of heaven are free because, in amplitude of liberty, their joy is to obey the laws.—William Watson.

SCRAPS of HUMOR

His Unleft Legacy.

"Did your friend Joyner leave many personal belongings?" inquired Mr. Askett.

"Many is right," responded Mr. Tellum, "he belonged to half a dozen lodges, the Red Cross, a zouave company, a drum corps, a church, a singing society and a suit pressing club."

The Garrulous Patient.

"You needn't tell me any more of your symptoms. I know what's the matter with you."

"But, doc, let me get 'em out of my system."

"That's why you are here, my friend. You can't get those symptoms out of your system by talking about them."

Any Old Job.

A convivialist plying the intriguing streets of Boston with a full cargo of liquor on board observed a legend which ran, "Murderer Wanted," and taking time by the forelock, entered the station house and said to the sergeant:

"I'll take that job."—Cartoons Magazine.

No Classical Aspirations.

"Your speech was a classic," said the admiring friend.

"Too bad!" exclaimed Senator Sorghum; "but I did my best. I was particularly anxious to keep it from being neatly bound and stowed away in a library for future generations. I wanted the public to get it right now while it's hot."

"You sometimes smoke cigarettes?"

"Yes," replied Miss Cayenne. "I am not different from other women. I do not hesitate to sacrifice my personal comfort when it comes to keeping up appearances."

IN THE WRONG PLACE.

"Do you think our paper has enough nonsense in it?"

"Certainly, the editorials are full of it."

Work Already Done.

It isn't the job we intend to do,
Or the labor we've just begun,
That puts us right on the ledger sheet;
It's the work we really have done.

Naturally.

"I know a man who always gives cut rates for his work."

"Who is he?"

"The barber."

Too Late.

"I would like to speak to your father for a few minutes if he is at liberty."

"He isn't. Ma just interned him."

The Rage Now.

Patient—From what you say, doctor, it seems that I mustn't eat anything.

Doctor Emdee (absently)—Yes; and be sure you chew it thoroughly.

He Did.

"Did you work up a good appetite on the farm?"

"Did I? I ate roasting ears until a growth of corn silk came out and covered my bald spot."

Held on to the Money.

Mrs. Thomas—Do you believe that charity begins at home?

Mrs. Wilson—Well, very rarely in my husband's case.

Simple Enough.

"How did such a new writer acquire such a flowing style?"

"That's easy. He makes it a rule to use a fountain pen."

A Harder Thing.

Grey—How are you getting along in the stock market?

Green—Well, I'll tell you. I traded a lot of money for experience and now I'm trying to reverse the process.

Deep Sea Stuff.

Dear Starr—I have read a good deal about that beautiful hair these mermaids have. Can you tell me any more about it?—Adenoid.

Answer—Nope, Addie, except to surmise that it is wavy.

Practice Makes Perfect.

She (after his proposal)—Did you ever say anything like this to a girl before?

He—Heavens! You don't suppose it could be done like that the first time, do you?

Peace or War? Dorothy Is Forced to Choose.

Synopsis — Geoffry Carlyle, master of sailing ships at twenty-six, is sentenced to 20 years' servitude in the American colonies for participation in the Monmouth rebellion in England. Among the passengers on board the ship on which he is sent across are Roger Fairfax, wealthy Maryland planter; his niece, Dorothy Fairfax, and Lieutenant Sanches, a Spaniard, who became acquainted with the Fairfaxes in London. Carlyle meets Dorothy, who informs him her uncle has bought his services. Sanches shows himself an enemy of Carlyle. The Fairfax party, now on its own sloop in the Chesapeake bay, encounters a mysterious bark, the Namur of Rotterdam. Carlyle discovers that Sanchez is "Black Sanches," planning to steal the Fairfax gold and abduct Dorothy. He fights Sanches and leaves him for dead. In a battle with Sanches' followers, however, he is overpowered and thrown into the bay. In a desperate effort to save Dorothy, Carlyle decides to swim to the Namur. By a ruse he gets aboard and mingles with the crew. The pirates return to the Namur with Dorothy, the captured gold and Sanchez, badly wounded but still alive. Carlyle finds a friend in Watkins, an English sailor. Estada, acting captain, makes Carlyle first mate of the Namur.

CHAPTER XV.

The Cabin of the Namur.

Both huge, black hands grasped the spokes, and it was evident that it required all his giant strength to control the bucking wheel. He was an ugly-looking brute, the lower portion of his face apelike and the wool growing so low as to leave him scarcely an inch of forehead. His eyes lifted an instant from the binnacle card to glance at me curiously. They exhibited no flash of recognition.

For half an hour Estada hung about aft, apparently paying no attention to me, and yet watching my movements closely. There was little to be done, but I thought it best to keep the watch reasonably busy, so they might thus learn that I knew my work. They proved prompt and capable enough, although I was eyed with some curiosity when I first went forward, and, no doubt, was very thoroughly discussed behind my back. The idlers amidships were a totally different class—a mongrel scum, profanely chatting in Spanish or swaggering about the deck, their very looks a challenge. However, they kept out of my way, and I found no occasion to interfere with their diversions. After Estada left the deck the majority amused themselves gambling, and as I had received no orders to interfere I permitted the games to proceed. Mendez interfered only once on occasion of a brief fight. My only instructions from the Portuguese on his going below was to call him at once if a sail was sighted. Apparently he was satisfied of my ability to command the deck.

No occasion to call him arose during my watch. It was still daylight, but with a purple gleam across the waters, when LeVere arrived on deck for my relief. We were talking together abaft the wheel when Estada appeared in the companionway.

"Every promise of a clear night," he said, glancing about at the horizon. "Better change the course two points, LeVere; we are lying in too close to the coast for our purpose. The table call will come very shortly, Senor Gates."

I washed up hastily in my stateroom and came out into the cabin perplexed as to what might occur within the next few moments. Yet whatever the result there was no avoiding it. My every move was one of extreme caution.

Estada and Estevan awaited me. The latter was all rigged out, and with smooth black hair oiled and plastered down upon his forehead. I never beheld a more disagreeable face, or one which so thoroughly revealed the nature of a man. As I touched his hand, at Estada's brief introduction, it was as if I fingered a snake.

"This is your chair, Gates, and you will find we live well aboard the Neaur—wine, women and song—hey, Manuel? Why not, when all are at command? Steward, you told the lady what my orders were. Then bid her be seated."

We stood in silence, as Gunsaules crossed the deck and inserted a key in the after stateroom door. Manuel was grinning in full enjoyment, but the expression on the face of Estada was that of grim cruelty. I felt my hands grip like iron on my chair back and my teeth clinch in restraint. God, but I would have liked to grip the fellow where he stood—all the bottled-up hatred in my soul struggling for action. Yet that would only mean the death of all hope, and I turned my eyes away from him and stared with the others at the opening door.

Out into the full light of the cabin the woman came and halted barely a step in advance of the steward, her head uplifted proudly, her eyes on us. Never before had I realized her beauty, her personality, as I did then. Her posture was not that of defiance nor of surrender; she stood as a woman defending her right to respect, sustained by a wonderful courage. I caught her glance, but there was no recognition in it; not by the flicker of an eyelid did she betray surprise, and yet in some mysterious manner a flash of intelligence passed between us. It was all instantaneous, for her gaze seemed to concentrate on Estada as though she knew him as leader.

"You sent for me? For what?" she asked, her Spanish clear and well chosen.

"To join us at meal," he answered unmoved. "It is better than to remain alone."

"Better! You must have a strange opinion of me to believe I would sit with murderers and thieves."

"Harsh words, senorita," and Estada grinned grimly. "Yet I expected them. There are many trades in the world by which men are robbed. We only work at the one we like best; nor will I discuss that with you. However, senorita, I can say that we have taken no lives in this last affair."

"No lives!" in sudden, incredulous surprise. "You mean my uncle lives?"

"If you refer to Fairfax—the one in whose room the chest was hidden, I can only reply truthfully that he lives.

"Peace or War?"

One of my men struck him down, but it was not a death blow. If that be the reason of your disdain there is no cause. This chair is held for you."

"But why was I brought away a prisoner? To be a plaything? A sport for your pleasure?"

"That was but the orders of our chief; we await his recovery to learn his purpose."

"Sanches! Was he your chief? A pirate?"

"A buccaneer; we prey on the enemies of Spain. It was at Captain Sanches' orders we waited the arrival of your vessel from England. He loved you; he would no doubt have dealt with you honorably; I have reason to believe that to be his purpose now. Nothing will change his purpose. He is that kind, and he has the power. He determined that if you would not come to him by choice you should be made to by force. You are here now by his orders and will remain until you consent to his purpose—all that remains for you to decide is whether you choose to be prisoner or guest aboard."

"And if he should die?"

Estada shrugged his shoulders indifferently.

"Who knows?"

Her lips tightened as though to hold back a cry while one hand pressed to the open door steadied her. There was a look in the searching eyes I did not like to see. It was a moment before she could control her voice.

"I have heard them call you Estada. Of what rank in this company are you?"

"I am Pedro Estada, formerly the first officer, now, by occasion of Captain Sanches' wound, in full command. These are two of my officers—Senor Gates, one of your own countrymen, and Manuel Estevan. And now that I have answered your questions, what is it to be between us—peace or war?"

Her eyes dropped, and I could distinctly note the trembling of her slender figure. When she slowly raised her glance once more it rested on my face as though seeking approval, guidance.

"If there be only the one choice," she said quietly. "I accept peace. I cannot live locked in that room alone, haunted by my thoughts and memories. If I pledge you my word, senor am I to enjoy the freedom of this cabin and the deck?"

Estada looked at us, a shade of doubt in his eyes. I made no sign, but Manuel nodded.

"Why not?" he asked in his harsh croak of a voice. "So long as we be at sea? What harm can the girl do?"

"Perhaps none; I will take a half chance, at least. You shall have the freedom of the cabin. So long as you keep your word, while as to the deck, we will consider that later. Prove you mean what you say by joining us here."

My recollection of that meal is not of words but of faces. Estada's eyes sought constantly the girl's face, and to my consternation exhibited an interest in her personality which promised trouble. I know not whether she noticed this awakening admiration, but she certainly played her part with quiet modesty. I believe that even the Portuguese reached the conclusion that she was not altogether regretful for this adventure and that it was safe for him to relax some degree of vigilance. His manner became more gracious, and long before the meal ended his language had a tendency to compliment and flatter. I contented myself with occasional sentences. The young woman sat directly across from me, our words overheard by all, and as I knew both men possessed some slight knowledge of English I dare not venture beyond commonplace conversation in that tongue. With quick wit she took her cue from me, so that nothing passed between us, either by word of mouth or glance of eye, to arouse suspicions.

Believing the feeling of confidence would be increased by such action, I was first to leave the table, and it being my watch below immediately retired to my room, noisily closing the door after me, yet refraining from letting the latch catch, thus enjoying a slight opening through which to both see and hear. Manuel did not linger long, making some excuse to go forward, but Estada remained for some time, endeavoring to entertain. His egotism made a fool of the man, yet even he finally became discouraged of making her comprehend his meaning and lapsed into a silence which gave her an excuse to retire. This was accomplished so graciously as to leave no sting, the fellow actually accompanying her to the door of her stateroom, bowing his compliments as she disappeared within. The fool actually believed he had made a conquest and preened himself like a turkey cock.

"Gunsaules, you need not lock the senorita in her room or guard her in any way hereafter. She is permitted to come and go as she pleases aboard."

Estada entered his own stateroom, leaving the door ajar. When he came out he had exchanged his coat for a rough jacket. Thus attired for a turn on deck, he disappeared through the companion.

CHAPTER XVI.

In Dorothy's Stateroom.

I stood crouched, with eye at the crack watchful of every movement in the lighted cabin, my own decision made. I must see and talk with Dorothy. Gunsaules turned down the light and departed along the passage leading amidships. A moment later I heard the sound of dishes grinding together preparatory to being washed. No better opportunity for action was likely to occur, although the situation was not without peril. I crept along close to the side walls, lifted the latch noiselessly, and slipped quickly within. There was no light, except a glimmer of stars through a large after port, but against this faint radiance she stood vaguely revealed. Her first thought must have been Estada, for there was a startled note in her challenge.

"Who are you? Why do you come here?"

"Speak low," I cautioned. "You must know my voice."

"Geoffry Carlyle!"

"Yes, but do not use that name—all hope depends on my remaining unknown. You welcome me?"

She came straight forward through the dim star shine, a spectral figure, with both hands outstretched.

"Welcome!" her tone that of intense sincerity. "Your presence gives me all the strength I have. But for you I should throw myself through that port into the sea. But I know not how you came here—tell me, you are not one of these wretches?"

"No; you must believe that first of all, and trust me."

"I do—but—but tell me all you can."

"Is there a divan here, or anywhere we can sit down together? I can see nothing in this darkness."

Carlyle saves Dorothy from death at the hands of a mysterious intruder but is unable to account for the sudden attack in the night. There is some dark plot behind it all. What will the morning disclose?

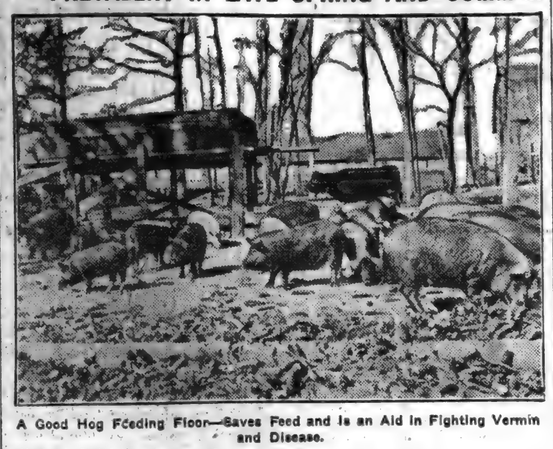
MORE OR LESS SERIOUS SWINE AILMENTS PREVALENT IN LATE SPRING AND SUMMER



A Good Hog Feeding Floor—Saves Feed and Is an Aid in Fighting Vermin and Disease.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Hogs are frequently troubled with a number of ailments more or less serious which, particularly in seasons of cholera outbreaks, go unnoticed or possibly are diagnosed as cholera itself. One ailment very prevalent in late spring and summer, especially in pigs, is necrobacillosis. While this disease assumes various forms the one commonly noted in herds are necrotic rhinitis, a condition generally known as "sniffles," and necrotic enteritis. The pigs affected by the first-named disease eat but little and sneeze repeatedly, often expelling a bloody material. Lesions are sharply defined by lumps or swellings occurring on some parts of the head or face, usually on the snout. Most effective treatment can be made when these first appear. They should be opened and the pus which they contain removed, and one of the following remedies applied in the opening with a syringe: Glycerin 15 parts and carbolic acid 1 part, or nitric acid 1 part and water 6 parts, or a 50 per cent solution of iodin.

Cholera Symptoms.

In the second form mentioned, necrotic enteritis, the animals affected develop symptoms somewhat akin to hog cholera. Often there is a lack of appetite, and while diarrhea is not constant, it is frequently noticed in the early development of this form. The pigs become unthrifty, emaciated, and weak. However, the absence of red spots on the bellies and the normal or at times subnormal temperature of the animals differentiate the ailment from cholera.

In this form, as in the first, remedy must be used before the disease has progressed. Feed and so-called stock food and tonics that may contain irritating ingredients should be avoided, green pastures being preferable if available. A physic of oil, such as linseed or castor oil, to clean out the bowels, is recommended. Intestinal antiseptics are in order. The following has been used and found beneficial: Copper sulphate 1 part, hyposulphite of soda 4 parts, charcoal 2 parts, and common salt 6 parts. Give one heaping teaspoonful of this mixture to every 100 pounds of live weight, in slop or milk, night and morning for about a week. Other antiseptics such as sulpho-carbolates, iron sulphate, etc., can be used to advantage.

Cause of Necrobacillosis.

The origin of all forms of necrobacillosis is the bacillus necrophorus. This organism or germ inhabits the digestive tube of swine, and being expelled in the fecal discharges, it develops and flourishes in damp insanitary quarters. Finally it finds its way into abrasions on lips, face, and mucous membranes of nasal cavities, develops into rhinitis, and later into necrosis or death of large areas about the head and face of the animal. The same organism passing into the intestinal tract sets up there the same process of inflammation, degeneration, and necrosis or death of tissue, resulting in necrotic entritis.

Prevention.

In this disease, as in all other diseases of animals, the sane, simple and effective method to adopt is the one of prevention. While necrobacillosis is not rapidly infectious, still the whole herd is in danger, in that the pigs all have the same supply of germs from which to feed. As in all diseases, the germs of this disease must be destroyed in order to prevent the ailment; therefore the key to prevention in this also is proper sanitation of premises. Frequent and thorough cleaning out of pens, troughs, feeding floors, sheds and hog lots is an important factor of preventive measures. In addition to thorough cleaning at frequent intervals a liberal quantity of lime should be applied in pens, houses, and adjoining lots. Proper care in feeding also will eliminate much of this trouble. Pigs, shotes and other hogs should not be allowed to feed from the ground. Suitable feeding floors, preferably concrete, and troughs of some nonabsorbent material that can be cleaned out, washed and disinfected frequently are recommended. These equipments, while meaning a little added expense, nevertheless will pay for themselves in a short time from the saving of feed and the protection of the animals' health. "An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure."

SOY BEANS AS VEGETABLES

Although Best Adapted for Growing in South, They May Be Grown in Corn Belt.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Hahto soy beans, introduced from Japan, are excellent for the production of green beans similar to lima and butter beans. About 115 days are required for the bean to make sufficient growth for use as a green vegetable. Although the Hahto bean is best adapted for growing in the southern states, it may also be successfully produced as a green vegetable during favorable seasons throughout the corn belt. Being a bush variety, it also is adapted for forage production, its yield of green feed or seed being superior to many other varieties on the market. In a dry form the Hahto bean cooks up easier than other varieties and has a better flavor. This bean is to be grown extensively by boys' and girls' gardening clubs in the southern states during the coming season.

FENCE FOR PASTURING HOGS

Best Temporary Inclosure Made of 32 or 36-inch Woven Wire Tacked to Stakes.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

It is often desirable in pasturing hogs to fence off a portion of a field temporarily. About the best temporary hog fence is made of 32-inch or 36-inch woven wire stretched and tacked to stakes driven in the ground. Well-fed hogs are easily kept in place, but underfed ones will require more substantial fencing.

VELVET BEANS FOR POULTRY

Not Relished by Fowls Unless Fed in Other Mixtures—Feed in Dry or Wet Mash.

Velvet beans, although one of the very best grains for poultry, are not relished by them unless fed in other mixtures, preferably ground and then mixed with bran and shorts, using about 20 per cent of the velvet beans in this mixture. This may be fed as a dry mash or in a wet mash, whichever plan is preferred.

HOW TO PRODUCE GOOD EGGS

All Hens That Lay Eggs That Are Too Small or Poorly Shaped Should Be Discarded.

In the production of good eggs the stock is of utmost importance. Weak, sickly stock produces eggs that are of poor quality. Such eggs will deteriorate quickly. Discard the hens that lay too small or too large eggs, and eggs that are poorly shaped. If eggs selected for incubation are small, ill-shaped, of poor color and texture, so will be the eggs that are laid by hens hatched from those eggs.

The question of the quarters in which the stock is to be kept is also an important one. No matter how healthy the stock, if kept in poor quarters, it will become sickly and weak. The house should be roomy, well-ventilated and allow an abundance of sunshine to enter.

SYSTEMS OF FEEDING FOWLS

One Way Is to Supply All of Feed Dry and Other Consists of a Moistened Mash.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

There are two systems in use for the feeding of fowls, in one of which all the feed is given dry and in the other of which one or more of the daily feeds consists of a moistened mash. For convenience they may be termed the "dry-feed" and the "mash" systems, although in the dry-feed system a dry mash is often fed. Dry feeding is used by many where it is not convenient to make and feed a moistened mash. The greatest advantages to be derived from the dry system are the saving of labor and the lessened danger of bowel trouble resulting from sloppy or soured mashes.

CLEAN HEN HOUSE WINDOWS

Rays of Sun Are Cheapest and Best Life-Givers and Purifiers—Also Kill Germs.

Always remember that the rays of the sun are the cheapest and best life-givers and purifiers, and that they will kill all germs which they touch. Therefore, keep the windows clean so that the sun can shine in.

FINE CROPS SURE

Outlook in Western Canada Never More Favorable.

Perfect Weather Conditions Enabled Early Seeding and Wheat Has Long Been Above Ground in the Land of Opportunity.

The greatest optimism prevails throughout every district in Western Canada. From the eastern boundary of Manitoba to the slopes of the Rocky Mountains the farmers have been busy for three weeks in seeding operations. Last fall, even for Western Canada, was an exceptional one. Threshing was completed at an early date and the amount of fall plowing made ready for crop from fifteen to twenty-five per cent more acreage than in any year in the brief history of the country. Therefore there was ready for seeding this spring an acreage away beyond anything ever before experienced in that country.

On April 20 Calgary (Alta.) reported that in south country points there was a notable spirit of optimism amongst the farmers there. Moisture and weather conditions were good, while land in most places was in the best possible condition. More tractors were being put into operation than in any previous year. In some parts of the south country, however, there was a marked shortage of labor, but in the consideration of the country as a whole the labor outlook was bright.

Seeding operations were well under way in every part of Western Canada by the fifteenth of April. The practice of the farmers in that country is to commence as soon as the frost is out of the ground enough to allow the few inch seed bed to be worked up well. Beneath this the ground may still be frozen, but from this frost the young and tender wheat roots get the moisture at first so necessary to its existence. The warm days of spring and the long hours of sunlight that are ushered in with it thaw the frost out day by day and pay to the growing plant, the moisture as it is needed. Nature's way of producing moisture to the young wheat plant is one of the chief reasons why Western Canada has become world famous as a wheat-producing country. What may be said of wheat can as truly be said of oats and barley, and yes, in fact, corn, too. Rapid and strong growth is stimulated in this manner. Heavy spring rains usually occur after seeding is over and the grain well above ground.

Already a report has been received, dated April 20, that a farmer near Cabri, Saskatchewan, had 180 acres of wheat showing above the ground.

A good, strong and sturdy wheat plant is necessary when it is expected that there will be produced a forty-bushel-to-the-acre crop of wheat of a quality that will weigh out its sixty-five pounds to the measured bushel.

These spring wheat conditions represent but one of the reasons why Western Canada has been able to produce, with so little effort, world's record grain crops, wheat and oats that have carried off all championship awards at America's largest expositions.

Western Canada has this spring shipped ten thousand bushels of Marquis wheat, the variety that holds most of the world's championships, to Australia, where it is to be tried out. Seventy-five thousand bushels of the same variety has been sent to France to be used for seed.

The wheat lands of Western Canada are probably the most undervalued of any on the continent.

A comparatively small acreage of Western Canada's lands has been sold as high as $60 an acre. The greater portion of the best farming land in its unimproved state may be purchased at $25 an acre. The comparison between these prices and an annual revenue derived from grain-growing alone, with big yields and present prices, can but more firmly impress one with the certainty of a rapid increase within the next few years.—Advertisement.

GLAD TO PAY COST OF PEACE

Millions of Lives Saved by Vast Military Preparation of Our Government.

FOE KNEW AND QUIT COLD

These Life-Saving Bills Must Be Paid and the Boys Brought Back to the Country They Love.

"The price of peace," of which the Victory loan is but a part, is large, but not nearly so large as it would have been had the war been fought to the annihilation of the German armies as our military leaders believed would be necessary. Had the war lasted as long as these leaders anticipated, hundreds of thousands of American youths and millions more of their allies would have been called upon to pay the supreme sacrifice.

That they were not forced to give their lives is in no small measure due to our government's preparations to crush the enemy completely. The industry as well as the man power of the nation was called into the government service, and a great war machine was created which the German general staff saw meant complete annihilation for their forces if they fought on, so they quit.

There were in France when the armistice was signed, 2,002,175 officers and men wearing the United States uniform. In the states there were more than 1,500,000 more in training or awaiting shipment overseas. This army had 1,500,000 rifles and 429,000,000 rounds of ammunition in France when the armistice was signed. There were 221,000,000 additional rounds on boats en route to France at this time. These figures do not deal in anything but infantry equipment.

Smokeless powder was being delivered at the rate of 4,800,000 pounds a week and high explosives at the rate of 6,900,000 pounds. We had on hand when the war closed, 419 tons of mustard gas, enough to load 419,000 shells; 654 tons of phosgene, 511 tons of chloropicrin, 660 tons of white phosphorous for incendiary bombs, 308 tons of tannic tetrachloride, and 158 tons of titanium tetrachloride. We had enough gas to smother the German army. On the defensive side the government had developed the best gas mask known, and had produced 5,087,600 of them.

We had built 2,010 ten-ton caterpillar tractors and 1,586 15-ton machines for hauling great guns. There were 15,000 more of these under construction when the war ended. They had demonstrated their ability to drag the heaviest mortars, howitzers and rifles over any terrain, no matter how badly cut up or how wet.

Ten thousand Ford "baby" tanks equipped with two Ford engines, would have been on the front line by the time the Victory Liberty loan is to be floated. They would have been supported by thousands of the French "whippet" type tanks and the big 35-ton American tanks driven by Liberty motors.

We had in France and in use at the army at home, 57,607 trucks of two, three and five tons capacity, 11,476 ambulances, 18,875 motorcars and 29,421 motorcycles.

Our merchant marine was growing at the rate of 400,000 tons dead weight per month when the war ended, and we were turning out about 10,000 airplane engines a week, with planes to carry them.

German spies found this out. German spies knew that the U-boat had failed because of the barrage of mines that the British and American navies had strung across the North sea. German spies sent word to the general staff that in spite of their best efforts to check the Americans at the home base, they were outgeneraled. So the German staff learned that the Americans had thrown their unlimited resources into the scales with the allies, and the German staff turned "yellow" and quit.

That mighty preparation of which the above is but a fragmentary tale, is the reason why the Victory Liberty loan is the last of the war loans. Had the war gone on there would have been a fifth, a sixth, a seventh, an eighth loan—loans until the German hordes had been crushed and sent back into the heart of the fatherland. The need for these was eliminated by the mailed fist of our great preparation, which supplemented the gigantic efforts put forth by our allies.

"Let us, then," as the secretary of the treasury has said, "with thanksgiving to God that we were spared any greater price, meet the honorable commitments of our government contracted in behalf of the freedom of the world."

The mighty Krupp masterpieces are being melted up to make Victory Liberty loan medals. On one side of the medal will be a reproduction of the Purchasers of Victory loan securities will not receive these medals, as the bonds are intrinsically worth all the buyer pays. However, those who volunteer to sell the Victory issue to their neighbors and associates will be awarded one of these medals. The only restriction is that the medal will go only to those who in advance of the drive are authorized to perform the work of distributing the Victory Liberty loan among the people.

If you want one of those medals, your Distinguished Service Cross, as it were, for service in Uncle Sam's financial army, it behooves you to hustle over and see the chairman of your Victory Liberty loan campaign and tell him you are on the job.

Some of the medals have just reached the Seventh federal reserve district. A large quantity of them will be available for distribution before the campaign begins.

Landlord's Experience With Glando

Mr. Haushalter, the well known and energetic proprietor of the Hotel Paulding, Paulding, Ohio, says that fof several years he suffered from a sluggish liver, backache and kidney trouble. He felt so drowsy and languid he could scarcely drag. He says: "I tried a number of kidney pills and liver remedies and found no relief until I used Glando, the great gland tonic. It proved to be just what I needed. I am thoroughly convinced I would have been flat on my back if I had not used this treatment; but, instead of being laid up, I am feeling fine and looking after my business every day. If I feel any indication of my old trouble returning, I take a Glando treatment and that sets me right."

Mr. Haushalter was dying of self-poisoning caused by an inactive liver. This weakened the kidneys and other glands of the body. If he had not found a remedy that renewed glandular activity and removed the poison, his life undoubtedly have paid the penalty.

Glando Tonic is the only remedy of its kind on the market and its numerous cures is proof enough of its great value to mankind. It is sold by druggists or will be sent direct by the Gland-Aid Co., Fort Wayne, Ind. Large treatment, $1.00.

UNSPOILED BY HIGH HONOR

Officers and Men Alike Recognize in General Pershing Qualities That Compel Their Affection.

"Why do we swear by Pershing?" countered a staff officer in Washington one day in response to a question. "Well, I guess it's because he's the real thing—a regular American, if you know what I mean.

"You can easily figure out the sort of man he is by the stories they tell of him. I was with him when he was on his way to Washington to receive his orders for France. On the way, we passed through the town in which he lived when he was a boy. On the station platform was the same old negro porter Pershing had thrown stones at in his boyhood. The general chatted with the old man. Afterward I asked the porter what happened. He said:

"'He done wanted ter know all 'bout the folks he uster know, an' when he was gettin' on the car again he picked up a pebble as big as my thumb an' hove it at me, jes' like he uster when he was an ornery kid.'"

So many bullets flew through the air in both directions in large battles of the great war that some of them were bound to bump into each other. In their perilous journey over No Man's land they struck barbed-wire entanglements with varied results.

WITH AN EYE TO THE FUTURE

Prima Donna Had Good Business Reasons for Asking for Slight Change in Contract.

Senator Lodge sounded the warning that the articles of the league of nations should be weighed carefully before being adopted. He asserted that too many ties might well jeopardise our future.

"Indeed," we may well follow the example of the prima donna who was reading a rough draft of her new contract.

"When she came to the paragraph providing that she should have transportation for herself and maid, her dog and Signor Gazibeni, her husband, she drew a line through the singer's name.

"'Just make that husband,' she said.

"'Yes, madam,' asserted the manager, 'but may I ask why?'

"The diva blushed and coyly fingered her hair. 'I might wish to make a change,' she answered."

She Knew.

An Evansville mother and her two children were visiting her sister's home for the evening, says the Indianapolis Star. The grown niece, who was fond of the children, fed them candy. All at once she turned from the children to offer her young aunt some gum. The aunt smiled.

"No, I don't believe I care for any," she returned.

Then Nola, the seven-year-old cousin, spoke up.

"Yes, you do, too, mother," she piped. "You know you always beg us children for some of ours on the way home from here every time we come."

NATION-WIDE CAMPAIGN TO ERADICATE TUBERCULOSIS FROM OUR DAIRY HERDS

Holsteins at United States Soldiers' Home, Washington, D. C.—First Herd to Be Accredited Tuberculosis Free.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

It is hard to find any better food than good milk, yet if the milk used in the daily diet is not good it is a constant source of danger. If the milk is produced by cows that have tuberculosis—and there are thousands of them in this country—and is not pasteurized, the germs of the dreaded disease may be transmitted to humans. This is the reason consumers as well as producers of milk should be deeply interested in and give their support to what the United States department of agriculture is doing to stamp out tuberculosis in dairy cattle.

The plan is to certify officially all herds the owners of which have complied with specified requirements which show beyond doubt that the animals are free from tuberculosis. In December, 1917, the plan was adopted jointly by the live stock sanitary officials of all the states in the Union and by the federal department. It consists of giving the tuberculin test to every animal in the herd at least twice a year, at the end of which time, if all the animals are found free from the disease, the herd is accredited tuberculosis free.

Plan Gains Wide Interest.

The idea and advantages of accredited herds of cattle found to be free from tuberculosis gained wide publicity and popularity among cattle breeders from the start. They appreciate the fact that a certificate of approval indorsed by the state in which the herd belongs, and found indorsed by the government, gives prospective purchasers confidence that the animals are free from the disease and they are in consequence willing to pay a considerable advance in price for such animals.

During the first half year the plan has been in operation, 296 herds, comprising 9,284 cattle, were fully accredited as free from tuberculosis, and 1,462 herds having 35,053 cattle passed one successful test in preparation for certification. In addition, 4,622 herds, both purebred and grade, totaling 98,002 animals, were under supervision for the eradication of tuberculosis. Each month a large number of additional herds are taken under supervision.

Many States Co-operating.

Tuberculosis eradication work is now being carried on in more than 40 states in co-operation with the state live stock sanitary officials and stock owners. Joint agreements between the state and the federal department of agriculture governing the application for the tuberculin test, and the handling of the herd, are forwarded to each owner interested in having his herd freed of the disease, or in having it accepted as officially accredited.

It has been found by very careful experiments and practical work that tuberculosis cannot be detected to any great extent among animals by a physical examination. Herds which seem apparently healthy may be extensively affected with tuberculosis. The most reliable method for definitely determining whether tuberculosis exists is the tuberculin test applied by a trained operator. Tuberculin, while it is the most accurate diagnostic agency known to science, is safe only in the hands of a trained and skillful operator who is acquainted with its limitations and with the symptoms it produces in the animals to which it is applied.

All Purebred Herds to Be Tested.

It is proposed to carry on the accredited herd plan until practically all purebred herds of cattle in the United States are under state and federal supervision for the eradication of tuberculosis. Thus it will be possible for the owner in one state to purchase cattle in another state with the assurance that he will receive animals that may be introduced into his herd with perfect safety, so far as tuberculosis is concerned. Under former conditions, many such animals proved to be a menace in place of an asset.

In addition to the accredited herd plan, the eradication of tuberculosis from live stock will be carried on in circumscribed areas comprising one or more counties. The disease will be eliminated from cattle and swine in such areas, and the campaign extended until it takes in entire states.

In order that the work may progress satisfactorily, it is necessary that live-stock owners co-operate to the fullest extent. The success of the movement for eradicating tuberculosis rests upon the live stock owners of the country to a greater degree than on any other force; whenever they are ready and willing to "get behind" the work, success is bound to follow.

ARGUMENT STARTED A BOY IN HOG RAISING

Wanted to Convince Neighbor Could Make Big Gains.

Cheap Cost of Production Due to Three Things—High Protein Content of Concentrates, Good Health and Sanitation.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

An argument with a neighbor caused Samuel Evans of Clay county, Indiana, to join a pig club in order that he might prove his point that a pig could make an average daily gain of over one pound. He won his point with a good margin, for his pig gained on an average of two pounds a day for a period of 92 days, and as a result of his experience Samuel has acquired the necessary knowledge to enable him to start in the hog-raising business along the right lines. He says: "I learned that if a boy wants something decidedly interesting he should by all means get a pig and get into the game (meaning a pig club). When the contest is over he will say that he has learned something that he never knew before and probably will never forget, because he has learned it by experience."

Samuel's pig, which was a Duroc-Jersey, weighed 58 pounds at the beginning of the contest and 243 at the end. It gained 184 pounds in 92 days, or two pounds a day. The cost of food was $9.50, or 5 cents a pound gain. The value of the pig at the end of the contest was $46.17, the profit being $36.67.

"On account of the hot weather," the boy says, "I kept my pig a few days after the contest ended, and when I butchered him he weighed 267 pounds on foot and 227½ pounds when dressed. He dressed out 85 per cent. I received 25 cents a pound, which made me a total of $56.87.

"I figured that the cheap cost of the production was due to three things: First, the high protein content of the concentrates; second, good health of the pig, due to great variety of feed and sanitary conditions of the lot and sleeping quarters; third, the pig consumed a large amount of forage, such as rape, thus reducing the amount of high-priced feeds."

FATTEN BEEF CATTLE CHEAP

Farmer Who Raises His Own Feed Has Decided Advantage Over Professional Feeder.

One of the chief advantages of feeding a small number of animals is that of getting a better class of feeders. The farmer who makes beef from his own corn, which he grows on his own land and under ordinary, favorable conditions, can fatten beef cattle cheaper than any professional feeder in the business.

where she got her color. Many women, perhaps your neighbor, will tell you that she got her wonderful color, her vivacious spirits, her strength and health by taking a "temperance" tonic, known as Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

Probably no man in America was ever better qualified to successfully treat the diseases peculiar to women than Dr. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y. The cases that come to him run into many thousands, giving him an experience that rarely comes to any one man. Dr. Pierce found that in nearly every case there were certain vegetable growths which rarely failed to give prompt relief in those feminine disorders from which so many women suffer. He combined these roots and herbs into a temperance medicine that he called Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. This medicine is sold in both liquid and tablet form by druggists everywhere. A weakly, sickly, backachy, headachy, nervous, despondent woman, with regular or irregular pains—with feminine disorders that come in youth or middle age—is pretty sure to find in Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription the exact remedy that her condition calls for.

John W. Phillips, building contractor, 907 N. First street, Terre Haute, Ind., declares: "I only wish I could impress upon everybody who is in a run-down condition how important it is that they take Pepgen, the great tonic. For more than a year I suffered with my stomach and nerves. I was on the verge of a complete breakdown. I bought a bottle of Pepgen and was well repaid for my small investment because Pepgen relieved me. I am now eating three square meals every day and never have a sign of indigestion. I have gained several pounds. Everybody in Terre Haute is enthusiastic about Pepgen. There is hardly a day that our local newspapers do not contain an account of some person who has been relieved by it. Most of the cases are remarkable."

WAS IN MISERY

Mrs. Jobes Was in Serious Condition From Dropsy. Doan's Made Her Well.

"I don't think many have gone through such misery as I," says Mrs. C. Jobes, 139 Federal St., Burlington, N. J. "That awful pain in my back felt as though my spine were crushed. My head ached and I had reeling and falling sensations when everything would turn black. Though the kidney secretions passed ten or fifteen times in an hour, only a few drops came at a time and they felt like boiling water. I soon found I had dropsy. I bloated all over. My face was so swollen I could hardly see out of my eyes. My ankles and feet felt as though they would burst if I put any weight on them. My night clothes became wringing wet with sweat and I would get chilly and shake all over. Doan's Kidney Pills soon had me feeling like a different woman. My kidneys were regulated and all the swelling went away. The aches and pains left me and after I had finished my eighth box of Doan's, I was as well as ever. My kidneys have never bothered me since Doan's Kidney Pills cured me."

BACK-TO-NATURE STYLE IN GOWNS

Parisian Designers Aim to Create a Campaign, Fashion Writer Declares.

LENGTH OF SKIRT A PROBLEM

Short Model Advancing, but Its Fate Hangs in Balance—Abbreviated Sleeve Is Believed to Be Here to Stay.

Exaggeration always has been the very essence of fashion. Women will adventure in clothes. This exaggerations, asserts a fashion correspondent, usually is obtained by accentuating some portion of the human body, just as hoopskirts accentuated the slim slenderness of the waist. In the days of our now far-off Civil war Mrs. Lincoln and the wife of General Grant walked abroad with wide, swaying skirts. So full were they that the waist took on a wasplike appearance. Then there came a time when breadth was given to the shoulders by an absurdly large sleeve that puffed stiffly out at the top. Du Maurier ever depicted his lovely ladies with huge puffs atop of their shapely arms. Now it seems the aim of Parisian designers is to create a back-to-nature campaign. With French women wearing skirts that end half way between the knee and ankle, evening gowns cut practically to the waistline in the back and, afternoon frocks with the short sleeves of the 1830 period—and many of them absolutely sleeveless—the question is not altogether how we are going to dress, but are we about to undress?

We here in this country are in the very thick of the semi-annual discussion of the silhouette—the length of skirts, the depth and outline of the decolletage and how we shall trim or untrim our hats. Paris has had her openings, and our American buyers have returned, bringing to us the best models from the varied collections shown by the great French houses. These dazzle with their splendor. Of metal tissue and spangles, they sparkle and scintillate, apparently vying with one another to offset the somber garb of war time.

With the war's ending France evidently expected American women to burst into wild extravagance. It is doubtful, however, if the showy, spangled and embroidered dresses displayed by the Paris designers will be adopted by our American women for this summer's wear. We in this country like simple models. Then, too, the exorbitant prices charged by the French dressmakers made the purchasing of models almost prohibitive. Consequently we may not expect any price reductions in clothes for some time to come. But it will not be for long, for the pollus of France are returning to work. The looms at Lyons and St. Etienne are again busily whirring and new weaves of silks and other fabrics are being made for the wide, feminine world.

The Short Skirt Advances.

At this moment there is with us a great uncertainty about the length of skirts. The dictum of Paris is for short ones; very short ones. All the French houses stand sponsor to them and we in America believe that the short skirt is advancing upon us again—stealthily, step by step—although its ultimate fate here still hesitantly hangs in the balance. One of the most difficult clothes questions we have to settle is what compromise shall we make between the skirt measuring from 12 to 16 inches from the floor, which the Parisienne is wearing, and the long skirt of purely American origin. There is no doubt about it, French models cannot be altered to meet the demand for a skirt so much longer without material change of the original lines and much of the style being completely lost by this change.

Some of the evening gowns at the recent openings had the skirts draped so as to show the leg almost to the knee, and the shortness at the front and side accentuated by a train. One clever designer has done some very interesting things with her skirts. She has given an appearance of length by putting transparent laces and embroideries at the bottom of the skirt. She then makes the underskirt several inches shorter than the outside, thereby silhouetting the legs. After accomplishing this on a lot of her evening gowns, she is using the same treatment on lingerie frocks. For the trousseau of a bride she has made a sheer lingerie frock of old lace and rare embroidery, ivory in tone. The petticoat is of pale pink satin with a knee-deep flounce of navy blue chiffon. This gives the desired background at which the designer is aiming. The effect is as fascinating as it is original.

Abbreviated Sleeve—Echo of 1830.

No wonder the makers of clothes have at last turned their attention to sleeves! No part of the dress allows freer play to one's creative fancy. In 1830 dressmakers went quite mad over sleeves and cut up all sorts of insane antics with them. And, since this is the period from which the new short sleeve takes its inspiration and marks the difference between this year's frock and last, we may expect present day modistes to do things equally as amusing. That there was method in the madness of these old-time dressmakers is attested by the beautiful effects obtained. We see this in every old daguerreotype and oil portrait of that day. What is lovelier for sheer fabrics than these abbreviated sleeves that belong to a period when women dressed more picturesquely than they do now?

There is little doubt that the short sleeve has come to stay. It will remain for the summer, at least. There were few gowns or blouses shown at openings that did not have short sleeves, and some of them none. Even suits have three-quarter length sleeves, permitting the hands to be carefully gloved. Martial et Armand sent us an afternoon gown of biege colored crepe de chine literally covered with silken embroidery in the same tone. Very short is the crepe de chine skirt, but beneath the hem is set a band of lavender and silver tissue, to fall several inches below the skirt. This tissue is very loosely woven and quite rough in texture. It is very different from the metal cloth of other seasons, and combines more pleasingly with plain materials than did its predecessor. A lavender and silver ribbon of the same curious and artistic weave threads its way through coarse silk threads, forming a narrow belt tying at either side. This gown has not even a suggestion of a sleeve of any sort. The shoulder seam has been permitted to lengthen itself just a very little, possibly perhaps as a bit of apology.

Hats Worn by French Women.

No French woman hesitates to top her sleeveless and gloveless costume by a hat.

In the advance guard of summer clothes are distinctive gowns of black satin with a cape to match. Very often satin of another color is combined with black to make the frock. One of our American designers has thought of putting a richly embroidered tunic of Chinese blue on a black satin dress and lining the cape with Chinese blue chiffon. Further evidence of the oriental inspiration of this costume is seen in the cape collar, ending in a scarf, which may be wound around the chin.

Suzanne Talbot makes a small hat of dull blue silk embroidered in fine threads of glazed black straw. The contrast between the dull and shiny material is decided. It is equally charming.

Children's Dresses.

Suspender effects, sashes with butterfly bows, and tabs of various shapes and sizes are favored features of children's wash dresses.

Criticism.

Billy Sunday tells with gusto of the subtle criticism a pretty Philadelphia girl once passed on his informal preaching methods.

The revivalist halted at the end of an impassioned Philadelphia harangue, rolled down his sleeves, put on his coat and said:

"And now, dear friends, are there any questions?"

"All the congregation was silent except the pretty girl. She asked from her front pew:

Indigestion, Gas and Bloat From Acid-Stomach

An acid-stomach cannot digest food properly. Instead, the food sours and ferments and, passing into the intestines, becomes a breeding place for countless millions of deadly germs—toxic poisons they are called. These poisons are absorbed into the system and cause untold misery. So, you see, it is just acid-stomach, nothing else—that makes so many people weak, listless and unfit; saps their strength and energy; robs them of their vigor and vitality. Biliousness, bad liver, nervousness, blinding, splitting headaches, rheumatism, lumbago, sciatica—these and many other still more serious ailments often are traced to the common source—an acid-stomach.

Take EATONIC and get rid quickly of the pains of indigestion, heartburn, that horrible, lumpy, bloated feeling after eating; disgusting, belching, food-repeating; sour, gassy stomach. These stomach miseries are caused by what doctors call "Hyperacidity." It's just ACID-STOMACH. And in addition to the pains and miseries it causes, ACID-STOMACH is the starter of a long train of ailments that most people never dreamed are in any way connected with the stomach.

Pleasant tasting EATONIC TABLETS that you eat like a bit of candy, quickly put an end to your stomach troubles. They act as an absorbent—literally wipe up the excess hurtful acid and make the stomach pure, sweet and strong. Help digestion so that you get all the power and energy from your food. You cannot be well without it!

If you are one of those who have "tried everything" but in spite of it still suffer all kinds of acid-stomach miseries—if you lack physical and mental strength and vigor—begin at once to take EATONIC. Get back your physical and mental punch and enjoy the good things of life. Like thousands of others you will say you never dreamed that such amazingly quick relief and such a remarkable improvement in your general health was possible.

ALL SET FOR BIG LOAN DRIVE

Five States in Seventh District Ready to Put Victory Liberty Loan Over.

WORKERS ON THEIR TOES

Confident Americans Will Carry Through the Campaign for Funds in a Way of Which the Nation Will Be Proud.

The preliminary publicity campaign for the Victory Liberty loan has resulted in great activity throughout the five states in the seventh federal reserve district, and in every county of these states the war loan organization workers have been busy day and night with the preparation to make a success of the coming loan. With the formal opening of the loan drive only a short time ahead, efforts are being redoubled, and the apathy of a few weeks ago has been dispelled by the aggressive campaigning methods adopted.

In each division of the district the state speakers' bureaus have arranged state-wide tours for speakers of state and national reputation. Large and enthusiastic meetings have been held daily and nightly for some time past and every day before the launching of the drive on April 21 will be filled with activity and aggressive work. The heads of the state departments have made out schedules for leading speakers, and from the meetings already held there appears to be no lack of enthusiasm, contrary to the expectations of some of the state leaders.

In addition to the whirlwind oratorical campaign schedule in all of the states, tours of the war exhibition trains, tanks and band and drill squads are now being made. The war exhibition trains will travel through every county in each state in the interest of the war loan organization, and the people will have an opportunity of viewing several carloads of war material, including tanks, cannon, airplanes, all kinds of ammunition, and many trophies captured from the Germans by the American expeditionary forces. These trains will be accompanied by a detail of returned soldiers. At most of the places at which these trains will stop special Victory Liberty loan meetings have been arranged by the local committees, and in most instances speakers of wide repute will make addresses.

A feature of the work through the district has been special county meetings of the war loan organization workers. In some instances the workers of several counties have held joint meetings. At all of them the ways and means of making the campaign a rousing success have been discussed, and wherever possible, the state director of sales, or some other representative of the state or district organization, has been present to give the local workers the benefit of his wider experience.

Illinois reports indicate the workers are on their toes in readiness for the real campaign to start, as they are confident they will repeat their achievements of the previous popular loan campaigns. The state will be covered by the war exhibition trains, by leading speakers and a military or naval band.

A lively and enthusiastic campaign has been under way in Michigan for some time. State officials have been on the job under the leadership of State Director of Sales Frederick R. Fenton. Every county has been thoroughly organized, and reports are optimistic. County meetings have been largely attended, and at the public meetings held so far there has been no lack of enthusiasm. Every county in the state will be visited by the new United States army tanks. Great interest is being displayed in these instruments of modern warfare.

In conjunction with the speaking campaign, Iowa towns and cities will be visited by a war exhibition train similar to those touring other states, and there will be a separate tour of a band and drill squad from the Great Lakes Naval Training station. As in other states, the county meetings have been well attended by the local workers, and public meetings have shown no lessening of enthusiasm as compared to previous loans. Notable speakers are touring the state.

In Indiana the new United States battle tanks are touring the state, going overland from town to town. They have created a veritable sensation along the country highways. The state will also have a war exhibit train, as well as nationally known speakers. A number of enthusiastic meetings have been held to date. Wisconsin leaders report everything in shape for a rousing subscription drive. War exhibit trains, with tanks and bands, are enlivening the campaign and are stirring up much enthusiasm. The state and county organizations are complete, and everything is in readiness for the drive.

—HELP "FINISH THE JOB."—

The American fighters now in Europe saved the life of our nation, and the nation—the people of the United States—would be basely ungrateful if it abated one iota in support of them now that the danger is over. Our sacred duty to them will not have been performed until every one of the boys now "over there" has been brought home.

WOMEN WILL RECEIVE MANY VICTORY LOAN MEDALS

As in Former Liberty Loans, Women of District Will Do Great Work in "Carrying On" to Success the Victory Liberty Loan.

Ten thousand medals made from captured German cannon are to be distributed to women Victory Loan workers throughout the states of Illinois, Iowa, Michigan, Indiana, and Wisconsin at the close of the coming campaign.

The United States treasury department has taken this means of showing its appreciation of the work done by thousands of volunteer workers in Liberty Loan drives. The medals are to be made from German cannon captured by American troops at Chateau Thierry. These cannon have been melted, and the metal rolled into sheets, from which the medals are made.

This badge will be the first of its kind to be distributed in the United States since the war. It will be about the size of a half dollar, and will contain on one side a reproduction of the United States treasury building, with the words, "Victory Liberty Loan," and on the other side the certification of the work done in the Victory Loan campaign with a blank space in which the name of the recipient will be engraved.

Women all over the country have shouldered a large share of the work in preceding loan campaigns, and the roll of honor undoubtedly will be just as large in the coming Victory Loan. In the last drive more than $8,000,000 was subscribed in amounts of $1,000 or less, much of which the women's committees were responsible for.

Victory Liberty Loan workers will include many prominent women from this as well as from other districts. Mrs. G. Edgar Allen of Detroit has been appointed state chairman for Michigan. Other state chairmen working under the leadership of Miss Grace Dixon, woman's director for the Seventh Federal Reserve district, are: Mrs. Howard T. Willson, chairman for Illinois; Mrs. James Mariner, Wisconsin; Mrs. F. H. McCulloch, Indiana, and Mrs. W. W. Marsh, Iowa.

These are only a few of the many women who will lay aside social and business responsibility for patriotic service during the Victory Liberty Loan campaign, and who will be among the thousands of recipients of the Victory Liberty Loan medals.

—HELP "FINISH THE JOB."—

PIANO OR LIBERTY BONDS

Successful Business Woman Says She Cannot Buy Luxuries Until Victory Liberty Loan Is Triumphantly "Put Over."

"No, I haven't bought my piano yet. I was just about to buy one when the first Liberty loan was announced, and I couldn't make it seem patriotic to spend for purely personal purposes the money that might also help the government. I felt just the same way about the second Liberty loan and the third and fourth, and of course I shan't think of buying a piano now until the Victory loan has been triumphantly 'put over.' I couldn't make it seem right."

The speaker last year "wrote" over $100,000 worth of life insurance business. This year she expects to attain a $200,000 total, having already $140,000 to her credit since last July, when the current "insurance club year" started. Oh, yes, she's a real woman! Her name is Maud M. Freeman and she's known to thousands of Chicago business men and women.

She could have bought a piano several times over and still have done her duty by herself and her country in the way of buying Liberty bonds. But—her full duty, as this patriotic and successful citizen sees it, means helping on the work of the United States government in every possible way.

She does her duty in the way of War Savings stamps also, to say nothing of Thrift stamps. The latter she uses as tips when traveling, etc. Last Christmas she used them, almost exclusively, for presents for children, young people, intimates. Next Christmas she plans to do the same, while all through the year Thrift stamps will serve her, whenever possible, as "small change" or currency.

"No investment possibly could be so safe or so desirable as United States government securities," says the woman, whose generous income tax was paid cheerfully and without a murmur, because "I'm so glad to have been able to earn so good an income."

—HELP "FINISH THE JOB."—

The money to be raised by the Victory Liberty loan already has been spent. It furnished the "punch" that won the war and saved the lives of 100,000 of America's bravest boys. It is this unshed blood you are paying for when you subscribe to the Victory Liberty loan.

The war is not over, and our duty to support our forces is not over until they are back home again. The Victory Liberty loan is to bring them back—to finish the job.

We are still the world's Big Brother. Stand back of the Victory Liberty loan.

The nation must pay this debt, if it is to continue to exist as a nation among the nations of the world.

There are only two ways that the nation can secure the money to pay for this debt, by the sale of bonds or notes, and by taxes

Taxes are already high and yet are insufficient to meet our outstanding war obligations. Thereforoe, bond or notes, must be sold.

Again, there are only two ways that bonds or notes can be sold—to the banks and to the people.

If they are sold to the banks, then industry and commerce—your business will suffer. The banks would be unable to purchase several billion dollars worth of Victory Notes and still continue to loan money to business men at a fair rate and in sufficient quantities to supply their needs.

It is therefore, good business logic—your business and our business to invest in the Victory Notes as large as we can for America's welfare and for our own.

GREAT PEACE PACT WITH GERMANY IS GIVEN IN SUMMARY

Substance of the Treaty Which Was Handed to Delegates at Versailles Palace.

LEAGUE OF NATIONS FIRST

Alsace-Lorraine, Saar Basin, Danzig, Poland and Other Territory Lopped Off—German War Power Reduced to Minimum—Wilhelm to Be Tried.

Herewith is the official summary of the great peace treaty which was handed by the representatives of the allied nations to the German delegates at Versailles:

The preamble names as parties of the one part the United States, the British empire, France, Italy and Japan, described as the five allied and associated powers, and Belgium, Bolivia, Brazil, China, Cuba, Ecuador, Greece, Guatemala, Haiti, the Hedjaz, Honduras, Liberia, Nicaragua, Panama, Peru, Poland, Portugal, Roumania, Serbia, Siam, Czecho-Slovakia and Uruguay, who with the five above are described as the allied and associated powers; and on the other part, Germany.

Section One—League of Nations.

The covenant of the league of nations conatitutes Section 1 of the peace treaty, which places upon the leagrue many specific in addition to its general duties. It may question Germany at any time for a violation of the neutralized zone east of the Rhine as a threat against the world's peace. It will appoint three of the five members of the Saar commission, oversee its regime and carry out the plebiscite. It will appoint the high commissioner of Danzig, guarantee the independence of the free city and arrange for treaties between Danzig and Germany and Poland. It will work out the mandatory system to be applied to the former German colonies, and act as a final court in part of the plebiscites of the Belgian-German frontier, and in disputes as to the Kiel canal, and decide certain of the economic and financial problems. An international conference on labor is to be held in October under its direction, and another on the international control of ports, waterways and railways is foreshadowed.

Section Two—Boundaries of Germany.

Germany cedes to France Alsace-Lorraine, 5,600 square miles of it in the southwest, and to Belgium two small districts between Luxemburg and Holland, totalling 382 square miles. She also cedes to Poland the southeastern tip of Silesia beyond and including Oppeln, most of Posen and West Prussia, 27,686 square miles. East Prussia being isolated from the main body by a part of Poland. Germany loses sovereignty over the northeasternmost tip of East Prussia, 40 square miles north of the river Memel, and the internationalized areas about Danzig, 729 square miles, and the basin of the Saar, 738 square miles, between the western border of the Rhenish palatinate of Bavaria and the southeast corner of Luxemburg. The Danzig area consists of the V between the Nogat and Vistula rivers made into a W by the addition of a similar V on the west including the city of Danzig. The southeastern third of East Prussia and the area between East Prussia and the Vistula north of latitude 53 degrees three minutes is to have its nationality determined by popular vote, 5,735 square miles, as is to be the case in part of Schleswig, 2,787 square miles.

Section Three—European Political Classes.

BELGIUM.—Germany is to consent to the abrogation of the treaties of 1839 by which Belgium was established as a neutral state and to agree in advance to any convention with which the allied and associated powers may determine to replace them. She is to recognize the full sovereignty of Belgium over the contested territory of Moresnet and over part of Prussian Moresnet, and to renounce in favor of Belgium all rights over the cities of Eupen and Malmedy, the inhabitants of which are to be entitled within six months to protest against this change of sovereignty either in whole or in part, the final decision to be reserved to the league of nations. A commission is to settle the details of the frontier, and various regulations for change of nationality are laid down.

LUXEMBOURG.—Germany renounces her various treaties and conventions with the grand duchy of Luxembourg, recognizes that it ceased to be a part of the German zollverein from January 1 last, renounces all right of exploitation of its railroads, adheres to the abrogation of its neutrality, and accepts in advance any international agreement as to it, reached by the allied and associated powers.

LEFT BANK OF THE RHINE—As provided in the military clauses, Germany will not maintain any fortifications or armed forces less than fifty kilometers to the east of the Rhine, hold any maneuvers, nor maintain any works to facilitate mobilization.

In case of violation, "she shall be regarded as committing a hostile act against the powers who sign the present treaty and as intending to disturb the peace of the world."

By virtue of the present treaty Germany shall be bound to respond to any request for an explanation which the council of the league of nations may think it necessary to address to her."

ALSACE-LORRAINE.—After recognition of the moral obligation to repair the wrong done in 1871 by Germany to France and the people of Alsace-Lorraine, the territories ceded to Germany by the treaty of Frankfort are restored to France with their frontiers as before 1871, to date from the signing of the armistice, and to be free of all public debts.

Citizenship is regulated by detailed provisions distinguishing those who are immediately restored to full French citizenship, those who have to make formal application therefor, and those for whom naturalization is open after three years. The last-named class includes German residents in Alsace-Lorraine, as distinguished from those who acquire the position of Alsace-Lorraine as defined in the treaty. All public property and all private property of German ex-sovereigns passes to France without payment or credit. France is substituted for Germany as regards ownership of the railroads and rights over concessions of tramways. The Rhine bridges pass to France with the obligation for their upkeep.

THE SAAR.—In compensation for the destruction of coal mines in northern France and as payment on account of reparation, Germany cedes to France full ownership of the coal mines of the Saar basin with their subsidiaries, accessories and facilities. Their value will be estimated by the reparation commission and credited against that account. The French rights will be governed by German law in force at the armistice except war legislation. France replacing the present owners whom Germany undertakes to indemnify. France will continue to furnish the present proportion of coal for local needs and contribute in just proportion to local taxes. The basin extends from the frontier of Lorraine as prannexed to France north as far as St. Wendel, including on the west the valley of the Saar as far as Saarholzbach and on the east the town of Homburg.

In order to secure the rights and welfare of the population and guarantee to France entire freedom in working the mines, the territory will be governed by a commission appointed by the league of nations and consisting of five members, one French, one a native inhabitant of the Saar and three representing three different countries other than France and Germany. The league will appoint a member of the commission as chairman to act as executive of the commission. The commission will have all powers of government formerly belonging to the German empire, Prussia and Bavaria, will administer the railroads and other public services and have full power to interpret the treaty clauses. The local courts will continue but subject to the commission.

After fifteen years a plebiscite will be held by communes to ascertain the desires of the population as to continuance of the existing regime under the league of nations, union with France or union with Germany.

Section Four—European Political Classes.

GERMAN AUSTRIA.—Germany recognizes the total independence of German Austria in the boundaries traced.

CZECHO-SLOVAKIA.—Germany recognizes the entire independence of the Czecho-Slovak state, including the autonomous territory of the Ruthenians south of the Carpathians, and accepts the frontiers of this state as to be determined, which in the case of the German frontier shall follow the frontier of Bohemia in 1914. The usual stipulations as to acquisition and change of nationality follow.

POLAND—Germany cedes to Poland the greatest part up upper Silesia, Posen and the province of West Prussia, on the left bank of the Vistula. A field boundary commission of seven—five representing the allied and associated powers and one each representing Poland and Germany—shall be constituted within 15 days of the peace to delimit this boundary. Such special provisions as are necessary to protect racial, linguistic or religious minorities and to protect freedom of transit and equitable treatment of commerce of other nations shall be laid down in a subsequent treaty between the five allied and associated powers and Poland.

EAST PRUSSIA—The southern and the eastern frontier of East Prussia is to be fixed by plebiscites, the first in the regency of Allenstein between the southern frontier of East Prussia and the northern frontier of Regierungsbezirk Allenstein, from where it runs to the boundary between East and West Prussia to its junction with the boundary between the circles of Oletsko and Augersburg, thence the northern boundary of Oletsko to its junction with the present frontier, and the second in the area comprising the circles of Stuhm and Rosenburg and the parts of the circles of Marienburg and Marienwerder east of the Vistula.

In each case German troops and authorities will move out within 15 days of the peace and the territories be placed under an international commission of five members appointed by the five allied and associated powers, with the particular duty of arranging a free, fair and secret vote. The commission will report the results of the plebiscites to the five powers with a recommendation for the boundary and will terminate its work as soon as the boundary has been laid down and the new authorities set up.

The five allied and associated powers will draw up regulations assuring East Prussia full and equitable access to and use of the Vistula. A subsequent convention, of which the terms will be fixed by the five allied and associated powers, will be entered into between Poland, Germany and Danzig, to assure suitable railroad communication across German territory on the right bank of the Vistula between Poland and Danzig, while Poland shall grant free passage from East Prussia to Germany.

The northeastern corner of East Prussia about Memel is to be ceded by Germany to the associated powers, the former agreeing to accept the settlement made, especially as regards the nationality of the inhabitants.

DANZIG—Danzig and the district immediately about it is to be constituted into the "free city of Danzig" under the guaranty of the league of nations. A high commissioner appointed by the league and resident at Danzig shall draw up a constitution in agreement with the duly appointed representatives of the city and shall deal in the first instance with all differences arising between the city and Poland. The actual boundaries of the city shall be delimited by a commission appointed within six months from the peace and to include three representatives chosen by the allied and associated powers and one each by Germany and Poland.

A convention, the terms of which shall be fixed by the five allied and associated powers, shall be concluded between Poland and Danzig, which shall include Danzig within the Polish customs frontiers, though a free area in the port; insure to Poland the free use of all the city's waterways, docks and other port facilities, the control and administration of the Vistula and the whole through railway systems within the city, and postal, telegraph and telephonic communication between Poland and Danzig; provide against discrimination against Polish citizens within the city and place its foreign relations and the diplomatic protection of its citizens abroad in charge of Poland.

DENMARK—The frontier between Germany and Denmark will be fixed by the self-determination of the population. Ten days from the peace German troops and authorities shall evacuate the region north of the line running from the mouth of the Schlei, south of Kappel, Schleswig and Friedrichstadt, along the Elder to the North sea, south of Tonning; the workmen's and soldiers' council shall be dissolved, and the territory administered by an international commission of five, of whom Norway and Sweden shall be invited to name two.

HELGOLAND.—The fortifications, military establishments and harbors of the islands of Helgoland and Dune are to be destroyed under the supervision of the allies by German labor and at Germany's expense. They may not be reconstructed for any similar fortification built in the future.

RUSSIA.—Germany agrees to respect as permanent and inalienable the independency of all territories which were part of the former Russian empire, to accept the abrogation of the Brest-Litovsk and other treaties entered into with the Maximalist government of Russia, to recognize the full force of all treaties entered into by the allied and associated powers with states which were a part of the former Russian empire and to recognize the frontiers as determined thereon. The allied and associated powers formally reserve the right of Russia to obtain restitution and reparation of the principles of the present treaty.

Section Five—German Rights Outside Europe

Outside Europe Germany renounces all rights, titles and privileges as to her own or her allies' territories to all the allied and associated powers, and undertakes to accept whatever measures are taken by the five allied powers in relation thereto.

COLONIES AND OVERSEAS POSSESSIONS—Germany readnuces in favor of the allied and associated powers her overseas possessions with all rights and titles therein. All movable and immovable property belonging to the German empire or to any German state shall pass to the government exercising authority therein.

These governments may make whatever provisions seem suitable for the repatriation of German nationals and as to the conditions on which German subjects of European origin shall reside, hold property or carry on business. Germany undertakes to pay reparation for damage suffered by French nationals in the Kameruns or its frontier zone through the acts of German civil and military authorities and of individual Germans from January 1, 1900, to August 1, 1914.

Germany renounces all rights under the conventions of November 4, 1911, and September 28, 1912, and undertakes to pay to France in accordance with an estimate presented by the repatriation commission all deposits, credits, advances, etc., thereby secured. Germany undertakes to accept and observe any provisions by the allied and associated powers as to the trade in arms and spirits in Africa as well as to the general act of Berlin of 1885 and the general act of Brussels of 1890. Diplomatic protection to inhabitants of former German colonies is to be given by the governments exercising authority.

CHINA.—Germany renounces in favor of China all privileges and indemnities resulting from the Boxer protocol of ... all, and all buildings, wharves, barracks, forts, munitions of warships, wireless plants and other public property except diplomatic or consular establishments in the German concessions of Tientsin and Hankow and in other Chinese territory except Kiaochow and agrees to return to China at her own expense all the astronomical instruments seized in 1901. China will, however, take no measures for disposal of German property in the legation quarter at Pekin without the consent of the powers signatory to the Boxer protocol [illegible] military tribunals under military law. If the charges affect nationals of only one state they will be tried before a tribunal of that state; if they affect nationals of several states they will be tried before joint tribunals of the states concerned. Germany shall hand over to the associated governments either jointly or severally all persons so accused and all documents and information necessary to insure full knowledge of the incriminating facts, the discovery of the offenders and the just appreciation of the responsibility.

Section Seven—Reparation.

The allied and associated governments affirm, and Germany accepts on behalf of herself and her allies, the responsibility for causing all the loss and damage to which the allied and associated governments and their nationals have been subjected as a consequence of the war imposed upon them by the aggression of the enemy states.

The total obligation of Germany to pay, as defined in the category of damages, is to be determined and notified to her after a fair hearing and not later than May 1, 1921, by an interallied reparation commission. At the same time a schedule of payments to discharge the obligation within thirty years shall be presented. These payments are subject to postponement in certain contingencies. Germany irrevocably recognises the full authority of this commission, agrees to supply it with all the necessary information and to pass legislation to effectuate its findings. She further agrees to restore to the allies cash and certain articles which can be identified.

As an immediate step toward restitution Germany shall pay within two years 20,000,000,000 marks in either gold, goods, ships, or other specific forms of payment, with the understanding that certain expenses, such as those of the armies of occupation and payments for food and raw materials, may be deducted at the discretion of the allies.

While the grand total of damages assessed against Germany may exceed her ability to pay, she undertakes to make compensation for all damages caused to civilians under seven main categories: (a) Damages by personal injury to civilians caused by acts of war, directly or indirectly; (b) damage caused to civilians by acts of cruelty ordered by the enemy and to civilians of the occupied territory; (c) damages caused by maltreatment of prisoners; (d) damages to the allied peoples represented by pensions and separation allowances capitalized at the signature of this treaty; (e) damages to property other than naval or military materials; (f) damages to civilians by being forced to labor; (g) damages in the form of levies or fines imposed by the enemy.

In periodically estimating Germany's capacity to pay the reparation commission shall examine the German system of taxation, first to the end that the sums for reparation which Germany is required to pay shall become a charge upon all her revenues, prior to that for the service or discharge of any domestic loan, and, secondly, so as to satisfy itself that in general the German scheme of taxation is fully as heavy proportionately as that of any of the powers represented on the commission.

The commission may require Germany to give from time to time, by way of guaranty, issues of bonds or other obligations to cover such claims as are not otherwise satisfied. In this connection on account of the total amount of claims, bond issues are presently to be required of Germany in acknowledgment of its debt as follows:

Twenty billion marks, gold, payable not later than May 1, 1921, without interest; forty billion marks, gold, bearing 2½ per cent interest between 1921 and 1926 and thereafter 5 per cent, with a 1 per cent sinking fund payment beginning 1926; and an undertaking to deliver forty billion marks gold bonds bearing interest at 5 per cent, under terms to be fixed by the commission.

SHIPPING.—The German government recognizes the right of the allies to the replacement, ton for ton and class for class, of all merchant ships and fishing boats lost or damaged owing to the war, and agrees to cede to the allies all German merchant ships of 1,600 tons gross and upward; one-half of her ships between 800 and 1,600 tons gross and one-quarter of her steam trawlers and other fishing boats. These ships are to be delivered within two months to the reparation committee, together with documents and title evidencing the transfer of the ships free from encumbrance.

As an additional part of reparation, the German government further agrees to build merchant ships for the account of the allies to the amount of not exceeding 200,000 tons gross annually during the next five years. All ships used for inland navigation taken by Germany from the allies are to be restored within two months, the amount of loss not covered by such restitution to be made up by the cession of the German river fleet up to 20 per cent thereof.

In order to effect payment by deliveries in kind, Germany is required, for a limited number of years, varying in the case of each, to deliver coal, coal tar products, dyestuffs and chemical drugs in specific amounts to the reparations commission. The commission may so modify the conditions of delivery as not to interfere unduly with Germany's industrial requirements. The deliveries of coal are based largely upon the principle of making good diminutions in the production of the allied countries resulting from the war.

DEVASTATED AREAS.—Germany undertakes to devote her economic resources directly to the physical restoration of the invaded areas. The reparation commission is authorized to require Germany to replace the destroyed articles by the delivery of animals, machinery, etc., existing in Germany, and to manufacture materials required for reconstruction purposes; all with due consideration for Germany's essential domestic requirements.

Germany is to restore within six months the Koran of the Caliph Othman, formerly at Medina, to the king of Hedjaz, and the skull of the Sultan Okwawa, formerly in German East Africa, to his Britannic majesty's government. The German government is also to restore to the French government certain papers taken by the German authorities in 1870, belonging then to M. Reuher, and to restore the French flags taken during the war of 1870 and 1871.

FINANCES.—Powers to which German territory is ceded will assume a certain portion of the German prewar debt, the amount to be fixed by the reparations commission on the basis of the ratio between the revenue and of the ceded territory and Germany's total revenues for the three years preceding the war. In view, however, of the special circumstances under which Alsace-Lorraine was separated from France in 1871, when Germany refused to accept any part of the French public debt, France will not assume any part of Germany's prewar debt there, nor will Poland share in certain German debts incurred for the oppression of Poland. If the value of the German public property in ceded territory exceeds the amount of debt assumed, the states to which property ceded will give credit on reparation for the excess, with the exception of Alsace-Lorraine. Mandatory powers will not assume any German debts or give any credit for German government property. Germany renounces all rights of representation on, or control of, state banks, commission or other similar international financial and economic organizations.

Germany is required to pay the total cost of the armies of occupation from the date of the armistice as long as they are maintained in German territory, this cost to be a first charge on her resources. The cost of reparation is the next charge, after making such provisions for payments for imports as the allies may deem necessary.

Germany is to deliver to the allied and associated powers all sums deposited in Germany by Turkey and Austria-Hungary in connection with the financial support extended by her to them during the war and to transfer to the allies all claims against Austria-Hungary, Bulgaria or Turkey in connection with agreements made during the war. Germany confirms the renunciation of the treaties of Bucharest and Brest-Litovsk.

On the request of the reparations commission Germany will expropriate any rights or interests of her nationals in public utilities in ceded territories or those administered by mandatories, and in Turkey, China, Russia, Austria-Hungary and Bulgaria, and transfer them to the reparations commission, which will credit her with their value.

Germany guarantees to repay to Brazil the fund arising from the sale of Sao Paulo coffee which she refused to allow Brazil to withdraw from Germany.

Section Eight—Economic Clauses.

CUSTOMS.—For a period of six months Germany shall impose no tariff duties higher than the lowest in force in 1914, and for certain agricultural products, wines, vegetable oils, artificial silk and washed or scoured wool this restriction obtains for two and a half years or for five years unless further extended by the league of nations. Germany must give most favored nation treatment to the allied and associated powers. She shall impose no customs tariff for five years on goods originating in Alsace-Lorraine and for three years on goods originating in former German territory ceded to Poland, with the right of observation of a similar exception for Luxemburg.

SHIPPING.—Ships of the allied and associated powers shall for five years and thereafter, under condition of reciprocity, unless the league of nations otherwise decides, enjoy the same rights in German ports as German vessels and have most favored nation treatment in fishing, coasting trade and towage, even in territorial waters. Ships of a country having no seacoast may be registered at some one place within its territory.

UNFAIR COMPETITION—Germany undertakes to stop the trade of the allied and associated powers adequate safeguards against unfair competition and in particular to suppress the use of false wrappings and markings and on condition of reciprocity to respect the laws and judicial decisions of allied and associated states in respect of regional appellations of wines and spirits.

TREATMENT OF NATIONALS.—Germany shall impose no exceptional taxes or restrictions upon the nationals of the allied and adsociated states for a period of five years and, unless the league of nations acts, for an additional five years. German nationality shall not continue to attach to a person who has become a national of an allied or associated state.

MULTILATERAL CONVENTIONS—Some forty multilateral conventions are renewed between Germany and the allied and associated powers, but special conditions are attached to Germany's readmission to several.

PREWAR DEBTS.—A system of clearing houses is to be created within three months, one in Germany and one in each allied and associated state which adopts the plan for the payment of prewar debts, including those arising from contracts suspended by the war for the adjustment of the proceeds of the liquidation of enemy property and the settlement of other obligations.

ENEMY PROPERTY.—Germany shall restore or pay for all private enemy property seized or damaged by her, the amount of damages to be fixed by the mixed arbitral tribunal. The allied and associated states may liquidate German private property within their territories as compensation for property of their nationals not restored or paid for by Germany for debts owed to their nationals by German nationals and for other claims against Germany. Germany is to compensate its nationals for such losses and to deliver within six months all documents relating to property held by its nationals in allied and associated states. All war legislation as to enemy property rights and interests is confirmed and all claims by Germany against the allied or associated governments for acts under exceptional war measures abandoned.

CONTRACTS.—Prewar contracts between allied and associated nations, excepting the United States, Japan and Brazil, and German nationals, are canceled except for debts for accounts already performed, agreements for the transfer of property where the property had already passed, leases of land and houses, contracts of mortgage, pledge or lien, mining concessions, contracts with governments and insurance contracts.

Mixed arbitral tribunals shall be established of three members, one chosen by Germany, one by the associated states and the third by agreement, or failing which by the president of Switzerland. They shall have jurisdiction over all disputes as to contracts concluded before the present peace treaty.

INDUSTRIAL PROPERTY RIGHTS—Industrial, literary and artistic property are re-established, the special war measures of the allied and associated powers are ratified and the right reserved to impose conditions on the use of German patents and copyrights when in the public interest. Except as between the United States and Germany prewar licenses and rights to sue for infringements are canceled.

Section Nine.

OPIUM.—The contracting powers agree whether or not they have signed and ratified the opium convention of January 23, 1912, or signed the special protocol opened at the Hague in accordance with resolutions adopted by the third opium conference in 1914, to bring the said convention into force by enacting within 12 months of the peace the necessary legislation.

RELIGIOUS MISSIONS.—The allied and associated powers agree that the properties of religious missions in territories belonging or ceded to them shall continue in their work under control of the powers, Germany renouncing all claims in their behalf.

Section Ten.

AERIAL NAVIGATION.—Aircraft of the allied and associated powers have full liberty of passage and landing over and in German territory, equal treatment with German planes as to use of German airdromes, and with most favored nation planes as to internal commercial traffic in Germany. Germany agrees to accept allied certificates of nationality, airworthiness or competency or licenses and to apply the convention relative to aerial navigation concluded between the allied and associated powers to her own aircraft over her own territory. These rules apply until 1923 unless Germany has since been admitted to the league of nations or to the above convention.

Section Eleven.

FREEDOM OF TRANSIT.—Germany must grant freedom of transit through her territories by mail or water to persons, goods, ships, carriages, and mails from or to any of the allied or associated powers, without customs or transit duties, undue delays, restrictions or discriminations based on nationality, means of transport, or place of entry or departure. Goods in transit shall be assured all possible speed of journey, especially perishable goods. Germany may not divert traffic from its normal course in favor of her own transport routes or maintain "control stations" in connection with transmigration traffic. She may not establish any tax discrimination against the ports of allied or associated powers, must grant the latter's seaports all factors, and reduced tariffs granted her own or other nationals, and afford the allied and associated powers equal rights with those of her own nationals in her ports and waterways, save that she is free to open or close her maritime coasting trade.

FREE ZONES IN PORTS—Free zones existing in German ports on August 1, 1914, must be maintained with due facilities as to warehouse and packing, without discrimination, and without charges except for expenses of administration and use. Goods leaving the free zones for consumption in Germany and goods brought into the free zones from Germany shall be subject to the ordinary import and export taxes.

INTERNATIONAL RIVERS—The Elbe from the junction of the Vitava, the Vitava from Prague, the Oder from Oppeln, the Niemen from Grodno and the Danube from Ulm are declared international, together with their connections. The riparian states must ensure good conditions of navigation within their territories unless a special organization exists therefor. Otherwise appeal may be had to a special tribunal of the league of nations, which also may arrange for a general international waterways convention.

The Elbe and Oder are to be placed under international commissions to meet within three months.

THE DANUBE—The European Danube commission reassumed its prewar powers, but for the time being with representatives of only Great Britain, France, Italy and Roumania. The upper Danube is to be administered by a new international commission until a definite statute be drawn up at a conference of the powers nominated by the allied and associated governments within one year after the peace.

THE RHINE AND THE MOSELLE.—The Rhine is placed under the central commission to meet at Strassbourg within six months after the peace and to be composed of four representatives of France, which shall in addition select the president, four of Germany, and two each of Great Britain, Italy, Belgium, Switzerland, and the Netherlands.

Section Twelve.

RAILWAYS.—Germany in addition to most favored nation treatment on her railways, agrees to co-operate in the establishment of through ticket services for passengers and baggage; to insure communication by rail between the allied, associated and other states; to allow constructions or improvement within twenty-five years of such lines as necessary and to conform her rolling stock to enable its incorporation in trains of the allied or associated powers. She also agrees to accept the denunciation of the Gothard convention if Switzerland and Italy request, and temporarily to execute instructions as to the transport of troops and supplies and the establishment of postal and telegraphic service, as provided.

CZECHO-SLOVAKIA. — To assure Czecho-Slovakia access to the sea, special rights are given her both north and south. Toward the Adriatic she is permitted to run her own through trains to Fiume and Trieste. To the north Germany is to lease her for 99 years spaces in Hamburg and Stettin, the details to be worked out by a commission of three representing Czecho-Slovakia, Germany and Great Britain.

THE KIEL CANAL.—The Kiel canal is to remain free and open to war and merchant ships of all nations at peace with Germany, subject, goods and ships of all states are to be treated on terms of absolute equality, and no taxes to be imposed beyond those necessary for upkeep and improvement for which Germany is to be responsible. In case of violation of or disagreement as to those provisions, any state may appeal to the league of nations, and may demand the appointment of an international commission. For preliminary hearing of complaints Germany shall establish a local authority at Kiel.

Section Thirteen.

INTERNATIONAL LABOR ORGANIZATION—Members of the league of nations agree to establish a permanent organization to promote international adjustment of labor conditions, to consist of an annual international labor conference and an international labor office.

The former is composed of four representatives of each state, two from the government and one each from the employers and the employed, each of them may vote individually. It will be a deliberative legislation body, its measures taking the form of draft conventions or recommendations for legislation, which if passed by two-thirds vote must be submitted to the law-making authority in every state participating. Each government may enact the terms into law; approve the principle, but modify them to local needs; leave the actual legislation in case of a federal state to local legislatures, or reject the convention altogether without further obligation.

The international labor office is established at the seat of the league of nations and part of its organization. It is to collect and distribute information on labor throughout the world and prepare agenda for the conference.

It will publish a periodical in French and English and possibly other languages. Each state agrees to make to it for presentation to the conference an annual report of measures taken to execute accepted conventions.

The first meeting of the conference will take place in October, 1919, at Washington, to discuss the eight-hour day or 48-hour week; prevention of unemployment; extension and application of the international conventions adopted at Berne in 1906 prohibiting night work for women and the use of white phosphorus in the manufacture of matches; and the employment of women and children at night or in unhealthy work, of women before and after childbirth, including maternity benefit, and of children as regards minimum age.

Section Fourteen.

GUARANTEES.—As a guarantee for the execution of the treaty German territory to the west of the Rhine, together with the bridgeheads, will be occupied by allied and associated troops for 15 years' period if the conditions are faithfully carried out by Germany, certain districts, including the bridgehead of Cologne, will be evacuated at the expiration of five years; certain other districts, including the bridgehead of Coblenz, and the territory nearest the Belgian frontier, will be evacuated after ten years, and the remainder, including the bridgehead of Mainz, will be evacuated after 15 years. In case the interallied reparation commission finds that Germany has failed to observe the whole or part of her obligations, either during the occupation or after the 15 years have expired, the whole or part of the areas specified will be reoccupied immediately. If before the expiration of the 15 years Germany complies with all the treaty undertakings, the occupying forces will be withdrawn immediately.

EASTERN EUROPE.—All German troops at present in territories to the east of the new frontier shall return as soon as the allied and associated governments deem wise. They are to abstain from all requisitions and are in no way to interfere with measures for national defense taken by the government concerned.

All questions regarding occupation not provided for by the treaty will be regulated by a subsequent convention or conventions which will have similar force and effect.

Section Fifteen.

MISCELLANEOUS.—Germany agrees to recognize the full validity of the treaties of peace and additional conventions to be concluded by the allied and associated powers with the powers allied with Germany, to agree to the decisions to be taken as to the territories of Austria-Hungary, Bulgaria and Turkey and to recognize the new states in the frontiers to be fixed for them.

Germany agrees not to put forward any pecuniary claims against any allied or associated power signing the present treaty, based on events previous to the coming into force of the treaty.

Germany accepts all decrees as to German ships and goods made by any allied or associated prize court. The allies reserve the right to examine all decisions of German prize courts. The present treaty, of which the French and British texts are both authentic, shall be ratified and the depositions of ra... in Paris as soon as possible.

The treaty is to become effective in all respects for each power on the date of deposition of its ratification.

HIGH SPOTS IN PEACE TREATY.

Alsace-Lorraine goes to France.

The Saar valley will be temporarily internationalized.

Danzig will be permanently internationalized.

Germany renounces all territorial rights outside of Europe.

Germany recognizes the independence of Poland and Czecho-Slovakia.

The German army is reduced to 100,000 officers and men, and conscription within Germany is abolished.

The German navy is reduced to 24 warships and no submarines.

Germany may have only 100 unarmed seaplanes, to search for mines off her coast.

Germany will pay an indemnity, the amount of which is not yet fixed, the initial payment to be 25,000,000,000 marks, about $6,000,000,000.

Germany cedes a large part of her merchant fleet to the allies.

Germany agrees to the trial of the ex-kaiser.

The disposition of the surrendered German fleet, the German colonies and the German cables is left to future action.

The league of nations becomes a living organization.

"Yes; hold my hand while I guide you; we can sit here."

It was a couch of some kind against the outer wall. She did not release her grasp, seemingly gaining courage from this physical contact, and my fingers closed warmly over her own.

"Now, please," breathlessly, "how is it possible you are aboard this vessel—an officer?"

I told her the strange story, as swiftly and simply as possible, speaking scarcely above a whisper, feeling as I progressed that I related a dream rather than a series of facts. It seemed to me she could scarcely be expected to believe the truth of what I said, and yet she did, almost unquestioningly; the clasp of her fingers perceptibly tightening as I proceeded. She sat so close beside me that I could feel her breath upon my cheek.

"Why, if—if you had not told me this yourself I could hardly believe such a tale," she exclaimed. "Yet it must be true, miraculous as it seems. But what is to be the ending? Have you any plan of escape?"

"Hardly a plan. I have had no opportunity even to learn the true nature of the crew. Watkins is an honest sailor, and he has told me of others on whom I could rely. There are those aboard—but I do not know how many—who would mutiny if they had a leader and a reasonable chance of success. I must reach these and learn who they are. Fortunately the voyage promises to be long enough to enable me to plan carefully."

"You have discussed the voyage with this man—Estada?"

"He told me what he had decided upon; not to return to their rendezvous until after they had captured some prizes and could go with gold chinking in their pockets."

"Where is their rendezvous?"

"An island in the West Indies, probably not on the chart. They call it Porto Grande."

"And they will sweep the ocean between here and there seeking victims? Unarmed merchantment to rob and sink? And you—you will be compelled to take part in such scenes, such acts of pillage and perhaps murder?"

"I presume I must seem to be one of them to avoid suspicion. Have you any suggestions?"

"There is conspiracy on board already," she said quickly, "that you may not know about."

"You mean to depose Sanches?"

"Yes; you had suspicioned it? They thought me unconscious in the boat, and talked among themselves—the two at the stern, Estada and that beast Manuel. I did not understand all they said, but I do not think they intend the captain shall recover."

"You think it best that he should?"

"Oh, I do not know; there is no best that I can see. Yet I would have more faith in being spared disgrace if at the mercy of Sanchez, than his lieutenant. Both may be equally guilty, equally desperate, but they are not the same men. I may be wrong, for I judge as a woman, yet I would feel safer with Sanches. The other merely desires with the passions of a brute. No appeal would reach him; he would laugh at tears and find pleasure in suffering. And yet you would have me appear friendly with Estada?"

"We cannot permit him to feel that either of us are enemies. He is the power aboard; our lives, everything are in his hands. If he means to be rid of Sanches the man is doomed, for he will find a way to accomplish his purpose; murder means nothing to these men."

"Of course you are right," she acknowledged. "Our case is so desperate we must resort to any weapons. You believe it will serve the possibility of escape if I permit this monster to imagine that I have some interest in him?"

"To do so might delay the explosion," I replied gravely, "and just now any delay is welcome. I doubt if even Estada will resort to force on board; indeed force will be the very last card he will care to play in your case. You are English and all the practical seamen on board are from northern Europe—English and Scandinavian. These men are not pirates from choice—they are prisoners who have taken to to save their own lives. With his bullies and cutthroats amidships he can compel them to work, but he dare not go too far. Once these fellows unite in mutiny they could take the ship. An assault on you would be dangerous."

"It is these men you count on?"

"Yes; but for me to gain their confidence and leadership will require time. The slightest slip would mean failure and merciless punishment. At best the situation is absolutely desperate—but I see no other solution."

"And no service in deceit—the setting of a part to blind the eyes of Estada?"

"I sincerely believe your greater chance of security lies in this course. The fellow is a supreme egotist; opposition will anger him, while flattery will make him subservient. You have the wit and discretion to hold him within certain limits. It is a dangerous game, I admit, and a disagreeable one, but the case requires desperate remedies."

She lifted her eyes, searching my face through the dim light.

"Geoffry Carlyle," she said at last, a tremor in the low voice, "there is no sacrifice I would not make to preserve my honor. I hate this man; I dread his touch; I shrink from contact with him as I would from a snake, but I am not going to refuse to do my part. If you say this is right and justified I will consent."

"I believe it is."

"And you will not lose faith in me?" she questioned earnestly. "It will not lower your belief in my womanhood?"

"Nothing could do that, Mistress Dorothy, I want you to realize the depth of my interest and respect. Your friendliness has meant much to me, and I would never urge you to lower your ideals. But we must face this situation as it is. We possess but two weapons of defense—deceit or force. A resort to the latter is at present impossible. I cannot conceive that you are lowering yourself in any way by using the power you possess to escape violence—"

"The power I possess?"

"Yes—beauty and wit. These are your weapons, and most effective ones. You can play with Estada and defeat him—temporarily, at least. I confess there is danger in such a game—he is a wild beast, and his evil nature may overcome his discretion. Take this pistol. Keep it hidden about your person, but use it only when all else fails. You retain faith in me?"

"Implicitly."

"And pledge yourself to your part, leaving me to attend to mine?"

Her two hands clasped my fingers, her eyes uplifted.

"Geoffry Carlyle, I have always believed in you, and now, after the sacrifice you have made to serve me I can refuse you nothing you ask. I will endeavor to accomplish all you require of me. God knows how I hate the task; but—but I will do my best. Only—only," her voice sank, "if—if the beast lays hands on me he—he pays the price. I could not do otherwise. Geoffry Carlyle—I am a Fairfax."

She Lifted Her Eyes.

Satisfied with my mission and confident nothing more need be said, I arose to my feet.

"Then we can do nothing further until I learn the disposition of the crew," I said quietly. "Estada is not likely to resort to extreme measures at present. That is why I believe you are comparatively safe now—his own position of command is in the balance."

"I will see you again?"

"Perhaps not here; it is too dangerous; but I will find means to communicate with you. Good-by."

We stood with hands clasped in the darkness. I thought she was going to speak again, but the words failed to come. Then suddenly, silently the door opened a mere crack, letting in a gleam of yellow light from the main cabin, while the crouching figure of a man, like a gliding shadow slipped through the aperture, closing the door behind him as softly as he had opened it. I heard her catch her breath and felt her hands grasp my sleeve, but I never stirred.

Who could he be? What might be the purpose of his entrance? But one answer occurred to me—Pedro Estada, driven by unbridled passions to attack the girl. I thrust her behind me, and took a step forward, with body poised for action. I was unarmed, but cared little for that in the swift desire to come to hand grips with the brute. I could hear him now, slowly and cautiously feeling his way toward us through the darkness.

CHAPTER XVII.

A Murder on Board.

To be certain of free space I extended one hand and my fingers came into unexpected contact with the back of a chair. Without moving my body I grasped this welcome weapon of defense and swung it above my head. Whoever the invader creeping upon us might prove to be, he was certainly an enemy, actuated by some foul purpose, and no doubt armed. To strike him down as quickly and silently as possible was therefore the plain duty of the moment. I had no other thought.

The slowness with which he groped his way forward indicated unfamiliarity with the apartment, although his direct advance proclaimed some special purpose. Clearly he had no fear of attack. I could determine almost his exact position as his advancing foot felt cautiously along the deck. He came forward inch by inch. I measured the distance as indicated by faint, shuffling sounds.

I could not see but I knew. With all my force I struck! Blindly as it had been delivered the blow hit fair; there was a thud, an inarticulate groan, and the fall of a body upon the floor—beyond that nothing. I waited breathlessly listening for the slightest movement. I felt Dorothy touch my shoulder and caught the sound of her voice trembling at my ear.

"What is it? What did you do?"

"I struck him with a chair; he lies there on the deck. Wait where you are."

I bent over and touched him. The fellow lay in a heap with no perceptible heart-beat, no semblance of breathing. My fingers sought his face, and I could scarcely suppress a cry of surprise—he was not Estada. Who, then, was he? What could have been his purpose in thus invading this stateroom? All I could grasp was the fact that the fellow was not the Portuguese—he possessed a smooth face, long hair, and was a much smaller man. I dragged the body where the light illumination from the after port fell directly on the upturned face. The features revealed were unfamiliar—those unquestionably of a half-breed Indian. Dorothy crossed to my side, her foot striking a knife, which came glimmering into the narrow range of light. She stared in horror at the ugly weapon, and then at the ghastly countenance.

"He came to murder! See, his knife lies there. Why should he have sought to kill me?"

"It is all mystery," I admitted. What shall be done with the body? It cannot be left lying exposed here; no one would believe you killed him, and my presence must not be suspected."

"Could it," she suggested, "be dropped through the port?"

She shrank back from touching the inanimate figure, yet it required the combined efforts of both to force the stiffening body through the porthole. We could distinguish footsteps on the deck above, but these were regular and undisturbed—the slow promenade from rail to rail of the officer on watch. Clearly nothing had been heard or seen to awaken suspicion.

"If you should be questioned tomorrow you had best know nothing," I said gravely. "I do not think you will be, for surely an attack can be no plan of Estada's. It could gain no advantage. The fellow was pilfering on his own account; if he is missed it will be supposed he fell overboard, and no one will care. You are not afraid to remain here alone?"

"No; I am not greatly frightened, but shall try and bar the door with a chair. I have no key."

"Then I'll leave you; half of my watch below must be gone by now. I'll take the fellow's knife along, as it must not be found here."

We parted with a clasp of hands, as I opened the stateroom door and slipped out into the cabin. To my surprise the light over the table had been extinguished, rendering the cabin so black I had to actually feel my way forward. The lantern must have been put out since then by some confederate. After a moment of hesitation I found my way across to my own stateroom and pressed open the door.

The Polka Dot.

Because in 1835 a Bohemian peasant girl danced a new step in a little village near the Polish border a Hungarian dancing master introduced it in Europe under the name of Polka, which is the feminine of Polak or Pole. By 1844, at the time James K. Polk was running for the presidency, the dance had spread to America and the name "Polk" and the word "Polka" formed a coincidence at once appealing to everyone. The manufacturers, merchants and designers immediately presented Polka hats, Polka shoes, Polka gauze and the "newest design in fabrics for gentlewomen."

On a Commercial Basis.

Gerald gave his grandmother a little gift for her birthday, and she said: "Well, you are a good lad; I shall give you a nickel for yourself," to which the little chap replied, "But, grandma, the present cost 15 cents."

Hoosier State Happenings

Goshen.—Women of Goshen have effected a preliminary organization for the campaign of 1920 and will study the procedure of voting in addition to informing themselves on political issues generally.

Elkhart.—William F. Medsker of Cambridge City was elected Indiana department commander of the Grand Army of the Republic at the closing session of the 1919 state encampment in this city. Bloomington was chosen as the place for next year's meeting.

Linton.—The census bureau has figured that the center of population of the United States will be moved west about thirty miles. As the center is now near Bloomington, local statisticians have figured that it will be in or near Linton.

Rochester.—The Fulton county commissioners here ordered the courthouse clock turned back an hour to the old time, following the presentation of a petition from the Fulton County Farmers' association in which it is set forth that the new time is a great detriment to labor on the farm.

Gary.—Efforts of the city council to suspend the rules and pass immediately an ordinance which would prohibit street parades and street gatherings without a permit first being obtained from the chief of police, were blocked by an objection by Frank Sypchalski, a councilman who is of Polish nationality. Unanimous consent is necessary to suspend the rules.

Seymour.—John H. Edwards of Mitchell, serving as special judge in an injunction proceeding filed by the Seymour Water company against the Indiana public service commission in an effort to prevent the enforcement of lower rates in this city, ruled that the commission had no authority to alter or modify existing rate schedules in Seymour, as they were fixed in a franchise granted by the city prior to the creation of the commission.

Lafayette.—Sixty-five counties in Indiana have organized this spring for the five-acre corn-growing contest, it was announced here by R. S. Thomas of the agricultural extension department of Purdue university, which cooperates with the Indiana Corn Growers' association in handling the contest. A state-wide campaign for the five-acre work has just been completed by practical corn growers and they report that interest this year is greater than it has ever been.

Alexandria.—Every president and secretary of associations affiliated with the Indiana Federation of Farmers have been invited to attend the special meeting which will be held at the Grand hotel in Anderson under the direction of Frank P. Mullins of Alexandria, director of the Fifth district for the state federation. Hamilton, Tipton, Madison, Grant, Delaware, Henry, Randolph, Jay and Blackford counties will send representatives to the meeting.

Anderson.—After hearing a petition by the Madison County Fair association for an agricultural section of the fair to be held here in August, the county council indicated that the appropriation will be denied, but for the present it was announced the petition will be taken under advisement. The association contends that unless the county assists in the matter of paying premiums for exhibits of live stock and other agricultural features that it probably will be impossible to give the fair this year.

Indianapolis.—What appears to be the first attempt by Postmaster General Burleson to increase local telephone rates in Indiana is contained in a new schedule of charges filed with the public service commission by the Southern Telephone company of Indiana, a part of the Bell system. The papers filed by the telephone company say that the federal telephone and telegraph operating board, appointed by Mr. Burleson, has directed a general increase in rates in the 80 cities and towns in Indiana in which the Southern company has exchanges.

Indianapolis.—More than 25,000 soldiers, sailors, marines, Red Cross nurses and war service workers participated in the Indiana welcoming home celebration here last week while close to 50,000 out-of-town civilians witnessed the parade which was the greatest demonstration ever held within the boundaries of Indiana. Delegations of returned service men from every section of the state participated in the parade. Members of the One Hundred and Fiftieth field artillery, the Indiana regiment of the Rainbow division, pulled into Indianapolis in three trains. With the One Hundred and Fiftieth came the enlisted men of base hospital No. 32, another Indiana unit. They left for Camp Taylor, Ky., where they will be discharged.

Evansville.—James Baskett, age thirty-two; John Baskett, age twenty-four, brothers; John O'Hara and a young woman who claims to be his wife, and Alvah Money are under arrest here following a raid by the police on an alleged counterfeiters' den.

Marion.—Application has been made to the public service commission by the Marion and Bluffton Traction line for the establishment of interline merchants' dispatch rates from points on the line to points on other traction lines in Indiana, and for readjustment of the rates between any two points on the company's road.

Columbus.—The wool growers of Bartholomew county have started a movement for pooling this year's clip of wool, making a combination sale of it to one buyer, with a view of getting higher prices.

Richmond.—A plan for connecting colleges and universities of Indiana by establishing wireless stations at each institution was announced by Prof. Edwin Morrison, head of the physics department of Earlham college.

Seymour.—A sectional school fight in Salt Creek township, Jackson county, which started four years ago, resulted in the organization of a new township to be known as Pershing. It is composed of 31 sections in the eastern part of Salt Creek township.

Indianapolis.—Fountain county is the first in Indiana to take advantage of the new Indiana employment commission law, which authorizes the expenditure of public funds for the operation and maintenance of a local employment service and for vocational guidance for minors.

Indianapolis.—That a uniform policy soon will be adopted by the government authorities at Washington, D. C., with a view to prevent men in the uniform of the United States army from peddling, is the opinion of Maj. John B. Reynolds, representative in the central district of Col. Arthur Woods, assistant to the secretary of war, who recently opened an office in Indianapolis.

Indianapolis.—Emphasizing the successful results that attended the baby-saving campaign in 1918, Dr. Ada E. Schweitzer, assistant bacteriologist of the Indiana state board of health and in charge of the work of the United States children's bureau in the department of labor, stated to the annual health officers' school here that she proposed to extend the work to include every health jurisdiction in the state.

Columbus.—Bartholomew county commissioners are again having trouble with the new county unit road law, by which the commmissioners and the county council are requested to view all roads, and for which work there is no compensation. The commissioners have viewed a number of roads, but the county council members refuse to do so. The commissioners cannot order the roads built until they are viewed by the council.

New Albany.—The Floyd County Fish and Game Protective association has filed a petition with the board of county commissioners requesting that a bounty be paid on crows, hawks and owls, as required by state law. Payment is optional with the board and the petition has been taken under advisement. Bounties have not been paid for many years, and it is claimed by farmers and chicken raisers that the birds are causing damage and loss.

Terre Haute.—The miners' local at West Terre Haute has adopted a resolution condemning the national officers of that organization for their stand in opposing a general strike as a protest against the imprisonment of Thomas Mooney, the San Francisco labor leader convicted of bomb throwing. The resolution reads: "We are determined that Mooney and other political and religious prisoners must be free, and will stand by them regardless of our national officers."

Indianapolis.—Governor Goodrich has reappointed five new members of boards of trustees of state institutions. They are Michael E. Foley of Indianapolis, Democrat, state prison; Edward Wilson of Fort Wayne, Democrat, and James W. Sale of Bluffton Republican, School for Feeble-Minded Youth; Thomas B. Buskirk of Paoli Democrat, board of control, soldiers and sailors' monument, and Rush S. Budd of Rushville, Democrat, epileptic village.

Franklin.—A health survey conducted during the last two weeks in the schools of Franklin in accordance with a recommendation made by the government to determine the exact weight height and age of the pupils, reveals the fact that 28 per cent of the pupils in the elementary schools of this city were under weight ten or more pounds. It was found that the children from the Masonic home, who attend the public schools in Franklin made a better showing than those from the private homes. This is believed to be due to the fact that they have regular habits, plenty of exercise and scientifically selected food.

Crown Point.—The Lake county tuberculosis sanatorium, for which bonds were sold early in March, will be built this summer. The site of 46 acres, one mile north of the corporate limits, on the Gary & Southern Traction line, was bought for $185 an acre.

South Bend.—Because the paving of the Niles road has been placed entirely in the hands of the state highway commission, bids for the improvement of that road from the city limits of South Bend north to the St. Joseph county line were rejected. The county will save $150,000 by the action of the state body, which, during a tour of inspection over northern Indiana roads, decided that the north road should be one of the first improved by the state.

Goshen.—Rainfall throughout this district has been unusually heavy and many farmers will not have oats planted before the latter part of May, the latest for years. Frosts have damaged all fruit.

Indianapolis.—All health and social service agencies in the state are to be brought together in an organization to be known as the Indiana Public Health association, according to plans completed by a special committee appointed at the annual conference of health officers. Dr. J. N. Hurty, secretary of the state board of health, is temporary chairman of the committee

(By REV. P. B. FITZWATER, D. D., Teacher of English Bible in the Moody Bible Institute of Chicago.)

(Copyright, 1919, by Western Newspaper Union.)

LESSON FOR MAY 18.

THE GRACE OF GOD.

LESSON TEXTS—Ephesians 2:4-10; Titus 2:11-14.

GOLDEN TEXT—We believe that through the grace of the Lord Jesus Christ we shall be saved, even as they.—Acts 15:11.

ADDITIONAL MATERIAL—Genesis 6:7; 2 Cor. 12:9; John 1:16, 17; 1 Cor. 15:10; James 4:6; 1 Peter 4:10; 2 Peter 3:18.

Grace means unmerited favor. God's grace means his kindness toward us through Jesus Christ. (Eph. 2:7.) God's mercy does not go out to men because they are good but because he is good and desires to bestow that goodness upon lost and ruined men in order to make them good.

I. The Grace of God in Salvation (Eph. 2:4-10.)

Grace brings salvation; it does not send it. Jesus Christ, who is the embodiment of God's love and grace, came bringing salvation with him. In order to apprehend what the grace of God has done, observe:

1. Man's natural state (Eph. 2:1-3). In the natural man is found all that is opposed to the will and purpose of God. (1) Dead in trespasses and sins (v. 1). The supreme need of the dead man is life, therefore he must have life from without himself. The characteristic of one who is dead is that he is (a) without sensation—"past feeling." (4:19.) The natural man, therefore, can neither love God nor hate sin until he is made alive. (b) Without motion. Activity is the demonstration of life. So far as God and holiness are concerned they are motionless. They are as helpless as Lazarus was in the grave. (2) Under the control of fleshly and worldly lusts (v. 2). The carnal nature holds sway over their lives. (3) Under the domination of Satan (v. 2). All unregenerate men and women are ruled by Satan. Since he is the god of this age (2 Cor. 4:4), the prince of this world (John 12:31), all who have not been freed by Christ are under the rule of Satan. (4) Under the condemnation and wrath of God (v. 3). Over all these—death, worldliness, disobedience, lust of the flesh—hangs the wrath and condemnation of God.

2. Man's state by grace (2:4-10). (1) He is alive in Christ (v. 5). The Holy Spirit lays hold upon men dead in sin and quickens them into life. (2) Raised up with Christ (v. 6). God's grace not only makes lost men alive but raises them up with Christ. (3) Association with Christ in glory (v. 6). Christ's incarnation has so identified himself with the race that those who are saved are raised up to be with Christ and shall ultimately share his glory. The actuating principle of God which moved him to thus lay hold upon lost men is his love (v. 4). Man's salvation is due entirely to God's grace. Not only the salvation has been provided in grace but the faith which appropriates it is God's gift (v. 8). Works as grounds of salvation are absolutely excluded. (4) The purpose of God in the salvation of men (vv. 7, 10). (a) It is to display his grace in the coming ages. The demonstration to the inhabitants of the spheres in which sin has not entered, in the ages to come, will be the transformation of dead and lost men and their exaltation with Christ. (b) To glorify God through their good works (v. 10; cf. Matt. 5:16). While good works have absolutely no part in the salvation of men God's purpose in saving them was that they might do good works.

II. The Grace of God in Right Living (Titus 2:11-14).

Grace is not only essential to salvation but essential to right living. It teaches saved men (1) to deny ungodliness (v. 12). The saved man has the divine nature. The grace which has saved him teaches him the necessity of a denial of everything that is opposed to God. (2) Worldly lusts (v. 12). The redeemed man is surrounded with the things of the world which have a downward pull upon him. The grace of God teaches him to renounce them. (3) Sober living (v. 12). The grace of God teaches the saved man self-control; to have the reins of his nature well in command and to rule with a strong hand. (4) Righteous living (v. 12). The grace of God teaches the saved man to live uprightly with reference to those about him. (5) Godly living (v. 12). It teaches him to so live in this present world as to enable him to meet God and abide in his fellowship. (6) It teaches the right motive in living (vv. 13, 14). The blessed hope of the glorious return of the Lord Jesus Christ is the grand incentive to holy living in this present world. He that has it will keep himself pure. (I John 3:3.)

Christian Life.

The problem of the Christian life finally is simplified to this—man has but to preserve the right attitude: To abide in Christ, to be in position, that is all.—Henry Drummond.

About Road Building.

Big Work of Peace Times—The News will Aid this Progressive Movement by Publishing Column Devoted to Highway Improvement.

In this community, as in every other, there is no more important job awaiting attention right now than that of building roads.

There are many reasons why road building should be resumed on a bigger scale than ever, now that the war is over. Residents of both city and country realize more than ever before that better means of transportation will work to the benefit of all. The farmer knows that he will profit by being able to get his products to the market with greater speed and less expense. The town or city dweller knows that he will benefit in equal measures.

And last, but not least the immediate beginning of road building work will help to prevent unemployment that otherwise may follow the demoblization of the country's military forces.

THE NEWS hopes to be able to do its part in fostering this progressive movement and, to that end, at least one column of this paper will be devoted to matter that will be of special interest in connection with the good roads movement. The articles that will be published will be of a practical nature and we feel sure will furnish some valuable information to those actively engaged in road building and to all those interested in the subject.

It will pay you to watch for these articles in the NEWS.

The alarm came from Spencerville and in short order the company were speedily on their way. Upon arriving they were directed to the Joel Betz home, and upon investigation found that the chimney was burning out. The draft had been shut off in the chimney by the flue being completely clogged by soot, and the smoke was coming out from all quarters. The boys responded promptly and were ready for business.

Important Co. Coming to Wayne.

An all-star cast in a new play entitled "A Good Bad Woman", by William Anthony McGuire, will be presented by H. H. Frazee at The Majestic, Ft. Wayne, May 20, for one performance only.

The all-star cast assembled includes Margaret Illington, now at the height and beauty of career. She is too well known and admired by the theatregoers to require a lengthy introduction, and is perhaps best recalled by those who only go to the theatre on special occasions by her wonderful work in "The Thief" and "Kindling". Her past two seasons have been divided between New York and Chicago, and this will be her first transcontinental tour in several years.

Robert Edeson, always a strong favorite throughout the length and breadth of America, is especially fitted for the role of the young husband who is still a most ardent lover and portrays the character with all the Edeson fascinations. Wilton Lackaye is said to give the finest performance of his eventful career, not excepting the famous "Trilby" production that proved one of the epoch making periods of the American stage. Katherine Kaelred is a well known English and Australian star, a former leading woman with Sir Herbert Tree and with George Arliss, but chiefly notable as the first modern type of adventuress, the vampire, through her extraordinary portrayal of the siren in "A Fool There Was". Miss Kaelred is best known locally as the most wicked heart breaker in the film drama and doubtless the movie fans will be anxious to observe her wiles in a real play.

There are a half dozen other well known players in the cast and Manager Frazee has not only attempted, but succeeded in assembling a stronger "All Star" organization than he had in the original "Fine Feathers" combination.

The settings and accessories are in keeping with the cast and the engagement promises to be an historical affair in local theatricals.

Landlord's Experience With Glando

Mr. Haushalter, the well known and energetic proprietor of the Hotel Paulding, Paulding, Ohio, says that for several years he suffered from a sluggish liver, backache and kidney trouble. He felt so drowsy and languid he could scarcely drag. He says: "I tried a number of kidney pills and liver remedies and found no relief until I used Glando, the great gland tonic. It proved to be just what I needed. I am thoroughly convinced I would have been flat on my back if I had not used this treatment; but, instead of being laid up, I am feeling fine and looking after my business every day. If I feel any indication of my old trouble returning, I take a Glando treatment and that sets me right."

Mr. Haushalter was dying of self-poisoning caused by an inactive liver. This weakened the kidneys and other glands of the body. If he had not found a remedy that renewed glandular activity and removed the poison, his life undoubtedly have paid the penalty.

Glando Tonic is the only remedy of its kind on the market and its numerous cures is proof enough of its great value to mankind. It is sold by druggists or will be sent direct by the Gland-Aid Co., Fort Wayne, Ind. Large treatment, $1.00.

Half Shoes for Women in the Black and the Brown Kid.

Women are wearing half shoes this spring, both because the new oxfords are so attractive in appearance, and because the season has been favorable for the very general wearing of low shoes.

Those who do not buy their shoes by chance, but use discrimination in making a selection, enjoy exercising their choice among the several new styles at Lawrence's. These show distinctive character, assured style, correct fitting quality, fine leathers, high quality shoemaking. They set properly, without gaping at side and heel. Also made to keep their shape in service, and to wear well.

ANTIQUITY OF DECORATIVE ART

Strange Sources From Which Pigments Used by Modern Painters Are Derived.

PRESERVATION OF SURFACES.

Crude but Effective Processes Employed by the Egyptians and Greeks of Pliny's Day—Noah Prudently Waterproofed the Ark.

Whether paint was invented in answer to a need for a preservative or to meet a desire for beauty is a question fully as knotty as the ancient one about the relative time of arrival of the chicken or the egg. It was invented, though, and it serves both purposes equally; so whether it is an offspring of mother necessity or an adopted son of beauty remains forever a disputed question.

The first men, cowering under the fierce and glaring suns of the biblical countries, constructed rude huts of wood to shelter them. The perishable nature of these structures caused rapid decay, and it is probable that the occupants, seeking some artificial means of preservation, hit upon the pigments of the earth in their search. It is perhaps natural to suppose that it was the instinct of preservation that led men to the search, although the glories of the sunsets and the beauties of the rainbow may have created a desire to imitate those wonders in their own dwellings.

The earliest record of the application of a preservative to a wooden structure dates from the ark, which was, according to the Bible, "pitched within and without." The pitch was a triumph of preservation whatever it lacked as a thing of beauty.

Decoration applied to buildings first comes to light with ancient Babylon, whose walls were covered with representations of hunting scenes and of combat. These were done in red and the method followed was to paint the scene on the bricks at the time of manufacture, assuring permanence by baking. Strictly speaking, this was not painting so much as it was the earliest manifestation of our own familiar kalsomining.

The first Hebrew to mention painting is Moses. In the thirty-third chapter of the book of Numbers he instructs the Israelites, "When ye have passed over the Jordan into the land of Canaan, then shall ye drive out all the inhabitants of the land from before you and destroy all their pictures. . . ."

At later periods the Jews adopted many customs of the peoples who successively obtained power over them and in the apocryphal book of the Maccabees is found this allusion to the art of decorating, "For as the master builder of a new house must care for the whole building, but he that undertaketh to set it out and paint it, must seek out things for the adorning thereof."

Although Homer gives credit to a Greek for the discovery of paint, the allusions to it in the books of Moses, the painted mummy cases of the Egyptians and the decorated walls of Babylon and Thebes fix its origin at a period long antecedent to the Grecian era. The walls of Thebes were painted 1,900 years before the coming of Christ and 900 years before "Omer smote his bloomin' lyre."

The Greeks recognized the value of paint as a preservative and made use of something akin to it on their ships. Pliny writes of the mode of boiling wax and painting ships with it, after which, he continues, "neither the sea, nor the wind, nor the sun can destroy the wood thus protected."

The Romans, being essentially a warlike people, never brought the decoration of buildings to the high plane it had reached with the Greeks. For all that the ruins of Pompeii show many structures whose mural decorations are in fair shape today. The colors used were glaring. A black background was the usual one and the combinations worked thereon red, yellow and blue.

In the early Christian era the use of mosaics for churches somewhat supplanted mural painting. Still, during the reign of Justinian the Church of Saint Sophia was built at Constantinople and its walls were adorned with paintings.

In modern times the uses of paint have come to be as numerous as its myriad shades and tints. Paint is unique in that its name has no synonym and for it there is no substitute material. Bread is the staff of life, but paint is the life of the staff.

No one thinks of the exterior of a wooden building now except in terms of paint coated. Interiors, too, from painted walls and stained furniture down to the lowliest kitchen utensil all receive their protective covering. Steel, so often associated with cement re-enforcing, is painted before it goes to give solidity to the manufactured stone. The huge girders of the skyscrapers are daubed an ugly but efficient red underneath the surface coat of black. Perhaps the best example of the value of paint on steel is found in the venerable Brooklyn bridge, on which a gang of painters is kept going continually. It is scarce possible to think of a single manufactured article which does not meet paint somewhere in the course of its construction. So has paint grown into the very marrow of our lives.

QUESTIONNAIRE

ANSWERS WHICH WILL SOLVE PERPLEXING PROBLEMS OF THIS RECONSTRUCTION ERA.

Query.—The government has launched an educational campaign to encourage building in order to put more men to work. Would not a similar movement to show how the old structures can be best and most economically repaired and made good as new also help?

Answer.—It is learned that such a plan is in effect and is linked directly with the Washington propaganda.

Industry must be turned back from works of war to the ways of peace. Employment must be found, in the meanwhile, for those whose occupation has been interrupted. There is no real surplus of labor in the United States. Rather there is a shortage, which would be acute if normal conditions were already restored, and one step towards restoring them will come with resumption of repair work.

Government restrictions, imposed by the necessities of the war program, have for many months past retarded or altogether prevented construction, improvement and repairs. These restrictions are now off, and there is scarcely a town, a city, a factory, a dwelling or a farm that does not reveal a crying need for prompt attention. Nothing delays such instant action except the feeling that prices are high for the time being and may be lower.

That is not logical. No matter what it costs to repair, the cost is less than the cost of neglect. No matter what the cost of paint, the wind and the weather will collect a higher bill in deterioration and decay.

Query.—What do you think of paint as an investment, aside from the appearance it lends? Does it really PAY to paint a house regularly, say, every three or four years?

Answer.—Good paint properly applied when needed is the main thing in making a house last long and well. A house worth $2,500 can be painted at a cost of about $125. In 60 years that house will need about 15 paintings, the total cost of which will be $1,895. Left without paint, such a house would fall into complete ruin in 30 years. So taking 60 years as a basis for our figures we find that with paint a home will last that time in good condition and will cost, plus paint, $4,375. Without paint the house would have to be rebuilt at the end of 30 years and would be ready for another complete renovation when the sixtieth year arrived. Cost, without paint, $5,000 for a home ready to fall to pieces. Does regular painting pay? As the old Dutch adage says:

"PAINT PAYS FOR ITSELF."

Query.—I have a quantity of old paint on hand. Can I use it for the first coat in repainting my barn?

Answer.—On no account should old paint which has become fat be used for priming either old or new work. Old paint in that condition is best used on a fence, brickwork or tinwork. If you value your barn sufficiently to paint it, do it the justice of a good job.

U. S. Invents Anti-Rust "Dope."

Incident to the war, the government has faced the problem that has so long proved baffling to commercial concerns of protecting iron and steel from rust. In an attempt to solve this federal specialists have perfected various forms of protective coatings. In this connection it may be pertinent to ask whether commercial uses will not be found also for the so-called "dopes" which the government has invented to be applied to airplane wings and which are possessed of valuable weather-resisting and fireproof qualities.

THE MOST DANGEROUS OF ALL DISEASES

No organs of the human body are so important to health and long life as the kidneys. When they slow up and commence to lag in their duties, look out! Danger is in sight.

Find out what the trouble is—without delay. Whenever you feel nervous, weak, dizzy, suffer from sleeplessness, or have pains in the back, wake up at once. Your kidneys need help. These are signs to warn you that your kidneys are not performing their functions properly. They are only half doing their work and are allowing impurities to accumulate and be converted into uric acid and other poisons, which are causing you distress and will destroy you unless they are driven from your system.

Deplorable Situation.

The following extract from a brigadier general's letter is quoted in London Truth as an example of a fact unfortunately expressed:

"Before the war a brigadier had four battalions. . . . To run this show in peace time he had a trained staff officer and four C. O.'s, with four adjutants. . . . Now he has no staff whatever. He has consequently, to do all his own thinking, and he has no trained brain to help him."

The Flow of Meat

Two-thirds of the live stock in the United States has to be raised in the West.

One-half of the consumers of meat live in the East.

In other words, most of the live stock is one or two thousand miles distant from most of the people who need it in the form of food.

Fifty years ago, when live stock was raised close to every consuming center, the country butcher could handle the job after a fashion.

But the job got too big.

Now millions of animals have to be moved hundreds of miles to millions of people. Somewhere on the way they have to be turned into meat.

The packers solved the problem. They set up plants where the "live haul" and the "meat haul" were in the right balance. They built up distributing systems—refrigerator cars, refrigerating plants, branch houses. They saved time, money and meat everywhere. The stockraiser benefited in better markets and higher prices; the consumer, in better meat and lower prices.

As the country grew, the packers had to grow, or break down. Because of its present size and efficiency, Swift & Company is able to perform its part in this service at a fraction of a cent per pound profit.

ROAD BUILDING

DRAINAGE FOR GOOD ROADS

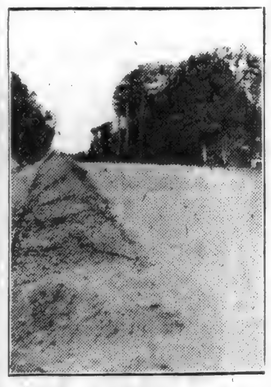
Essential Feature of an Improved Highway—Another Requisite Is Firm Foundation.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

An essential feature of an improved road is adequate drainage. Thorough drainage is so necessary that it is practically impossible to maintain a satisfactory road unless it be given proper attention. Another prime requirement wherever a hard surface road is to be constructed is a firm and unyielding foundation. As the quality of the soil has an important influence on the proper method of drainage and the type of foundation to be employed, much care and study must be devoted to the nature, type, and character of the soils in the section through which it is proposed to build a road.

The most important primary soils are classified as gravel, sand, and clay, but often many of the secondary or mixed soils, because of their more general occurrence in connection with road-building operations, are equally important. Such types as loam, marl, gumbo, and hardpan are representative of this order.

In the design of a road the drainage structures are planned to take care of water under three general conditions—rain that falls on a road surface or grade; rain that falls on contiguous land and flows in accumulated volume toward the road; and ground water from any immediate source. To meet these conditions use is found for special structures, including longitudinal side ditches, usually parallel, or approximately parallel to the center line; intercepting ditches to accommodate water whose approach so close to the roadway as the side ditches is likely to cause injury; lateral ditches or culverts to conduct accumulated water away from or under the road; and subdrains. In order to plan intelligently a system of drainage for any particular road, it is necessary to consider not only the local character of the soil composing the roadbed, but also the topography of the adjacent land, the amount and rate of rainfall and the availability of material suitable for use in constructing drains.



Water Drains Readily From This Type of Highway.

Surface drainage systems for roads consist of side ditches along the road, paved gutters (which are a development of side ditches and replace them) open intercepting ditches constructed to prevent water from reaching the road, and lateral or relief ditches to carry off the water which collects in the side ditches or in the intercepting ditches. Culverts and inclosed drains, which are constructed for the purpose of removing storm water from the side ditches or gutters, are essentially a part of the surface drainage system, and are not to be confused with subdrains which serve an entirely different purpose.

Where the grade of a road is so steep that the ordinary earth side ditches cannot be maintained satisfactorily at a reasonable cost, or where earth side ditches would be insanitary or appear unsightly, it is customary to provide paved gutters for removing the surplus water.

Drop inlets and catch basins are used to conduct water from side ditches or gutters into underground drains or culverts. On country roads they are used most frequently on side hill locations where the water collecting in the upper side ditch or gutter can be removed from the road at intervals by means of a culvert across to the lower side. Drop inlets usually are sufficient, and catch basins seldom are used in country road work, except where it is especially desirable to prevent the silt and other foreign material carried by the water from getting into the underground drainage structure.

GOOD ROADS PREVENT FIRES

National Forests Must Be Equipped With Highways, Trails and Lookout Stations.

National forests cannot be economically and efficiently protected against fires until they are well equipped with roads, trails, telephone lines and lookout stations, says the annual report of the chief forester of the United States service.

THE PET DOGS.

"There were five dogs," said Daddy, "who belonged to a boy named Jack."

"What were their names?" asked Nancy.

"How could he have ever thought of so many names?" asked Nick.

"They were all named," said Daddy, "and I will tell you their names in the order in which their sizes ran.

"Brutus was the largest of all. He was a big Newfoundland dog. Next came Bogi, another Newfoundland dog, but not so large as Brutus.

"Third came Patty, an Irish terrier. Then came Ouji, a cocker spaniel, and last came Susy, a little hunting dog. When they all stood together they looked like a flight of stairs, and just as though one could walk from Susy right up to Brutus.

"'Ah,' said Patty, 'I see something coming my way.'

"All the other dogs looked and Patty said, 'There is a bug and I'm going to catch it. I'm going to snap it up and swallow it down and enjoy it thoroughly.'

"But the bug said to itself, 'I'll play a joke on that dog.' And the bug did play a joke, a very mean joke.

"Patty snapped at the bug and then was about to swallow it when she had gotten the bug on her tongue, when what should that mean bug do but turn itself over so it attached itself to Patty's tongue, and so Patty couldn't swallow it or eat it or anything!

"Poor Patty! And the bug hurt!

"'Oh, what shall we do?' Brutus said, as he looked at Patty out of his sad eyes, for Brutus was very kind even though he was such a great big dog and so strong.

"Then Brutus had a fine idea. He ran for Jack, for he had seen Jack go to a nearby field to play baseball.

"He ran just as hard as he could and when he reached the field he didn't even notice the baseball which had just been hit with the bat.

"The boys were awfully frightened for a moment as they thought Brutus might get hit by accident with the hard ball, and they called out to him, but Brutus wasn't thinking of being afraid of anything.

"But luckily the ball didn't hit Brutus, and Brutus went right on up to his master, barking, and showing by his eyes that he wanted to have Jack follow him.

"'I guess Brutus wants me for something,' said Jack, 'for he wouldn't come to the baseball field if it weren't for something important.'

"So Jack ran quickly home, following Brutus. There he found Patty with the bug on her tongue and feeling most uncomfortable.

"Jack quickly took the bug off and then Patty no longer looked sick and miserable.

"She jumped up on Jack and wagged her tail and her eyes looked very glad and happy as she tried to thank her master. And then she did quite the sweetest thing ever a dog did. She suddenly seemed to know that Brutus was the one who had done everything.

"Jack had come quickly when Brutus had called him, for Jack was always so good to his pets, and Jack had been able to take the bug off her tongue because he had nice useful hands.

"But Patty knew that it was Brutus who had gone for Jack, and Brutus who had brought him back so quickly.

"And Patty went over to Brutus, looking so small beside the great big Newfoundland dog, and she licked Brutus' paws and sat down before him and rolled over on the grass, saying to Brutus that she was a very grateful, happy, little dog.

"Brutus licked her, too, to show he was glad he had been able to help her, and all the other dogs played around so joyfully.

"And then, for a special treat, every one of them had a bone, and Jack gave himself a piece of cake!" ended Daddy.

Getting Started.

What school life does for us is to get us started. The girl who talks of "finishing" an education is heard from less frequently than she used to be. For even the young realize that the owner of a college diploma is little more than started on an education. If in school we learn to work sincerely and systematically. If we acquire logical habits of thinking, as well as methodical habits of work, we have made a good start. If, on the contrary, we shirk wherever we can, we are starting wrong.—Girl's Danger In Abbreviation.

Even the school nurse has her fun. In a talk before the central philanthropic council the other day, Miss Helen R. Stewart of the board of health told of one little boy who, after he had been examined by the nurse, went to the teacher in tears, complaining that the nurse called him names.

When the teacher expressed her surprise, the boy sought to prove his case by handing her the card the nurse had given to him as her record of the examination.

"Look at that!" he cried.

"Poor nut," read the card.

"Poor nutrition," explained the teacher, finally sending the child away with a better opinion of the nurse.—Dallas News.

Tirpitz has lost all his fortune. His son is a clerk in a bank at Zurich, and his daughter is a governess in a Zurich family.

To avoid paying the German war tax of 1913 Tirpitz invested his money in Italian securities, with the result that he is now penniless. What a patriot!

"By the time half a dozen whangs have changed he has scrabbled into a garment or two and is out on his front porch, hollering to the people running by just where he knows the fire is."

"He should be of considerable assistance to the volunteer firemen and others in sending them in the proper direction," commented the interested guest.

"Yes, pa."

"The dictionary says a euphemism is 'a figure of speech by which a word or phrase more agreeable or less offensive is substituted for one more accurately expressive of what is meant,' as in the case of the society reporter who states that a widow who has been married three or four times is 'led to the altar' by a wealthy old codger who never had the slightest notion of getting married until he faced the preacher."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

America's Immortals

Most striking instances of gallantry for which the Distinguished Service Cross has been awarded Military men of other countries were amazed at the fighting qualities of the soldiers from America—the land of peace. They were amazed at the spirit with which Pershing's fighters went into battle. Thousands of American soldiers won foreign decorations, as well as the Distinguished Service Cross of their own country, in recognition of acts of supreme heroism or sublime self-sacrifice. Following are a few of the most notable cases of bravery on the part of American soldiers in action, selected by General Pershing's own staff as worthy of special commendation.

EMORY J. PIKE,
Lieutenant Colonel, D. M. G. O., 82nd Division.

Lieut. Col. Emory J. Pike (deceased) was decorated for conspicuous gallantry in action near Vandieres, France, September 15, 1918. Having gone forward to reconnoiter new machine gun positions, Colonel Pike offered his assistance in reorganizing advance infantry units which had become disorganized during a heavy artillery shelling. Colonel Pike succeeded in locating only about 20 men, but with these he advanced and when later joined by several infantry platoons, rendered inestimable service in establishing outposts, encouraging all by his cheerfulness, in spite of the extreme danger of the situation. When a shell had wounded one of the men in the outpost, Colonel Pike immediately went to his aid, and was severely wounded himself when another shell burst in the same place. While waiting to be brought to the rear Colonel Pike continued in command, still retaining his jovial manner of encouragement, directing the reorganization until the position could be held. The entire operation was carried on under terrific bombardment and the example of courage and devotion to duty as set by Colonel Pike, established the highest standard of morale and confidence to all under his charge. The wounds he received were the cause of his death. His daughter, Martha Agnes Pike, lives in Des Moines, Ia.

HAROLD I. JOHNSTON,
Private, First Class, Co. A, 356th Infantry.

Private Johnston was awarded the Distinguished Service Cross for conspicuous gallantry, near Peuilly, France, November 9, 1918. When information was desired as to the enemy's position on the opposite side of the river Meuse, Private Johnston, with another soldier, volunteered without hesitation, and swam the river to reconnoiter the exact location of the enemy. He succeeded in reaching the opposite bank, despite the evident determination of the enemy to prevent a crossing. Having obtained the information, he again entered the water for his return. This was accomplished after a severe struggle, which so exhausted him that he had to be assisted from the water, after which he rendered his report of the exploit. His mother, Mrs. Belle Renshaw, lives in Denver, Colo.

JAMES A. SHERET,
Sergeant, Company F, 108th Infantry.

Conspicuous gallantry in action near Ronssoy, France, September 29, 1918, when he sold his life dearly, won the Distinguished Service Cross for Sergeant Sheret. During the operations against the Hindenburg line this soldier displayed exceptional bravery in several single-handed attacks on enemy positions. After rushing two hostile posts and killing the occupants with his revolver, Sergeant Sheret attacked four of the enemy in a machine gun position, killed one of them before he was himself surrounded and killed by the other three. Sergeant Sheret's mother lives at 28 West Park street, Albion, N. Y.

BEDFORD B. LUNSFORD,
Corporal, Company M, 117th Infantry.

Corp. Lunsford (deceased) was decorated for extraordinary heroism in action near Bellicourt, France, October 7, 1918. When the line was held up by enemy machine gun fire Corp. Lunsford strapped an automatic rifle to his shoulder and advanced in the face of machine gun fire. Firing as he went forward, he killed four of the enemy before he fell dead, riddled with bullets. Thomas Lunsford, his father, lives in Mount Vernon, Tenn.

NELS WOLD,
Private, Co. I, 168th Infantry.

Private Wold (deceased) was decorated for conspicuous gallantry in action near Cheppy, France, September 26, 1918. Private Wold rendered most valiant service in aiding the advance of his company which had been held up by machine gun nests. He advanced with one other soldier and silenced the guns, bringing with him upon his return 11 prisoners. Later the same day he jumped from a trench and rescued a comrade who was about to be shot by a German officer, killing the officer during the exploit. His actions were entirely voluntary, and it was while attempting to rush a fifth machine gun nest that he was killed. The advance of his company was mainly due to his great courage and devotion to duty. His home address was Kelly Lake, Minn.

HARRY L. CAUSLAND,
Private, Company I, 357th Infantry.

Private Causland was decorated for conspicuous heroism in action near Bantheville, France, October 24, 1918. Private Causland was acting as ammunition carrier for a machine gun, which was supporting a raid on the enemy by the infantry. While this gun was being operated from a shell hole its ammunition became exhausted and the corporal called back to the carriers, who were in shell holes twenty-five yards behind, to bring up more ammunition. Though the gun position was under heavy enemy fire, Private Causland called out, "I'll take it," and rushed forward with two boxes of ammunition. Just as he reached the emplacement, with the ammunition, he was killed instantly by a machine gun bullet. Private Causland's home was at Anacortes, Wash.

HARRY J. DAVIS,
Corporal, Company D, 60th Infantry.

Corp. Davis received the Distinguished Service Cross for extraordinary heroism in action at Cunel, France, October 14, 1918. While the advance of his platoon was being held up by deadly enfilading fire of the enemy, Corp. Davis voluntarily rushed over open ground, through direct machine gun fire, for a distance of over 100 meters, and, with the aid of his bayonet, attacked the nest. He killed both the gunners, thereby silencing the fire, but, during the combat, he himself was severely wounded. It was due to his prompt and fearless action that further advance of his platoon was made possible. Corp. Davis' home is in Philadelphia.

JOHN PRATT,
Corporal, Co. L, 166th Infantry.

Corporal Pratt was decorated for conspicuous gallantry in action with the enemy near Chevenges, France, November 7, 1918. Corporal Pratt was on duty as a runner at the headquarters of the advance battalion when the position was being heavily shelled by the enemy. Seeing two soldiers lying severely wounded two hundred yards away in an open field, he crawled out under intense fire, gave them first aid treatment and then dragged them, one at a time, back to the dressing station. His exceptional bravery enabled the two wounded men to secure immediate medical attention and saved their lives. His home address is Toledo, O.

HARRY C. SESSIONS,
Second Lieutenant, Co. I, 372nd Infantry.

Lieut. Sessions was awarded the Distinguished Service Cross for unusual bravery in action near Bussy Farm, France. Although he was on duty in the rear, Lieut. Sessions joined his battalion and was directed by his battalion commander to locate openings through the enemy's wire and attack positions. He hastened to the front and cut a large opening through the wire in the face of terrific machine gun fire. Just as his task was completed he was so severely wounded that he had to be carried from the field. His gallant act cleared the way for the rush that captured enemy positions.

PHILIP C. KATZ,
Sergeant, Company C, 363d Infantry.

Sergt. Katz was decorated for conspicuous gallantry in action near Ectisefontaine, France, September 26, 1918. After his company had withdrawn for a distance of 200 yards on a line with the units on its flanks, Sergt. Katz learned that one of his comrades had been left wounded in an exposed position at the point from which the withdrawal had taken place. Voluntarily crossing an area swept by heavy machine gun fire, Sergt. Katz advanced to where the wounded soldier lay and carried him to safety. His mother, Mrs. Jennie Katz, lives in San Francisco.

ALBERT MEYER,
Private, 79th Company.

Private Meyer, who makes his home with his father, Gustave Meyer, 262 West 127th street, New York City, won the Distinguished Service Cross for extraordinary heroism in action near Thiaucourt, France, September 15, 1918. While on duty as stretcher bearer for his company, Private Meyer rushed into the open to rescue another soldier threatened with capture, in the face of a large force of advancing Germans. He killed two of the enemy and brought in the soldier to a place of safety.

Forged Art Work as Rodin's.

The French police arrested at Asnieres a man named Boyon de Cimlus, at whose house they seized a large number of bronzes, alleged to be falsely inscribed with the name of Rodin. Two metal founders and an Italian sculptor of repute were also arrested. The action of the authorities arose out of information furnished by M. Benedite, the curator of the Luxembourg and Rodin museums, who reported the sale of numerous counterfeit Rodins, of which one lot alone was bought by a dealer for $6,000.

HAS SEEN AMERICAN HUSTLE

And Therefore General Allenby Also Sees the Point of Rather Good, If Old, Story.

General Allenby in London was speaking on the remarkable speed with which America created an army and got it overseas.

"Now that I have seen what I have seen," he said, "I get the point of a story regarding American hustle that I heard several years ago.

"'I hear Smith has left you and gone into business for himself,' said a friend to the boss. 'Was he really a good salesman?'

"'I'll say he was,' sighed the man who had lost Smith. 'Why, when that bird dies he won't be in hell five minutes before he'll sell the devil a card-index system and an adding machine.'"

At Half Rates.

Several years ago, when I was deputy recorder of an Illinois county, I witnessed the wedding of a prosperous young farmer.

The ceremony was performed by the county judge, whose customary fee was $2; however, in cases where the bridegroom happened to be well-to-do, the old judge made no charge, leaving the size of the fee up to him, and, in such instances, usually received a $5 or $10 bill.

So in this case, when asked his fee, the judge said, "Well, I always leave that to the bridegroom." So the young man handed him a sealed envelope and departed with his bride.

After the couple were well on their way home the judge, feeling sure of having received a good-sized fee, carefully tore open the envelope. It contained a neatly folded $1 bill.—Chicago Tribune.

Grain Seeds From Western Canada Do Well in Ohio.

Demand for Them Is Bound to Add Value to the Land of Our Northern Neighbor, Now to Be Had Cheap.

A large area of the land in several counties in Ohio prepared for spring seeding will be seeded with Marquis wheat—a spring variety. This wheat is imported from Western Canada. It was about three years ago that the first of this seed was imported into the States, and the result, watched each succeeding year, proved that Ohio soil and spring seeding was a success. The demand for the seed has now become so great that one of the largest seed houses in the state, that has been purchasing from Western Canada farmers and importing it, has decided to purchase a large block of land in that country for the purpose of growing the grain themselves. They will devote a considerable portion of their Western Canada holdings to growing oats, barley and rye. Their action is a strong indorsement of the product. For some time past a considerable quantity of seed oats has also been imported. The prolific yield reported was what probably gave an impetus to the introduction of wheat.

It was found, though, after a couple of years the quality of the oats, as well as the yield, began to deteriorate when grown seed was used, making it necessary for fresh importations every couple of years. It is possible that the same experience may follow the growing of Western Canada wheat. In fact it is quite probable, and the Ohio farmer will find it necessary to import every two years.

With the success that has followed the Ohio farmers' experiments with this imported seed it is possible other states now growing winter wheat will begin growing spring wheat. It may therefore be taken for granted that Western Canada, in addition to its ability to produce hundreds of millions of bushels of wheat possessing the greatest percentage of gluten of any wheat in the world, will shortly be called upon to provide the seed that will be grown on the additional acres in the United States that may be devoted to spring wheat.

It is a well-established fact that the further north any product of the farm can be brought to a state of maturity, the more vigorous it becomes. This has been proven in the grains that have been produced in Western Canada; it has been shown in the development of its horses, its cattle, its sheep and its hogs; also in its people. The neighbor to the north really has a splendid future before him, and many years will not have passed before the lands that are selling today at much less than their producing value will bring prices more commensurate with their true worth than they do today. Think of lands that yield in their operation a profit of from fifteen to twenty-five dollars an acre a year selling at figures less than $40 an acre. It does not require a mathematician to figure the percentage of profit. It is unfair to these lands to ask them to continue these profits for long. So it is safe to make the prediction that in a very few years they will place themselves on a parity with other lands that today produce less and sell for much more.—Advertisement.

Back Lame and Achy?

There's little peace when your kidneys are weak and while at first there may be nothing more serious than dull backache, sharp, stabbing pains, headaches, dizzy spells and kidney irregularities, you must act quickly to avoid the more serious trouble, dropsy, gravel, heart disease, Bright's disease. Use Doan's Kidney Pills, the remedy that is so warmly recommended everywhere by grateful users.

My kidneys were in such bad condition that I could hardly pass the kidney secretions and they contained sediment. I tried different remedies but grew worse instead of better. I finally used Doan's Kidney Pills and the first box relieved me and in three months I was completely cured."

A Bloodless Duel.

If the new fashion of sending challenges to be fought out in the air becomes general, duels, like other luxuries, will become very costly.

In pre-war days Parisians used to reckon that £4 would cover the expenses incidental to a duel, though, to do things in style, considerably more had to be spent.

Aurelien Scholl, the boulevardier journalist, relates that a man whom he knew as a frequenter of his favorite cafe sent a challenge and borrowed one hundred francs from Scholl for expenses. He never saw his money again. "The duel proved bloodless," says Scholl. "I was the only person touched."

Good Prizes Hung Up.

Farmers' Institute to Give Liberal Prizesto Winnersin Pig Growing Contest.

The Coburn Corner's Farm Club started something when they proposed to put on a pig feeding contest for the boys and girls of their neighborhood. Just watch for the results next fall. Some of our old hog feeders are going to get an eye-opener and a lot of boys and girls are bound to get some experience that will be of inestimable value to them and to the community. The Tri-Township Institute has became in erested in the matter and as a result the contest will be open to all boys and girls from ten to eighteen years of age in the townships of Spencer, Concord and Newville

The prizes have been fixed at $15, $12 and $10, the amounts to be applied on expenses to the Purdue Short Course. The money is given in this way that the boys and girls will reap a four-fold benefit. First they will get the returns from their porkers, will gain some valuable experience in feeding, will have a chance at the prizes and best of all the winners will get the Short Course, which is of great value to any boy or girl.

We believe this move is one in the right direction and that the Tri-Township Institute in this manner will be doing some very practical work. The contest will be started in several weeks under the direction of County Agent Arehart and the Coburn Corner's committee of three, H. O. Waltz, Clyde Hart and Saxe Hadsell, will supervise the work.

Boys and girls, get busy. Get the best pig you can find and go in to win. Show dad how to grow hogs. Further announcements will follow.

Obituary

Barbara Ann Gillen, daughter of Wm. and Anna Gillen, was born in Fayette Co., Penn., October 4, 1856, and died May 5, 1919, east of St. Joe, at the age of 62 years, 7 months and 1 day. When about two years of age, she with her parents moved to Berry County, O., where they lived until she was eighteen years of age.

About a year after the death of the mother, her father and children moved to Paulding County, Ohio. She was united in marriage to Morris Lothamer, of Payne, Ohio, on February 8, 1878. To this union was born one son, Francis A. Lothamer. She leaves to mourn her departure: the husband, one son, three sisters and four brothers, namely, Mrs. Ella Wahl, Mrs. Fannie Crandall, Mrs. Lizzie Auspach, John, Charles and William Gillen, of Paulding County, Ohio, and Otto Gillen, of Toledo, Ohio.

Her illness has been of several months, while at times she was confined to her bed. Several years of her life has been spent in the Coburntown settlement and she will be missed by her many friends.

The funeral services were held from the St. Joe Lutheran Church, Thursday afternoon, conducted by Rev. A. K. Mumma. Burial at Riverside. E R. Kinsey, director.

Car Hits An Obstacle.

Laney Gee had a little mix-up with his auto Saturday afternoon, as he started down Widney Avenue. Mr. Gee had noticed that his engine was not just right and he was trying to locate the trouble by listening very carefully and not thinking where he was driving. His car kept leading off to the west and struck the tie stone to the east of Mrs. Mary Bowman's residence. The front axel was bent, the tire torn from the rim and some minor damages resulted.

Is Going to Build.

It's only a matter of a few months now until business at St. Joe will be back to normal as before the disastrous fire. Mrs. Kate A. Leighty, after purchasing the Dunkle property, immediately begun to clear the debris until now a great change has been made. A gang of men are busily engaged in the work and it will only be a matter of a couple of weeks until the work of construction will be commenced.

We understand that plans are being made for the erection of two business rooms of the latest type and conveniences afforded a modern building in a town the size of St. Joe.

To further show the appreciation of our many citizens, to Mrs. Leighty for her great interest in St. Joe, a bee was planned for Tuesday of this week, to assist in cleaning up the lot and about 20 men gathered and worked faithful all day long. At the time of the burning of the Dunkle buildings a day's work was given to clean up the street and walks and it is no more than right that a move of this kind be given the present owners. Many who were expected on the job, Tuesday, were unable to work but there will still be other days for them to show their loyalty.

Business Logic

—o—

This nation—your country and ours—has an unpaid balance of some billions of dollars of war debt—for a victory we are now enjoying.

The nation must pay this debt, if it is to continue to exist as a nation among the nations of the world.

There are only two ways that the nation can secure the money to pay for this debt, by the sale of bonds or notes, and by taxes

Taxes are already high and yet are insufficient to meet our outstanding war obligations. Thereforoe, bond or notes, must be sold.

Again, there are only two ways that bonds or notes can be sold—to the banks and to the people.

If they are sold to the banks, then industry and commerce—your business will suffer. The banks would be unable to purchase several billion dollars worth of Victory Notes and still continue to loan money to business men at a fair rate and in sufficient quantities to supply their needs.

It is therefore, good business logic—your business and our business to invest in the Victory Notes as large as we can for America's welfare and for our own.

It is quite a difficult task to attempt to place a correct estimate of cash value on all sorts and conditions of land and improvements, and some mistakes have probably been made.

Bayman-Shilling Case Is Set for Trial.

Charles T. Bayman has filed in the DeKalb Circuit Court, through his attorney, J. M. Life, an ammended complaint, in two paragraphs against Josephus Shilling, asking for damages in the sum of two thousand dollars. The first paragraph is based on Mr. Shilling refusing to turn over to Mr. Bayman certain notes which Mr. Bayman claims that under a contract should have been cancelled over two years ago. The second paragraph sets out that Mr. Bayman claims that during the latter part of the time that Mr. Bayman was running the mill was being run at a financial loss and that Mr. Shilling solicited Bayman to continue to run the mill, even at a financial loss, assuring Bayman that he would make good to him all such loss, as it would seriously hurt the sale of the mill if Bayman should close it down at the time that Mr. Shilling was trying to sell it. Mr. Bayman claims that Mr. Shilling has not made good his agreement. The case has been set down for trial on Thursday, June 5th.

SPRAYING NECESSARY TO INSURE CLEAN APPLES FOR STORING FOR WINTER USE

It Is Neither Difficult Nor Expensive to Spray the Few Trees on the Home Place.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Summer spraying of apples in the home orchard is particularly important this year with all food products on a rising market. Under the present unusual conditions, when it is desirable to save staple foods and reduce the labor expended in producing foods, special attention should be given to the fruit already planted on practically every farm and on many city lots, say the experts of the United States department of agriculture.

There are few farms that do not have a few fruit trees, and in many cases the usable fruit does not pay rent on the ground the trees occupy; not because the trees are barren nor because they are of worthless varieties, but through neglect of the owner to spray.

Spraying has been so often considered by the uninitiated a complex and expensive operation that many farmers have decided to trust in Providence for their fruit crop and leave the growing of wormless and disease-free fruit to the commercial fruit grower. This not only deprives the family of the necessary diet elements found in fruit, but means paying high prices for food to take the place of the fruit that might easily be grown.

Spray materials and methods have been so simplified in the last few years that it is neither difficult nor expensive to spray the few trees on the home place. Spray mixtures may be so combined that several diseases and insect pests are reached with the one application.

The summer applications are particularly important where clean, sound apples that will keep in storage for winter use are desired.

Summer Spray Schedules.

The first summer spray should be put on just before the blossoms open. This is for the plum curculio, the bud moth, case bearers, the tent caterpillar, cankerworms and apple scab. Use 1½ gallons of lime-sulphur solution to each 50 gallons of water. Add to this 2 pounds of arsenate of lead paste. If apple aphids or apple red bugs are much in evidence, add ½ pint of 40 per cent nicotine sulphate.

The second spray must be applied as soon as the blossoms fall. It controls the same diseases and insects as the first summer spray, and in addition, the codling moth and leaf-spot. Use the same mixture.

This is the most important application for both the apple scab and the codling moth, so that careful and thorough work must be done if scab-free and wormless apples are desired. Failure to do thorough spraying at this time for the codling moth cannot be remedied by future applications. Apply the spray with sufficient force to drive it into the calyx end of each little apple.

For the third application use the same mixture three to four weeks after the blossoms fall, unless apple blotch has been prevalent in former years. In the latter case, use Bordeaux mixture (3-4-50 formula) not less than three weeks after the blossoms have fallen. This is the second treatment for codling moth and leaf-spot, and gives further protection against apple scab and some insects.

For the fourth spray use Bordeaux mixture (3-4-50) with arsenate of lead added, eight to nine weeks after the petals fall. This controls the bitter rot, and the arsenical added gets the second brood of the codling moth. If the bitter rot has been serious in former years this application should be advanced about one week.

In ordinary seasons, especially in the more northern apple-growing sections, four applications will be sufficient to protect the fruit from the various insects and diseases mentioned. In the central states, where blotch and bitter rot are prevalent, two more applications will be necessary for fall and winter apples. In the case of summer apples only the first three applications are necessary.

Two More Sprays.

If conditions make more spraying necessary to insure good fruit, apply a fifth application two to three weeks after the fourth. This is the second application for bitter rot. Use Bordeaux mixture. Since little extra expense comes from adding arsenate of lead, this may be profitably done as further insurance against late-appearing larvae of the codling moth.

The sixth spray is a further treatment for bitter rot and is ordinarily sufficient to carry the fruit through to maturity. Use Bordeaux mixture two to three weeks after the fifth application.

For the man with only a small orchard a spray outfit may be rigged up cheaply at home. Get an old vinegar or whisky barrel and a force pump, or barrel outfits may be obtained already assembled.

There is no good excuse for doing without a plentiful supply of choice apples if you already have trees of bearing age.

WILD WATERFOWL IN DEMAND FOR MARKET

Liberal Provisions Made for Propagation of Game Birds

Materially Add to Food Supply and Afford Pleasant and Profitable Occupation for Large Number of Country People.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

General prohibition of the sale of migratory birds has created a great demand for domesticated birds to supply the market. To meet these demands, the regulations under the migratory-bird treaty act, made in 1916, between the United States and Great Britain for the protection of game birds migrating between this country and Canada, make liberal provisions for the propagation of migratory waterfowl. These provisions apply to all persons who possess migratory waterfowl.

Permits are issued free of charge by the secretary of agriculture, through the bureau of biological survey, authorizing persons to acquire a limited number of wild waterfowl to be used as the nucleus of a breeding stock, or to strengthen the strain of birds already possessed, and to possess and traffic in domesticated migratory waterfowl for food purposes.

Aside from the necessity of obtaining federal permits, marking packages in which the birds or eggs are shipped, and reporting to the secretary of agriculture on operations under the permits, the breeding and traffic in the birds is carried on entirely under the supervision of the states.

The fact that many states have enacted no laws on the subject, together with lack of uniformity in the laws of other states, has deterred many persons from engaging in the business, but it has been demonstrated that many species of waterfowl, particularly black and mallard ducks, can be raised profitably on lands unsuited to agriculture and also in connection with agricultural pursuits. There seems to be a growing sentiment in favor of more uniform legislation in order that domesticated birds may reach the markets with the least inconvenience to the breeders, while at the same time the protection of wild birds may be safeguarded properly. This could be accomplished in a simple and inexpensive manner, it is believed, if a marking and tagging system similar to one in successful operation in New York state for many years were adopted. Enactment of proper laws by all states, giving full recognition to this legitimate business, department specialists believe, would encourage persons to propagate wild fowl in captivity, thus materially adding to the food supply and affording a pleasant and profitable occupation for a large number of people.

GENERAL FARM NOTES

Be a business farmer.

Improvements well made are most economical.

The best preparation that can be given to soil is highly desirable; but it cannot compensate for cultivation.

There is no government limit on agricultural lime now, and you ought not to limit its use on land that needs it.

Alexandria. — Farmers in Monroe township have completed the plowing of all fields and are ready for planting. The acreage for the planting of corn around Alexandria is more this year than last.

Evansville.—The rains and frosts of the last two weeks have combined to injure the crops in Vanderburg county and other counties in the pocket. The rainfall here since April has amounted to nearly three inches.

Evansville. — Indiana's twenty-four southern counties, which are included in the Eighth federal reserve district, with headquarters at St. Louis, subscribed their quota of $13,891,700 to the Victory Liberty loan. The district also is on the honor list.

Shelbyville. — The Shelbyville city council has repealed an ordinance prohibiting the sale of firecrackers or fireworks of any sort in the city. Firecrackers not exceeding three inches in length and three-quarters of an inch in diameter may be sold.

Michigan City.—Mayor Fred C. Miller has been granted naturalization papers in the circuit court. Miller's citizenship predicament caused widespread interest when efforts were made to prevent him taking office. He took possession, however, before the courts took action, and a suit contesting the election is still pending.

Indianapolis.—The women of Indiana have become for the second time in the history of the state, voting citizens. The law passed two years ago, which gave them unlimited suffrage, was declared unconstitutional. Now they have obtained this privilege through the proclamation of Governor Goodrich making the laws of the 1919 legislature effective.

Gary.—Cases against 11 persons accused of having been leaders in demonstrations held here recently by radical Socialists, who call themselves Red Republicans, were dismissed in the city court at the request of State's Attorney Hunter. He has filed charges in the Lake county criminal court at Crown Point against the defendants, in which they are accused of rioting.

Indianapolis. — George C. Bryant, field agent of the United States department of agriculture, after inspecting wheat fields in 14 Indiana counties, issued a warning to farmers of the state to inspect their fields at once to look for the new wheat disease, "Australian take-all," which has appeared in some counties. The disease was found in five of the counties of the 14 Mr. Bryant inspected on this trip.

Noblesville.—E. N. Hinshaw, living east of Noblesville, one of the best-known fruit growers in central Indiana, reports the result of his examination of damage to fruit by the recent cold weather. Hinshaw examined 125 cherry trees on his farm and found two-thirds of them to be free from damage. He says all of the peaches are not killed, and the same condition exists as to pears. Apples have been damaged, but are not a total loss.

Indianapolis.—J. M. Kimmel of Lafayette began work with the state highway commission as chief of the bureau for co-operation with counties. Under the new state highway commission law the commission may extend assistance to counties on roads constructed under county supervision. Inspectors and other assitance will be supplied at actual cost. H. K. Bishop, chief engineer for the commission, said that the commission would not dictate county plans, but was ready for consultation and other assistance when requested.

Columbia City.—As the result of a contest filed by Henry J. Ummel, defeated Democratic candidate for the office, against Harvey Harshbarger, successful Republican candidate, Whitley county is without a county assessor. L. H. Wrigley, judge of the Whitley circuit court, has held that Harshbarger was not a freeholder for four years prior to the last general election, as required by the statute defining the eligibility of assessors, and that Ummel, who filed the suit, was not elected and should pay the costs of the proceedings.

Indianapolis.—The story of the machinations of an alleged syndicate of swindlers whose cunning may rival that of the notorious Maybray gang is being slowly unfolded by federal authorities here. Meanwhile 12 men charged with being members of the syndicate, which had its headquarters at Muncie, are under arrest for using the mails to defraud. The investigation has progressed far enough to convince federal authorities that the gang gleaned a huge fortune from wealthy men of Illinois, Indiana, Michigan, Ohio and Missouri, and then sealed the lips of the victims by staging a "fatal" prize fight.

Hartford City.—The "lid" is on in Hartford City. Everything has been ordered closed on Sundays with the exception of the churches and the city waterworks.

Indianapolis.—The public service commission will appeal to the supreme court from the decision of John H. Edwards, special judge, in the Jackson circuit court, in the Seymour water case. Ele Stansbury, attorney general, has been instructed to appeal the case. Judge Edwards recently ruled that the commission had no jurisdiction over the franchise water rates in Seymour.

Muncie.—Sixty-six men applied for work at the United States employment bureau here last week, while 87 applications by employers to obtain men for jobs were placed on file.

Milton.—Farmers of this township say that the wheat is undamaged. Corn that has been planted is not coming up rapidly, but examination proves that it is all right so far and sprouting in the ground.

Marion.—Joshua Strange of this city, chairman of the executive committee of the Farmers' National congress, has issued the official call for the next annual session, which will be held October 28-31 at Hagerstown, Md.

Evansville.—Steamboats, towboats and tugboats operating on the lower Ohio river and tributaries are having a hard time to get enough rousters to keep the boats moving, although wages paid to rousters this year are the highest ever known.

Vincennes.—The school enumeration in Knox county outside the city of Vincennes shows a loss over the figures for last year. The total enumeration for 1918, excluding the cities of Vincennes and Bicknell, was 7,085. This year it was 6,856. The city of Bicknell showed a gain of 86 over last year, the total figures for 1918 being 2,255 and for 1919 the report shows a total of 2,341.

Jeffersonville.—Corn planting is late in Clark county and many farmers have not started. Recent rains have made the ground bad for working, but some farmers in the more fertile parts of the county had their corn in before the rains. Reports indicate that wheat has been uninjured by the cold. Reports on berries and fruit are brighter than a week ago. Many berry plants blossomed again after the recent severe frosts.

Indianapolis.—Bankers representing eight Indiana counties, meeting here, predicted an era of prosperity unequaled in the United States. Reports from the eight counties showed that while each had subscribed its quota of every Liberty loan, deposits now in the banks of those counties are greater than before the war. More than 200 bankers attended the meeting from Tipton, Boone, Hamilton, Morgan, Hancock, Marion, Johnson and Hendricks counties.

Petersburg. — More than 4,000 pounds of cream were marketed in Petersburg one day recently. The cream industry has become a big factor to the farmers in the southern part of the state, and if the business keeps on steadily increasing it will be necessary to put a cream train on the E & I. railroad. There is no creamery here and the cream is shipped to Worthington, Danville and Evansville. Over 200 farmers are selling cream to Petersburg buyers.

Indianapolis.—After July 1, under the new Indiana baking law, the state board of health will prohibit the use of any basement or cellar for hotel kitchen, dining room, restaurant or cafe purposes, or as a place for the serving of any kind of food, except after an inspection and the issuance of a permit. The regulation does not apply to basements or cellars now so used, provided they conform to the sanitary laws of the state and to the rules of the board of health covering such matters.

Indianapolis.—H. J. Elam of Indianapolis, appearing before the state board of tax commissioners as attorney for the Cincinnati, Indianapolis & Western railroad, said the railroads already are paying more than their share of the taxes, and for that reason the 1919 assessments should not be increased. He said the people have gotten into the habit of having the railroads pay more than their share. The C. I. & W. pays 2.4 per cent of all the taxes in Union, Fayette, Rush, Shelby and Hancock counties, he said.

Indianapolis. — Governor Goodrich has selected five men from the joint purchasing committee of the 18 state institutions who are to constitute the subcommittee which shall have active charge of buying for the state institutions. The five are: Dr. S. B. Smith of Richmond, superintendent of the Eastern Hospital for Insane; Charles A. McGonagle of Plainfield, superintendent of the Indiana Boys' school; Moses Epstein of Frankfort, member of the board of trustees Northern Hospital for Insane; Joseph Henning of Anderson, member of board of trustees Indiana reformatory, and Maurice C. Shelton of Rochester, member of board of trustees state prison.

Indianapolis.—Arthur C. Whiteside, funeral director who holds the contract for burying the pauper dead of Marion county, is held under $5,000 bonds, charged with irregularities in disposing of pauper dead and filing false claims against the county. The arrest of Whiteside followed charges filed by the state field examiners. The charges include: That he buried paupers in shallow graves. That he presented claims for burials in cases where bodies were turned over to medical schools. That he did not provide coffins in every case, as required, but used crude boxes. That he did not provide shrouds for bodies, and in some cases buried bodies practically nude.

Indianapolis. — Regulations recommended by an executive committee of the Indiana Dairy Products Manufacturers' association have been promulgated by Harry E. Barnard, state food and drug commissioner, for the future guidance of business allied in the association, in reference to the sanitary and health laws of the state. The associations have pledged their assistance in enforcing the regulations, in line with the policy of the food and drug division to make each line of food producers and handlers responsible as far as possible for their own proper policing.

MERELY PIECE OF FOOLING

Course Taken by Germany Resembles Closely Neat Trick That Is Credited to Sheridan.

"The Germans, by fooling us with German bolshevism, hoped to escape the payment of war indemnities," said a congressman.

"It reminds me of a story about Sheridan, the spendthrift playwright.

"Gunter, the confectioner, left his statement with Sheridan one morning, and a few hours later Hanson, the ironmonger, called.

"Hanson was very pressing on the subject of his account. He harangued and he harangued. Sheridan, broke, as usual, paced the floor in despair.

"But suddenly an idea struck the spendthrift and he said:

"'You know Gunter?'

"'One of the safest men in London,' Hanson replied.

"'Then you will be satisfied if I give you his bill for the amount?'

"'Certainly.'

"Sheridan thereupon handed the ironmonger Gunter's neatly folded account, snatched up his hat and rushed forth."

Suffered for Years

Miserable From Kidney Trouble. Doan's Made Mr. Barnett Strong and Well.

"I suffered untold agony with my kidneys for years," says John Barnett, 30 Virginia Place, Buffalo, N. Y. "Sometimes I felt that I would burn up with fever, but every now and then would have a severe chill. Often my clothes were wringing wet with perspiration. The kidney secretions were unnatural in color and odor and burned terribly. At night my shoes were so tight on my feet that I could hardly get them off and my hands swelled so I couldn't hold a teacup. My back! Oh, how it ached! I walked with two canes and was all bent over like an aged man. When the terrible pains shot through my kidneys, my knees would give way and many times I had to be lifted to my feet by people on the street. I didn't care whether I lived or died. I was so miserable. I finally used Doan's Kidney Pills and they cured me of all kidney trouble. Doan's made me strong and well."

LOOKED LIKE LABOR WASTED

Board's Visit Over, Small Boy Couldn't See Further Necessity for So Much Soap and Water.

He was a new little boy at the orphanage and was much impressed by all the scrubbing and cleaning he saw done there, more so because he had come from a home in which disorder and dirt had held sway. He could not understand it; more than that, it irritated him, and when he got the job of scrubbing the dining-room steps he was almost ready to leave.

But just then came a new excitement to the home. The board was coming to make its annual tour of inspection, and the cleaning was doubled. "Get ready for the board," was the home watchword, it seemed, and he, being very human, decided to stay until that big event was over.

The day of visiting came and passed. The next morning the new youngster sought the matron. "Now that them boards has been here, I don't see no use of scrubbing them steps so often—do you?" he asked.

WOLVES OF THE SEA

By RANDALL PARRISH

Copyright, by A. C. McClurg & Co.

The hilt of the knife in my belt attracted my attention, and I drew it forth, curious to learn if it bore any mark of ownership. My eyes were instantly attracted to a dark stain on both hilt and blade. I held it to the light—it was the stain of blood, and my hands were also reddened by it. In that first instant of horror I hurled the weapon out through the open port into the sea. Blood! There had been murder committed on board, and the fellow I had struck down was seeking refuge, endeavoring to find concealment following his crime. Ay, but what about the light in the cabin? It had been extinguished after the fleeing fugitive had entered Dorothy's stateroom. Did this mean that the slayer had an accomplice? If so, then the killing was not the result of a mere personal quarrel amidships, or in the forecastle, but the result of some conspiracy. I thought of Sanchez, and of Estada's plan to obtain control of the ship. Could this be its culmination? And was the Spaniard already lying dead in his cabin?

Nothing came of my thought—only confusion; nor did I dare investigate for fear of becoming more deeply involved in the tragedy. No, there was nothing to be done; my safety, and the safety of the girl depended on our apparent ignorance of what had occurred. Convincing myself of this, I washed the blood stains from my hands and lay down in the bunk fully dressed to await my call.

When called I exchanged but few words with LeVere. He went quickly to his room. Nothing of importance occurred during my watch.

The dawn came cold and gray but with clearing skies. I climbed into the main crosstrees and swept the horizon with a glass. Not so much as a speck rewarded my efforts, and I descended the ratlines, shouting to the boatswain to call the port watch. Watkins came aft to the wheel and I sent the fellow thus relieved down into the cabin to rout out LeVere. The two returned to deck together, the negro glancing about curiously without mounting the ladder.

"You call Senor Estada yet?" he questioned.

"No; I had no orders to do so."

"He tol' me call him at daylight. Here you, Amada; go wake up the senor."

The seaman disappeared, while LeVere crossed the poop deck and stood beside me looking out across the expanse of sea.

Amada emerged from the companion and stared up at us, shading his mouth with one hand as he spoke.

"He answer nothing, Senor LeVere."

"Was the door locked?"

"I know not, senor; I not try to open it."

"The swine," said LeVere, "I suppose I'll have to go myself."

"We'll go down together, senor," I said quietly. "Estada must be sick; I could hear the rumpus Amada kicked up even on deck here. No man could sleep through that racket."

CHAPTER XVIII.

A New Conspiracy.

The interior of the cabin appeared desolate in the gray light of dawn. led the way directly to Estada's

It Was the Stain of Blood.

stateroom. My heart pounded like a hammer as I rapped on the wooden panels and waited some response from within. There was no answer, no sound of movement, and I rapped again more loudly, my questioning eyes seeking LeVere's face. He was listening as intently as myself.

"There is something wrong, senor," he whispered, "for he was ever a light sleeper."

The door was unlocked, the latch yielding instantly to the hand, and I stepped within. A glance told everything. Estada lay in his bunk, with one leg dangling outside, and his head crooked against the side wall. His very posture was that of sudden death, even had it not been pictured by the ghastly face, and the dark pool of blood underneath. I heard an exclamation from Le Vere and stood for an instant utterly unable to move. I knew already what I should find, yet finally forced myself forward—he was stone dead, pierced with three knife thrusts. I stood up and faced the mulatto, whose countenance was fairly green with horror.

"What do you know about this, Senor LeVere?" I asked sternly. "The man has been murdered, knifed. Who did it—and why?"

He could scarcely answer, gripping at the table for support, and never removing his gaze from the face of the dead man. Yet I believed his words; was convinced this was not the terror of guilt.

"My God! I cannot tell; I have never dreamed of this."

"Had the man enemies. Anyone you would suspect?"

"Enemies? Ay, plenty of them; we all have. We expect that in our trade. This ship is full of devils ready enough to do such a job; but I could not name the one who did do it. I know of no cause. I have heard nothing."

"I believe you, LeVere," I said.

"What can we do, senor?"

"Do! We must talk that over first. We cannot meet this thing until we are prepared. There is more danger in hasty action than anything else."

I shut the door behind us and turned the key. It was a relief to get outside, even into that dismal cabin, beyond view of Estada's dead face. LeVere, who had evidently lost his nerve, sank into a chair.

"You fear an uprising, a mutiny?" I questioned, "when this is reported?"

"What will prevent?" he asked. "The captain cannot stir; the mate is dead; the men already crazed because we take no prizes. They will murder us also and take control. Those devils amidships."

"And who leads them? Who would be captain?"

"Manuel Estevan," he whispered.

"I thought as much. Then it is Manuel Estevan we must secure first—before they know. Whatever his men may know of what has occurred they will make no move until they get his orders. We must stop the possibility of his issuing any. Without a leader the advantage is ours."

"You mean to kill him?"

"Only as a last resort. There is no good feeling between those quartered amidships and the crew?"

"No, senor; it is hate generally, although they are not all alike. The real sailors are mostly captured men; they serve to save their lives, and only for these others on board could not be held long. Your plan, senor, is to set the one against the other?"

"Yes, if possible. These sailor men are of all races. Can they be trusted?"

"Some might be, sir; it is hard to tell how many. It is not the race which counts so much, senor. There are those among them who would not care to return to honesty."

"And you, LeVere?"

He spread his hands and shrugged his shoulders. "There is no hope of me; I was born to the free life."

"What then is it with you?"

"Hate, senor—revenge," and his teeth gleamed savagely. "I would spit on this Manuel who seeks to be chief. I can never be—no; I am of black skin, with negro blood in my veins, and white men would never have it so. But I can hate, senor. That is why I am with you now, if the devil so will. Your plan might work—tell me more of it."

"What are the odds, say you—thirty to a hundred? Ay, but surprise will overcome that. My plan is this: First to secure Manuel as quietly as possible but at whatever cost. With him in our hands, or dead, the buccaneers have no leader. What then? There are men in the crew on deck and in the forecastle to be trusted—Watkins is one, and he will know others, a dozen no doubt. They will be enough. We will whisper the truth to these, and have them ready for a signal. The forward door from amidships is closed by iron bars—is it not?"

"Si, senor," his eyes again sparkling with interest. "The men quarreled, and there was fighting."

"Then there is no escape in that direction and it can be no great task to close any passage leading aft. Lower the deck hatch and we have those devils below caged like so many rats. There need be no fighting; starvation will bring them to terms."

"But, senor, your dozen men cannot guard the buccaneers below and also manage the bark. The crew are not all lambs—many will sympathize with those shut locked beneath deck. Cochese is bad, and a friend of Manuel. He will fight, and there are others to back him."

"I know that, LeVere. The whole plan is desperate, but there is no other possible. Here is my scheme. There is a gun rack in the cabin to arm the dozen men we can trust. The others have nothing but their sheath knives. The buccaneers can be secured below, before these other lads ever realize what is happening. As soon as we have control of the ship we'll round them up forward. They won't dare face the guns. I'll give them their choice."

"And what will you tell them, senor?"

I caught my breath, conscious of his meaning. My secret hope could not be revealed to this fellow. The answer came quickly to my lips.

"The whole truth, Senor LeVere—that Manuel conspired to seize the bark through a mutiny of the buccaneers; that these were to be turned loose with license to kill anyone on board who opposed them; that their real purpose was to divide among themselves all the treasure below

"Who Did It—and Why?"

then wreck the vessel and escape with it. That to this end Estada had already been murdered. I shall explain that we discovered this conspiracy just in time to save them from butchery, and they must stand by us or else submit to those hell-hounds."

"And after that, senor?"

"Why, Porto Grande, of course," I admitted heartily. "The men will understand what that means—a handful of gold for each of them and a run ashore. Why, LeVere, they will make more apiece than by looting a half dozen ships, and with no fighting: It will be a fortune for you and me."

His somber eyes lighted up, startled by this new idea, and he sprang to his feet.

"You mean that, senor! We divide what is below and sail for Porto Grande? I hear you right? You not mean surrender? You stay pirate?"

I laughed, my nerves tingling to the success of my ruse—he had taken the tempting bait like a hungry fish.

"Why, of course. I am not such a fool as to throw away this chance. This is our chance, LeVere. If we put the Namur into Porto Grande, with Sanchez on board and alive, and those hellhounds locked below, we'll get anything we ask for. We'll be the cocks of the walk. If he shouldn't live through, why then we'll have a ship, and can run the game alone. Either way, if we win, the prize is ours—and if we stick together we win."

My apparent enthusiasm caught the fellow. I could read the working of his mind in his face. This new view of the situation promised wealth, power, the total defeat of Estevan; everything he most desired.

"You think Senor Sanches live?"

"What difference? If he lives he owes his life to us. If he dies the bark is in our hands, and the treasure. Once we have won we care nothing if he live or die. Are we together in this?"

He thrust out a lean yellow hand, and I gripped it.

"Si, senor; I am with you."

"You pledge your word, Francois?"

"I pledge it, senor."

"Good! And you have mine. Now to work—first Manuel Estevan, and then the men on deck."

The First "White Way."

When William Niblo opened his new theater at Broadway and Prince street, back on Independence day, 1828, he celebrated the double occasion by a patriotic display of gas lights which flaunted the name of "Niblo" far and wide and immortalized it in stage as well as gas history. An admiring public gasped from a respectful distance, watching the red, white and blue shadows cast by the rows of gas jets spelling the proprietor's name.

Gas had been used for the first time in New York city five years before, but to the owner of Niblo's garden goes the credit of first using gas for illuminating a theater.—Gas Logic.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

(By REV. P. B. FITZWATER, D. D., Teacher of English Bible in the Moody Bible Institute of Chicago.)

(Copyright, 1910, by Western Newspaper Union.)

LESSON FOR MAY 25.

REPENTANCE.

LESSON TEXTS—Jonah 3:1-10; Luke 13: 1-5; Acts 2:37, 38.

GOLDEN TEXT—Repent ye, and believe the Gospel.—Mark 1:15.

ADDITIONAL MATERIAL—Isaiah 1:10-20; Luke 3:1-14; Acts 17:30, 31; 2 Cor. 7:9-11; 1 Peter 3:9.

PRIMARY TOPIC—God's Willingness to Forgive.

JUNIOR TOPIC—The People of Nineveh Repent.

INTERMEDIATE TOPIC — Turning From Sin to God.

SENIOR AND ADULT TOPIC—The Nature and Fruit of Repentance.

I. The Repentance of the People of Nineveh (3:1-10).

The following steps are noted in their conversion:

1. Hearing the Word of the Lord (vv. 1-4).

The Lord commanded Jonah to go to Nineveh, a great and wicked city, and there "preach the preaching" that he bade him. Jonah's runaway experience (see chapters 1, 2) was such that he was willing to obey God. His chastisement was severe, but by God's grace he was now ready to execute the commission. "Jonah arose and went unto Nineveh according to the word of the Lord" (v. 3). So great was the city of Nineveh that it required three days to compass it; that is, to visit its very centers of activity. Jonah, coming from Palestine, doubtless entered the city from the south, and during an entire day going from center to center cried, "Yet forty days and Nineveh shall be overthrown" (v. 4). Since the king's palace seems to have been in the south part of the city Jonah's message soon found its way to him. If every preacher would preach what God bids him there would be more cities turning to God.

2. Believing God (v. 5).

They not only believed God would visit judgment upon them, but believed in God, and put their trust in him for mercy and salvation.

3. Repented (vv. 5-9).

Their penitence was shown in (1) proclaiming a fast and putting on sackcloth (vv. 5-7). These marks of humiliation were shown by all, from the king on his throne to the most humble man. (2) Cried mightily to God (v. 8). In the midst of their humiliation they cried with intensity to God. (3) Turned from their evil ways (v. 8). The final test of penitence is turning from sin; it is hating sin badly enough to quit it.

4. Accepted by God (v. 10). When the Ninevites turned from their evils God refrained from executing doom upon them. It averted judgment. God is unchangeable. His holy nature is unalterably opposed to sin. When men repent from their sins his wrath is turned aside. This is what is meant by God repenting.

II. The Necessity of Repentance (Luke 13:1-5).

Repentance is necessary on the part of all, since all are sinners. "The wages of sin is death" (Rom. 6:23). While God is unalterably opposed to sin he is infinitely gracious. His holy nature compels him to cause judgment to fall upon those who will not turn from their sins to serve him. Repentance is not merely a matter of privilege, but of absolute necessity if one would escape the wrath of God. Repentance is the only door of escape from perdition. It is not a question of how great a sinner one is that determines the need for repentance, since God cannot look upon evil: "For thou art of purer eyes than to behold evil, and canst not look upon iniquity" (Hab. 1:13). No one can ever see him in peace unless he turns from his sins. God commands men to repent (Acts 17:30).

III. The Blessed Results of Repentance (Acts 2:37,38).

1. Remission of sins. Remit means to send away. The one who repents is rid forever of his sins, for he is a new man in Christ.

2. Gift of the Holy Spirit. When one is regenerated he not only is rid of his sins, but God, the Holy Spirit, takes up his abode in him. He is his teacher, guide and defender. These blessed results ought to move one to repent. The goodness of God ought to provoke men to penitence.

You Cannot Lose.

To have is to use, not to hoard. "He that saveth his life shall lose it." That is the reason for spending yourself—the fact that you cannot lose what you really have; the fact that spiritual quantities are real quantities; that the best in us is better and stronger than the worst, if we believe in it; that, to the eye of faith, Satan—like lightning—is forever falling from the heaven of things that endure.—W. H. Blake.

Influence of the Bible.

Hold fast to the Bible. It is the sheet-anchor of your liberties; write its precepts on your hearts, and practice them in your lives. To the influence of this book we are indebted for the progress made in civilization, and to this we must look as our guide in the future.—U. S. Grant.

God Is Love.

"Love is not love which alteration finds." The unchangeable is Love, and Love is the unchangeable, for God is Love.

Material Does Not Split and Crack and Is Regarded a Better Investment Than It Was Some Seasons Ago.

To complete one's spring wardrobe at least one taffeta frock must be included. This may be one of the new and very lovely black gowns of this crisp silk or a stiff and rather simple and quaint evening frock, but to be absolutely correct, declares a fashion writer, at least one taffeta frock must be included in the season's outfit.

None of the silk gowns for years past has had just the charm and dignity that the black taffetas of this spring have achieved. Indeed, the very silk itself has acquired a new suppleness and a softness which gives delightful drapery effects. Again, these newer taffetas do not split and crack as once they did and are therefore a much better investment than this sort of silk was some seasons ago.

Ruffles In Vogue.

Since ruffles are so much in vogue it is interesting to note that one of the most advanced models developed in black taffeta silk shows a very long and narrow skirt with a slightly hobbled effect carried out by placing three ruffles one above the other with the hems of the little frills turned up to the waist instead of in the usual manner of placing ruffles turned down toward the hem of the skirt. This is one of the new fancies of the spring—this of the upside down ruffle—and it gives a distinctive look to all frocks and proves them of the latest model.

On the particular black dress mentioned, the very long front panel is unbroken from the square neck quite to the bottom of the skirt, except by the ruffles, and untrimmed except for a straight row of black silk buttons placed straight down one side. The back has a slightly draped bustle effect and a sash, and the sleeves are long and tight.

Just why black should be preferred in this sort of silk frock it is difficult to say, as for a long time black taffeta silk was left for the middle aged and for mourning gowns. Certain it is that nothing is more up to date at this time, however, than these severe silken gowns. The makers understood perfectly the softening of all of the harshness taffeta has and indeed since the newer and softer weaves have been exploited this stiffness and shininess is a thing of the past.

One of the Smartest Frocks.

One of the really smart black frocks has nothing to distinguish it especially as to trimming or ornamentation, except in the graceful lines on which it has been cut, and so beautifully draped is the skirt and so cleverly arranged the bodice and accompanying sash of silk that this particular frock seems entirely different from others. Not a vestige of color relieves the black folds and only a short chemisette of the finest and softest cream batiste breaks the entire lengths of black.

The placing of this short little vestee, square and low in the neck and stopping just below the bust, brings out one of the newest ideas for summer frocks, as many silken and georgette dresses reveal those fine, soft and very short vestees, square across neck and bust.

Eyelet embroidery is extensively used in some of these new silken frocks, appearing especially well placed on a long apron drapery of a smart imported black taffeta embroidery.

Apron Drapery Stays.

The apron drapery will not leave us—it seems to have come to stay—and still hangs on frocks with which, seemingly, it has no relation whatever. However, on this particular black frock the whole apron part of eyelet embroidery, done in black silk threads, really makes the dress, falling with a slight fulness in the front over a tight, black petticoat underneath. In the back the velvet embroidery appears only on a part of the skirt, which is drawn in with very little fulness. A sash finishes the waist, is tied in a rather large bow and falls nearly to the bottom of the skirt.

As to the bodice, it also reveals the little short square chemisette of fine net like the one mentioned. As two wide revers finish the front of the bodice in a sort of surplice effect, the upper part of this waist resembles a smart little Eton jacket. The sleeves are three-quarters long and are finished with a wide, folded-back cuff.

One of the very successful combinations for this style of dress is taffeta and georgette, happily arranged in one instance with a long tunic of blue georgette over an underneath skirt of blue taffeta. The bottom of the tunic is handsomely ornamented with an application of taffeta in small scrolls and pieces cleverly embroidered in place with heavy silken threads.

A repetition of the applique appears on the blouse, which overhangs the tunic and belt slightly, and the long taffeta sash in the back makes a good finish for the waist. This also shows buttons of silk in the front of the bodice and a short vestee of fine white lace finishes the upper part of the front. The sleeves are the curious short bebe sleeves so much affected in the French importations.

Evening Frocks.

Taffeta frocks are by no means confined to just afternoon gowns, as this silk is being extensively used for simple evening frocks and really offers a welcome change from the heavier brocades and metal tissues, the beaded and spangled splendid robes of which we shall doubtless grow tired in spite of their great beauty and elegance.

A rose pink silken frock of the placid silk has a little bertha of very rich lace outlining the rather low decolletage and is without sleeves. The skirt is very long and very narrow and only a slightly draped effect just in the very front of the long skirt breaks the otherwise perfectly plain lines.

The bands of silken loops, which are being so much used, trim a dark blue evening gown and puffs of the silk with corded edges trim another, though in this instance a very smart afternoon gown.

While one finds an occasional combination of georgette and taffeta and now and then some lace or satin used in a combination with this stiffer silk, for the most part the best models and those most frequently seen are untrimmed and rely principally on the drapery and clever lines to achieve the distinction most women want for their frocks. The cordings and puffs are not entirely new, as we used them several seasons back, but that is long enough ago to give the idea of an entirely new style when we see them now.

Practical Dyeing.

In these days of economies often a package of dye will be of great value. Faded dresses for the children can be dyed with some other material (even strong white cloth), and the combination made up provides a new garment.

District-County Christian Endeavor Convention

To be held in the St. Mark's English Lutheran Church in Auburn, May 30 to June 1, 1919.

The present indications are for one of the strongest County or District Conventions ever held in Indiana Christian Endeavor. The convention talent is better than ever before. The speakers and singers are real leaders of young people. Get into the convention from the start.

Hear Mr. R. A. Walker speak Friday evening on the subject, "Spiserinctum." Mr. Walker is Field Secretary for Christian Endeavor in Indiana. He has been connected with the State Organization for over five years. Has acquainted himself with the problems of the organization, and has been anxious to help solve them in a business like way. During these five years, Mr. Walker has gained for himself a reputation as an inspiring speaker, not only in Indiana but all over the United States among Christian Endeavor workers.

Saturday forenoon and afternoon will be devoted to special conferences, under the leadership of expert leaders.

"Christian Endeavor and the New Crusade" will be presented Saturday evening by Mr. E. P. Gates, Field Secretary of Christian Endeavor in Illinois. (A great orator, from a great Christian Endeavor state.) Mr. Gates is a man full of unlimited ideas and is one of the greatest Christian Endeavor Field Workers in the United States.

Sunday afternoon and evening strong addresses will be given of interest to all. Among the speakers is Mr. Evan Williams, treasurer Indiana C. E. Union. Mr. Williams is a "Live Wire," and needs no introduction—we know him by the smile he greets us with.

The entire convention singing will be led by Howard J. Wischaupt of the Community Chautauqua, assisted by his own professional pianist, Cecil S. Burton, of Chicago. Mr. Wischaupt is one of Indiana's own Christian Endeavor boys and is a "Live Music Leader."

You do not have to be a Christian Endeavorer, nor are you too old to attend this great convention. Will you be there?

Half Shoes for Women in the Black and the Brown Kid.

Women are wearing half shoes this spring, both because the new oxfords are so attractive in appearance, and because the season has been favorable for the very general wearing of low shoes.

Those who do not buy their shoes by chance, but use discrimination in making a selection, enjoy exercising their choice among the several new styles at Lawrence's. These show distinctive character, assured style, correct fitting quality, fine leathers, high quality shoemaking. They set properly, without gaping at side and heel. Also made to keep their shape in service, and to wear well.

THIS is just what you need, madam. Many women who were troubled with indigestion, a sallow, muddy skin, indicating biliousness and habitual constipation, have been permanently cured by the use of Chamberlain's Tablets. Before using these tablets they felt miserable and despondent. Now they are cheerful and happy and relish their meals. Try them. They only cost a quarter.

Chamberlain's Tablets

Fined $25.00 And the Costs.

Ben Balta was found guilty of giving liquor to minors, before D. M. Link, Judge of the court, Tuesday of this week, according to the indictment returned by the grand jury, and a fine of $25 and costs was given as the penalty. Calling the defendant to the bar, he was given the scentence and further, if it had been shown that he had sold the liquor to the boys, the penalty would have been the limit as prouided by law. The Judge warned him further, that if he was ever found guilty of a similar charge the punishment would be severe.

The prosecuting witnesses were Harold Vallieu and Charles Butler, aged 15 and 16 years. The boys testified that they went to Balta's home, Sunday morning December 15, and that there was a bottle of whisky on the table and that Ben gave them a drink, and Vallieu testified that he was not affected, but Butler testified that he "felt loose and didn't care what happened."

Ben testified that while he was gone from the house, the boys helped themselves. He further stated that he had never given anyone a drink of whiskey. He has been an habitual drinker and admitted under questioning by Prosecutor W. W. Ketcham that he was arrested on several occassions for drunkenness, the scenes of his trouble being Garrett, Auburn and Fort Wayne.

Stephen Brown, W. G. Erick, J. H. Dove and Milton Spitler, of Spencerville, testified that the boys do not bear good reputations for truth and veracity in the community.

Landlord's Experience With Glando

Mr. Haushalter, the well known and energetic proprietor of the Hotel Pauiding, Pauiding, Ohio, says that for several years he suffered from a sluggish liver, backache and kidney trouble. He felt so drowsy and languid he could scarcely drag. He says: "I tried a number of kidney pills and liver remedies and found no relief until I used Glando, the great gland tonic. It proved to be just what I needed. I am thoroughly convinced I would have been flat on my back if I had not used this treatment; but, instead of being laid up, I am feeling fine and looking after my business every day. If I feel any indication of my old trouble returning, I take a Glando treatment and that sets me right."

Mr. Haushalter was dying of self-poisoning caused by an inactive liver. This weakened the kidneys and other glands of the body. If he had not found a remedy that renewed glandular activity and removed the poison, his life undoubtedly have paid the penalty.

Glando Tonic is the only remedy of its kind on the market and its numerous cures is proof enough of its great value to mankind. It is sold by druggists or will be sent direct by the Gland-Aid Co., Fort Wayne, Ind. Large treatment, $1.00.

Make This Test For Acid-Stomach

There are millions of people who suffer almost daily from the horrors of an acid-stomach—indigestion; sour, gassy, stomach; distressing heartburn; sickening food-repeating; painful bloat and that miserable, puffed up, lumpy feeling after eating. Many of these people have tried treatment after treatment; medicine after medicine; others have gone to doctors and stomach specialists and some to hospitals, but in spite of all of their efforts they have obtained no lasting relief or a permanent cure.

These symptoms simply mean acid-stomach. If allowed to run on, they are very likely to cause a lot of serious trouble. Dyspepsia, rheumatism, gout, lumbago, sciatica, splitting headache, dizzy spells, nervousness, sleeplessness, mental depression, melancholia, a feeling of listlessness and all-goneness—these are just a few of the disorders which can be traced to acid-stomach. As a matter of fact, acid-stomach is often the direct cause of those almost incurable conditions known as catarrh of the stomach, intestinal ulcer, and cancer of the stomach. The lives of those who suffer from these serious troubles are nothing short of daily agony. Surely, then, you must see how important it is to go at once to the seat of the trouble—acid-stomach. You know what acid-mouth does to the teeth—how it eats right through the hard enamel and causes them to decay. Think then of the havoc that must be caused by excess acid in the stomach!

Even if you are not suffering any immediate stomach pains, but are not feeling just as fit and fine as you should, you should by all means make this test: Go to your drug store at once and get a big box of EATONIC. It is in the form of pleasant-tasting tablets—you eat them like a bit of candy. EATONIC is prepared for just one purpose—correcting acid-stomach by driving out the excess acid. EATONIC literally absorbs the excess acid. It brings instant relief from the pains of indigestion, heartburn, belching, sour, gassy stomach, bloat, etc. It makes the stomach pure, sweet, cool and comfortable, puts it in a normal, healthy condition, so that your food is properly digested. You need every bit of strength you can possibly get out of the food you eat—and EATONIC helps you get it.

Don't put this test off if you value your future good health and happiness. You run no chance at all because EATONIC is absolutely guaranteed to give you relief or your druggist will refund your money. The cost is a mere trifle.

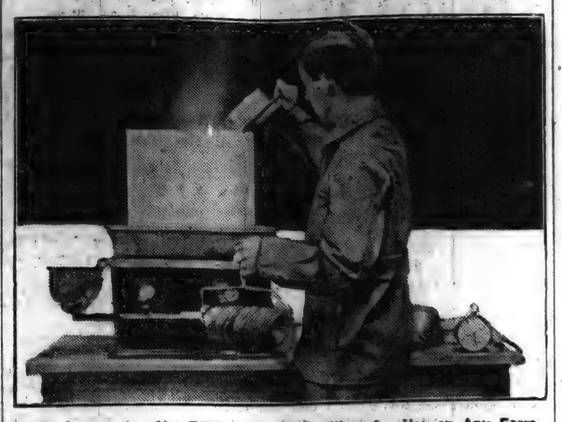
WASHING WILL NOT KILL DISEASE GERMS AND BACTERIA THAT LURK IN MILK CANS



Simple, Inexpensive, Yet Efficient Steam Sterilizer for Use on Any Farm Where Milk and Cream Are Sold.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Approach of warm weather adds to the dairyman's problem of keeping milk from souring. It is commonly known that bacteria in milk produces changes which spoil it and therefore every means should be taken to reduce the bacteria content of milk as much as possible. This can be done, first, by producing milk under clean conditions; second, by cleanliness in handling and keeping it in sterilized utensils, and third, by cooling it and keeping it cold.

Dirty milk utensils, and even those which apparently are clean but which have not been sterilized, contain vast numbers of bacteria which are added to milk or cream when it comes in contact with them. It is true that even when milk is produced under clean conditions it will contain a few bacteria, for when such milk is placed in unsterilized utensils or is run through an unsterilized strainer cloth of the separator, large numbers of bacteria are added, which are apt to spoil it quickly. When dairy utensils are sterilized by steam germs are destroyed, and therefore milk and cream in these utensils will keep sweet much longer. Sterilization of utensils on farms is neither difficult nor expensive if the simple steam sterilizer designed by dairy specialists of the United States department of agriculture is used.

For Smaller or Larger Farms.

This sterilizer is designed to be of greatest use to those who have one, two or three ten-gallon or smaller cans with a similar number of pails and a strainer cloth, but it can be used to advantage where a larger number of cans are required. In its construction are needed first a roasting pan of standard size (20 inches long, 14 inches wide and 8 inches deep), a close fitting insulated cover to fit over this pan, and a box with a removable top to fit over the cover.

To make the cover, take a sheet of heavy galvanized iron and cut it large enough to allow it to project three-fourths of an inch over the edge of the pan. Bend the edges of the sheet so as to form a shallow box with sides three-eighths of an inch high. Then cut out a cover for the shallow box thus made. Cut a hole one and one-half inches in diameter in the center of both the cover and the box. Iron braces should be placed crosswise on the box to strengthen it. Then fill the shallow box with paper or asbestos sheets, after which the top of the box is carefully soldered on. Solder a round, galvanized-iron pipe four and one-half inches long and one and one-half inches in diameter in the hole in the center of the cover.

The box with the removable cover previously referred to should also be made of galvanized iron. This box should be 11 inches high and large enough to fit on the cover just described. The complete cost of this outfit should not be more than $8, and if a soldering outfit is available it can be made at home, or any tinner can do the job.

Using the Sterilizer.

To sterilize cans, the roasting pan should be placed on two burners of a cook stove or an especially built brick furnace. The pan should be filled with water to the depth of one inch and the cover placed over it. As soon as the water heats sufficiently, steam will come out of the outlet pipe, and as a rule it takes less than 15 minutes to develop enough steam for sterilization. When steam of sufficient heat (at least 205 degrees Fahrenheit) has been reached, place the can over the steam outlet for five minutes, then remove, shake out any water and place upright on the floor. The can should be absolutely dry in two or three minutes. If not dry in that time it shows that the steam was not as hot as 205 degrees Fahrenheit, or that the can has not been washed clean.

Pails and other utensils are sterilized in the same manner. But to sterilize can covers, strainer cloths, separator parts and other small utensils it is necessary to use the box having the removable cover. When the steam begins to issue from the outlet pipe place the box over the sterilizer, put the small utensils in it and place the cover over the box. See that all parts fit snugly so the steam will not escape, and then proceed as in sterilizing cans.

When properly operated, this sterilizer destroys practically all bacteria in the utensils, including all disease germs. It will accomplish the same results as any sterilizer in which steam not under pressure is used. Experiments with this sterilizer show that the five-minute steaming is, for practical purposes, as good as the 15 to 30 minutes usually recommended.

Don't Forget Washing.

Before sterilizing, rinse all utensils in cold water, then wash thoroughly with hot water and washing powder. Sterilization is not a substitute for washing. If the sterilizer is to be used longer than 40 or 50 minutes more water should be added to the roasting pan to make up for loss of evaporation. It is advisable to have an accurate thermometer with a scale reading to 212 degrees Fahrenheit in order to determine when the steam has reached enough heat for efficient sterilization. When sterilization is being done in a cold room it is recommended that some form of insulation be used over the utensils. A blanket easily can be made for this purpose. This is desirable in order to keep the pans or pails hot long enough after sterilization to dry out quickly. After the utensils are sterilized and dried they should be placed in a room free from dust and should not be touched until milk is placed in them.

DOGS AS BOYS' PETS REPLACED BY SHEEP

Each Canine Causes Loss of $36.50 Every Year.

Farm-Demonstration Agent in Kentucky Itemizes Proposition on Blackboard of Mountain School House.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

For every dog kept a loss of $36.50 must be pocketed every year. For every sheep kept a profit of $27.60 may be pocketed every year.

At least, that is the way the proposition was itemized on the blackboard of a mountain schoolhouse by a farm-demonstration agent in Kentucky. And the figures were convincing. There was not a sheep in the district at the time the figures were placed on the blackboard. Somebody said there used to be one sheep—a wether—"down the mountain a ways," but the dogs ate him.

A few weeks from the time the agent placed the figures on the board 15 boys each had contrived to buy a sheep. Eleven dogs had been killed. Several other families, pestered by their small sons, but still unwilling to kill their dogs, were trying to give the brutes away.

Similar movements were started at other schools. Now, in that district there are 622 boys who are members of the sheep club. Among them they own 2,665 fine sheep. By the tax returns, the dog population appears to have increased also, but the agent says this is not true. Formerly there was no sentiment for enforcement of the dog law, he says, but now there is a very strong sentiment that way, and, while there has been a considerable decrease in the number of dogs there is an apparent increase, because people who formerly evaded the dog tax now have to pay it.

A maid servant applied for a week-end off, as her home was distant, for the purpose of being at home on her parents' silver wedding day.

The leave was granted, and the maid returned.

"Well," said her mistress, "did everything go off satisfactory?"

"Oh, yes, thank you, ma'am," said the girl, "and mother told me to say she is very grateful to you for letting me off."

"And what did your father say?" asked the lady.

"Oh, lor! ma'am," replied the girl, "he wasn't there. He's been dead this 20 years."

Mystery Explained.

He stood amid the blaze and splendor of his magnificent mansion, and in his hand he held the portrait of a beautiful woman. His face was pale and haggard, and his lips moved convulsively.

What was this mystery. Was this the picture of his departed wife?

No.

Was it the portrait of his dead but dearly remembered daughter.

No.

What, then, was the cause of his haggard face?

Was it not the same portrait that two minutes ago had fallen from its nail, and raised a lump as big as a hen's egg on his head?

It was.

A Diagnosis.

"Oh, doctor," said a worried looking agrarian, "My wife is in an awful condition! From a medium fat woman she has been reduced to skin and bones. She talks incessantly in a loud squawking voice, begins a sentence and never finishes it, and jumps from subject to subject without uttering anything that has the least sense to it."

"H'm! I see!" returned the physician. "Go home, Mr. Gabbleby, and take out your party line telephone at once. Your wife has been listening in on it too much."—Kansas City Star.

HOW SOME MEN GET RICH

Probably in Years to Come This Trader Will Coast of His Great Financial Ability.

"Some years ago," says an old trader, "I was standing by the ticker in a dull and reactionary market. An acquaintance came up and asked me what to buy. At the time I was absolutely bearish and could see nothing good on the list. It was early afternoon and just then the time came on the tape, '1 p. m.' So, with a laugh, I turned away, remarking: 'I guess P. M.'s as good as anything.'

"Some months later I was accosted in the street by the same man, who greeted me with the greatest cordiality. 'That was some tip you gave me,' he said. 'I plunged on it and cleaned up a whole lot of coin.'

"'Tip?' I said. 'When did I ever give you a tip?'

"'Sure,' he replied. 'You said to buy Pacific Mail and I bought all I could carry.'"

Truly, the Mother Pays!

Here is an account from a Paris paper of what was said at his trial by the mother of Cottin, the young anarchist who shot Clemenceau: "Cottin's mother stops. She wants to speak, but tears choke her words. She makes an effort and one hears a voice that is nothing but a sob: 'I did not come to defend him. But I don't want that they should call him unpatriotic. He was so sad to see all those soldiers die. He wept when he spoke to me about all those boys dying with the word "mother" on their lips. He wanted to enlist. It's a pity they did not accept him. He was brave. They might have given him dangerous errands, and at least he would be dead by now——' But she hasn't strength to finish what she wants to say. She turns back and collapses on a bench, sobbing."

PUBLIC HIGHWAYS

DRAG ROADS AT PROPER TIME

Fully as Important as It Is That Highways Should Be Done Right—Keep Ruts From Forming.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

It is fully as important that a road be dragged at the right time as it is that the dragging be properly done. Furthermore, the difficulties involved in prescribing definite rules for determining when dragging should be done are equally as great as those already encountered in attempting to define how it should be done. Only very general statements concerning this feature of the work can properly be made here, and much must be left to the experienced judgment of those who decide when the dragging of any particular road is to be started and when it is to be stopped.

The rule frequently cited that all earth roads should be dragged immediately after every rain, is in many cases entirely impracticable and is also very misleading because of the conditions which it fails to contemplate. It is true that there are many road surfaces composed of earth or earthy material which do not become very muddy under traffic, even during long rainy seasons, and since such surfaces usually tend to harden very rapidly as soon as the weather clears up, it may be desirable to drag roads of this kind immediately after a rain. Such roads, however, would not ordinarily need to be dragged after every rain, because of the strong tendency that they naturally possess of holding their shape. On the other hand, many varieties of clay and soil tend to become very muddy under only light traffic after very moderate rains, and, it is evident that roads constructed of such materials could not always be successfully dragged immediately after a rain. Sometimes, in fact, it may be necessary to wait until several consecutive clear days have elapsed after a long rainy spell before the road is sufficiently dried out to keep ruts from forming almost as rapidly as they can be filled by dragging.

Well-constructed sand-clay topsoil roads should not often become muddy after they are once well compacted. They may become seriously rutted, however, under heavy traffic, during rainy weather, and are almost sure to need dragging several times each year. Such roads should ordinarily be dragged as soon after a rain as practicable as otherwise the surface soon becomes dry and hard, so that it is necessary to do considerably more dragging in order to fill the ruts. Furthermore, the material which the drag moves will not compact readily unless it contains a considerable amount of moisture.

Gravel roads can be effectively maintained with a road drag only when the gravel composing the surface is fine grained and contains a considerable quantity of clay earth. Gravel road surfaces in which this condition prevails not infrequently get badly out of shape during wet weather, and may sometimes require considerably more attention than well-constructed sand-clay topsoil roads. The time for dragging gravel roads is unquestionably while they are wet. In fact, the best results are sometimes obtained by doing the dragging after the road has become thoroughly soaked and while it is still raining.

In general, it may be said that the best time to drag any type of road is when the material composing the surface contains sufficient moisture to compact readily after it has been moved by the drag and is not sufficiently wet for the traffic following the drag to produce mud.

Change in Road Sentiment.

When we consider the fact that such a large proportion of our population are owners of automobiles it is not difficult to understand the change in sentiment in regard to road building that has recently developed.

Big Saving in Hauling.

If our main highways were improved with permanent surface, we would certainly save 5 or 6 cents per ton mile in hauling the immense interstate commerce that each year originates from agriculture, mine and forest.

TAXES, FINES AND PRISON

Manufacture of Whisky in Commercial Quantities Made Especially Difficult—Home Stills Are Officially Defined.

Washington. — Ambitious drinkers who expected to set up their own little stills and maintain an individual oasis against the national drought are to be checked up, taxed and policed by the internal revenue bureau of the treasury department.

The bureau sent notice to every collector of internal revenue of the requirements for registering and paying taxes on stills. The regulations are rigid and apparently the only escape for the individual defiant will be in the home manufacture of the distillery as well as the spirits.

Then is given the following notice:

"Under federal laws and regulations manufacturers of stills are required to pay an annual special tax of $50 and in addition thereto $20 for each still or worm for distilling made by them. All persons, firms or corporations thus manufacturing a still or worm to be used in distilling are deemed manufacturers of stills. This applies to all stills capable of the production of distilled spirits but does not apply to small laboratory stills (usually glass) for legitimate laboratory purposes or to water stills which are not capable of and intended for the production of distilled spirits. Ordinarily laboratory stills are small, constructed of glass and not adapted to the commercial production of distilled spirits.

How Stills Are Defined.

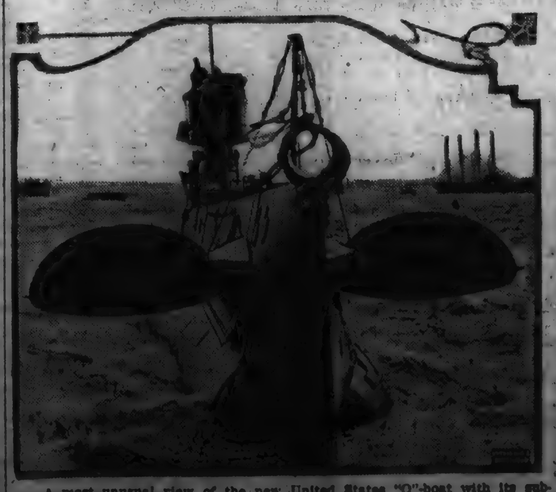
"Any stills or worms adapted to the production of distilled spirits for commercial or beverage purposes are presumed to be intended for such use and in consequence the manufacture thereof involves the manufacturer in special tax liabilities as above. In order to remove such presumption in the case of stills and worms intended to be used in the manufacture of essential oils, vinegar and like products and in purification of water (other than small glass laboratory stills) the person for whom such still is made will be required to submit to the collector evidence under oath showing that the still is not to be used for the production of spirits and setting forth specifically the actual purposes for which it is to be used.

"The manufacturer of any still, boiler or any vessel to be used for the purpose of distilling must, before the same is removed from the place of manufacture, notify in writing the collector of the district in which such still, boiler or other vessel is to be set up, by whom it is to be used, its capacity and the time when the same is to be removed from the place of manufacture. Manufacturers of stills for industrial distilleries are exempt from the special tax for the manufacture of such stills, but they are required to obtain permits for their removal in the usual manner. Penalty for failure to file return of special tax within the time prescribed by law is 25 per centum of the amount of the tax. Penalty for carrying on the business of manufacturer of stills without having paid the special tax required by law is a fine of not less than $100 or more than $5,000 and imprisonment of not less than 30 days or more than two years.

"All stills set up, whether intended for use or not, must be registered with the collector of the district on form 26 in duplicate. This applies to all stills of whatever size or for whatever purpose intended, whether for distillation of spirits or for pharmaceutical or other purposes except as to small glass laboratory stills. Penalty for failure to register still is a forfeiture of the still or distilling apparatus which is not so registered, together with all personal property in the possession or custody or under control of such offender and found in his building or in any yard or inclosure connected with the building in which the same may be set up.

"A person who makes a mash fit for distillation is held to be a distiller even though he does not vaporize or condense the spirit. A mash fit for distillation is a fermented beer in which alcohol is generated. Obviously the making of such a mash is not permissible in the home brewing of beer or home production of spirits, since it renders the manufacturer liable as an illicit distiller. Penalty for illicit distillation is forfeiture of the distillery and distilling apparatus and all distilled spirits and raw materials for the production of distilled spirits found on the distillery premises, and a fine of not less than $500 or more than $5,000 and imprisonment of not less than six months or more than three years."

NOVEL AMERICAN SUBMARINE



A most unusual view of the new United States "O"-boat with its submerging apparatus above water. Several submarines of this type are now at anchor with the rest of the Atlantic fleet in the North river at New York. The "O"-boat operated on this side of the water during the war, and performed creditably.

Russian Famine Is Widespread

With the American Forces in North Russia.—Russian soldiers returning from Germany to their homes in northern Russia find their fatherland vastly changed since they went to war. Scores of these soldiers are passing through the bolshevik lines and making their way to the American and other allied outposts.

They tell tales of pitiful suffering from hunger in the villages through which they passed. One of them, F. Evlampieff of Archangel, thus describes his experiences:

"At Petrograd we were sent to barracks, where a bolshevik officer started to read us the soviet program. The prisoners protested. 'Give us first something to eat, and then read us your program,' they cried. Then the commissar gave up trying to read the program, saying we were not fit elements for propaganda, and left us. Each of us received 25 rubles in advance on his salary.

"Famine was reigning in Petrograd. The first category (working people of bolshevik sympathies) received one pound of oats daily. The second category received one-half pound. The citizens grind the oats in coffee mills to make flour for bread. For Christmas the Petrograd inhabitants received two potatoes for each person. A slice of bread is sold for 25 rubles. There was no tobacco. People smoked cabbage and nettle.

Wait for Bread Two Days.

"The situation at Vologda was the same as in Petrograd. It was famine, and the population stood in line for bread sometimes two days. There was no private commerce. The shops were empty."

On his way from Vologda toward Archangel a commissar tried to coax Evlampieff into serving in the red army, and on his refusal sent him back to Vologda. A peasant hid him in a load of hay and carried him to his uncle's home in Toresk. In all the villages he passed through, he said, there was famine. The peasants cut straw, cook it and make bread. Eventually, after a long journey on foot through the snow, Evlampieff reached his home.

When such prisoners reach the territory of the provisional government of the north they are cared for as well as possible. Many of them voluntarily have joined the white guard army because of their hatred of the bolsheviki.

Quite Enough.

Hoboken, N. J.—John Kelly, seventy, told the judge his wife had him arrested 160 times. "That's enough," said the judge, dismissing the wife's charge.

Notice of Petition For Improvement of Public Highway.

Notice is hereby given that on the 12th., day of May, 1919, there was filed in the office of the Auditor of DeKalb County, Indiana, a petition signed by 95 RESIDENT VOTERS AND FREEHOLDERS of said County, addressed to the Board of Commissioners thereof, asking for the improvement of a certain highway in said County, already established, and in said petition described as follows:

Commencing at a point on the public highway, commonly known and called the Spencerville and Hicksville Road, in Spencer Township where the north west corner of section twenty-seven of said township intersects said highway, and following said highway, as the same is used and traveled, from said point of beginning in an easterly direction to the east line of Newville Township in said County and State and thence continuing east on said road into and through said Newville Township to the Ohio State line and there ending; that the distance of said highway from the point of commencing to the place of ending, as herein named and described, is five miles and one hundred rods; that said public highway from said point of beginning extends due east upon the north line of sections twenty seven, twenty six and twenty five in said Spencer Township and upon the north line of sections thirty, twenty nine and twenty eight in said Newville Township and ending at the north east corner of said section twenty eight in said Newville Township, the same being at the Indiana and Ohio State line

It is recommended in said petition that said public highway be improved to the width of twenty two feet by grading the same to a common level as nearly as practicable, the character of country being considered through which said road runs, and that the road bed of such public highway be covered with gravel to the width of fourteen feet, with good road gravel, so placed thereon as to be fourteen inches thick in the center and eight inches at the sides and sloping from center to sides, and that there be constructed along each side of such graveled portion or parts of said public highway a substantial dirt berme eight inches deep next to the graveled portion or parts of said road, and four feet wide and sloping to a feather edge at the outside; that on each side of said public highway there be constructed all proper drains so as to prevent at all times water standing along said highway, and that all necessary culverts for the thorough construction of said road be constructed.

Said petition is set for hearing before said Board of Commissioners on the 4th. day of June, 1919, in the Commissioners' Court Room in the Court House in the City of Auburn, at which time and place the form and sufficiancy of said petition will be considered, and when and where any interested party may appear and show cause why the request prayed for in the petition shall not be granted.

Dated at Auburn, Indiana, this 12th. day of May, 1919.

Ford

THE UNIVERSAL CAR

World-wide distribution and the continually growing demand for Ford cars are the best proofs of Ford value. Ford cars are utilities—they are positive necessities—for they have revolutionized modern business, brought country and city together, and opened up new life to the family. The Ford car has become a necessary part of everyday life.

Ford cars are not an experiment. Years of concentration on a single model have produced a motor car of proved value. It is as important in modern life as the mail service or telephone. Behind the Ford car is genuine Ford service, by competent mechanics using genuine Ford parts—with regular standard Ford prices. That is the service given by this agency.

Clark Gets Six Months

"In order that Richard Clark, may again acquire the habit of working to provide his family with the wherewithal of livelihood, he will be given a workout of six months at the Indiana state penal farm. Judge Sol A. Wood, of the circuit court, passed this sentence yesterday when he heard the evidence in the case of the state of Indiana against Richard Clark, for failure to support his wife and child."—Wednesday's Journal-Gazette.

Clark is the husband of Ruth Perry of this place and he deliberately left his wife and baby soon after they were removed from the hospital. The sentence is too light for an offense of this kind. The family is staying with her parents, A. D. Perry and wife.

Thieves In St. Joe

Tuesday evening thieves gained an entrance to the Smith meat market and helped themselves very generously to eggs, meat, bread, etc. The Bets restaurant was entered by smashing in the west window, and only a tray of candy is missing. It is hard to tell just what is missing from the stock of goods entered. The vandals begun to figure out how that they might enter the Rice drug store, and he heard them and in getting up they were frightened away.

MAY AGAIN

By Oney Fred Sweet

LILACS and snowballs and peonies nodded in the yard between the sagging gate and the dilapidated porch. On the porch sat an old man leaning on his cane. Past the gate swept a boy on roller skates.

With an acrobatic twirl, the boy swung away from the walk, whisked through the gate and came to a stop in front of the old man on the porch.

"You'll be picking the flowers in the morning," the boy greeted with enthusiasm. "You always do. And you'll be hanging your flag out on the porch. Tomorrow—"

"Yes, tomorrow is Decoration day," mused the old man.

"I don't know whether mother'll let me march or not," went on the boy. "She hates to have me stand out in the hot so long."

He balanced himself on the skates and glanced over his shoulder toward the big house across the street.

"Standing in the hot sun wouldn't stop me," the old man answered as if speaking to some one far off, "but these legs of mine— I said last year it was my last. I was all played out before we got to the cemetery."

The boy looked at the old man, his hands on his hips, his elbows crooked.

"I think I'll march anyhow," he concluded suddenly. "I think it must have been great to have been a soldier. You can remember all those battles you were in and how your marched behind the flag. You can remember what you did for your country."

The old man smiled.

"We're old timers now, Tommy—worn out old timers with nothing much but those memories. And the weaker we get in the flesh and bones the stronger those old memories come back. Ed Howse, he's a worthless old crab in a way, but he wears the little bronze button on the lapel of his coat, and—well, I just can't tell you how I feel toward him. He was with a regiment way off in another part of the country from me, but I know he went through it, too, or he wouldn't be wearing the little bronze button. Tomorrow he'll be marching up to the cemetery back of the band with the look in his eyes that defies the world to say he ain't a boy again. He will be a boy again. He'll be back again as he was when he fought for the flag!"

The boy seated himself on the porch steps.

"I've studied about it all in school," he puzzled, "but it all seems so long ago. I don't suppose there'll be any more wars."

"No," agreed the old man. "When we fought to save the Union I guess it finished up things pretty well so far as this country is concerned. And the old fellows are dropping off so fast there won't be any of 'em to march out to the cemetery soon. They'll all be sleeping out there. When you think of 'em, you'll only remember the years when they offered themselves to a great big, good cause and you'll forget the faults they had."

The boy's face clouded with thought.

"If I come over early in the morning," he asked, "will you let me have the flowers you've always carried up there yourself? I'll see that they get to a flag-marked grave."

"You bet I will," smiled the old man. "I'll cut 'em for you in the morning. They bloom this way just for Decoration day. You can't tell me that they don't know that they're for soldier graves."

Lilacs and snowballs and peonies nodded between the sagging gate and the dilapidated porch. On the porch sat an old man leaning on his cane, and at the gate approached a buoyant youth in a belted coat, tight-fitting trousers and a long-peaked cap.

"Good morning!"

The old man strained his eyes.

"Good morning, Tommy. I was looking for you."

"You've got out the old flag on the porch," the youth smiled. "You haven't forgotten that it's Decoration day, but I guess I'll have to cut the flowers myself this morning."

The old man shook his head.

"Nope, I'll cut 'em for you," he insisted. "I've done it these ten years that you've come along. I was just waiting for a little—a little breath. You're getting to be a big fellow, Tommy."

The youth began to help the old man down the path.

"You were wrong about wars being at an end," he said finally. "Things are pretty lively in the old country."

"Yes, yes, over there," admitted the old man. "I don't know where our muzzle loaders would come in with those machine guns and airplanes and gas. But we're clear on this side of the water. They'll be mighty careful not to tread on our rights. The old flag never touched the ground and the Germans know it. They'll be careful not to rile Uncle Sam."

"I guess you're right," the youth responded with tightened lips. "They know the old flag'll never touch the ground, or they better know it. You sit down now and take it easy. The procession's almost here. I'll just follow along. I'm out of school now, but I'll see that the flowers get where they belong."

* * * * * * * * *

Lilacs and snowballs and peonies nodded in the yard between the sagging gate and the dilapidated porch. On the porch sat an old man leaning on his cane.

In a few days now the flag would flutter from the porch. The sky would seem a bluer blue, the birds sing with peculiar sweetness. Heaven would seem pretty close to earth. It would be Decoration day!

The morning breeze would catch the folds of the flag on the porch and cause the red, white, and blue to sparkle anew in the sunshine.

The music of the band would grow fainter. Every year it had been the same. The robins chirping in the evergreens and the insects setting up a chorus in the close-cut blue grass of the cemetery with its quiet suddenly invaded by the town. The voices of the quartet carried off over the prairie by the breeze. The address. The school children heaping their bloodroots and violets and honeysuckles above the flag-marked graves.

Ed Howse had limped in at the sagging gate and was making his way as best he could up the path to the porch. Ed pushed back his slouch felt hat and with an effort seated himself below the old man leaning on his cane.

"Well, it'll be Decoration day in a few days," he panted. "I'm going to try to make the march once more."

The old man on the porch nodded.

"My hearin's gettin' pretty bad. I don't suppose I'll be able to hear much that the speaker says," Ed went on. "I won't know whether he's talkin' about the way we held our ground at Gettysburg or that fight around Amiens to hold back Hindenburg. D——n those Huns, do they think they can spoil all us old fellows fought for?"

"The old flag never touched the ground," answered the old man.

"If I was fifty years younger," quavered Ed.

"We've got 'em fifty years younger, don't worry," nodded the old man grimly. "The old flag'll never touch the ground."

"Never saw your lilacs look finer," Ed remarked. "'Pears as if they looked nicer than I ever see 'em."

The man leaning on the cane cleared his throat. He glanced toward the gate—the gate where—

"They ain't going to be cut this year," he said finally. "They know he'll never come after 'em again. Those lilacs and snowballs and peonies have got to carry their fragrance a long way on Decoration day this year. They know what they've bloomed for every May. They know this year better than ever. The breeze that nods 'em is going to do its part. There's nothing going to stop their fragrance being carried clear across the land we love, across the ocean we're going to keep free, over to his grave 'somewhere in France.'"—Chicago Tribune.

Brave Men Forgot Everything Except Their Former Friendship.

DISCUSSING a G. A. R. parade, Secretary Daniels related an interesting story of Lieutenant Commander James E. Jouett (afterward admiral), and his friend, Peter Umstead Murphy of the Confederate navy. Jouett commanded the U. S. S. Metacomet at the battle of Mobile Bay, and Murphy commanded the Confedernte gunboat Selma, which was captured after a hard fight by the Metacomet.

Murphy has been a lieutenant in the United States navy, and had resigned to fight on the Confederate side. In the old days, before the war, Murphy, then a lieutenant, had been very kind to Jouett, then a midshipman. Two days before the battle of Mobile Bay, so the story runs, Jouett, while at Pensacola, remembering that Murphy was fond of good eating, bought a quantity of crabs and oysters and other delicacies and placed them on ice. Three Confederate gunboats, including the Selma, Murphy's ship, were then lying under Fort Morgan, and Jouett, knowing that Murphy commanded them, told the officers that he was fond of "Pete Murphy," as he was called, and hoped to catch him, and he always kept on hand some good wines and cigars for him. It happened as Jouett had hoped. The Metacomet was ordered by Farragut to pursue the Selma, and Jouett did catch Murphy. When the fight was over, Jouett ordered his steward to prepare a breakfast. When the Selma had struck her colors, Murphy, his right arm in a sling from a wound received in the battle, came aboard the Metacomet to surrender his sword.

Jouett had sent the crew forward, in order that Murphy might be spared any unnecessary mortification, and only two officers were at the gangway with Jouett to receive Murphy. Murphy came up the gangway, drew himself to his full height, held out his sword and began a speech, but Jouett took his hand, put his arm around his shoulder and said: "I am glad to see you, Murphy. Come below; your breakfast has been waiting some time."

When they reached the cabin, Murphy saw a beautiful table laden with oysters, crabs, beefsteaks, wines, etc. Turning to Jouett in astonishment, he said: "Why didn't you let me know you had all this? I would have surrendered sooner."

And the officers sat down at the table as though they had never drawn swords against each other.

OUR MARTYRED DEAD.

OUR martyred dead:
On each low bed,
Green be the chaplet,
Fresh the roses;
Oh, lightly rest,
On each calm breast,
The turf where each
In peace reposes,

Hail, here shades!
Your battle blades
A wall of steel
Our homes surrounded;
Your deeds have won,
From sire to son,
Love, joy and gratitude
Unbounded.

No marble cold
May guard your mould,
But living hearts,
Around, are swelling;
Each daring deed
Shall gain the meed
Of praise from all hearts
Richly flowing.

Your sacred dust
Be the choice trust
Of Freedom's grateful
Sons and daughters;
While future days
Your fame shall raise,
From Atlantic's
To Pacific waters.

INDIANA NEWS

Indianapolis.—The demand for workers in Indiana cities is about equal to the supply, except in East Chicago, according to a report issued by the United States employment service, which is co-operating with the Indiana employment commission.

Indianapolis.—A persistent decrease in the number of cold storage houses applying for licenses as required by the state law, has prompted Harry E. Barnard, state food and drug commissioner, to request from every city and county health office a report as to the number of such houses doing business within their jurisdictions.

Terre Haute.—One hundred operators employed in the exchange of the Citizens' Independent Telephone company, who recently formed a union, went on strike. The company's service was entirely suspended, and the city was without service except the local and long-distance connections of the Central Union.

Shelbyville.—Declaring that he considers perjury one of the worst crimes in the coutnry, Judge Blair took under advisement the extent of sentence that will be passed on Nellie Heck, Edna Heck, John Heck, Minnie Engle, Lizzie Martin and William Talbert, all of whom were charged with perjury. The six pleaded guilty to the charge. The women told of the circumstances which led them to lie in order to save Ray Heck from prison.

Jeffersonville.—Five townships in Clark county have formed permanent organizations which will become a part of the State Federation of Farmers' Associations. Six other townships have temporary organizations. Some of the associations are interesting themselves in road matters and there appears to be opposition to the building of roads under the county unit law, and also opposition to the petitions of several contractors to be released from prewar road contracts.

Chanute Field, Rantoul, Ill.—Flyers who returned to the local aviation field, after making a week's jaunt through Indiana for recruiting purposes, speak in the highest terms of the Hoosier state hospitality. Ten cities in the state were visited and in each one the army pilots were royally entertained. Of the four airplanes which were sent out from the field, only two of them returned. No one was injured in the crashes. A total of 160 men have enlisted in the air service here during the last two weeks.

Washington, D. C.—An extraordinary case of interdepartmental inefficiency in the government has been made public through Senator Watson, who is endeavoring to obtain payment to the Indiana coal trade bureau for 8,000 tons of coal ordered by the government from various Indiana operators. On this coal, demurrage and freight charges amounting to $92,820, or much more than the value of the coal, have been run up through the negligence and mistakes of various government departments.

Indianapolis.—After five months of scientific study of Indiana gas plants the gas heat unit committee established 570 British thermal units as the minimum monthly standard for the state. The daily minimum at 540 B. T. U. The rules adopted by the committee provide for a penalty against one gas company that falls below the monthly standard by rebating a certain amount from the bills of consumers. The standard adopted by the committee and the rules for operation of gas companies will be incorporated in a report that will be submitted to the public service commission within the next few days.

Indianapolis.—L. H. Wright, director of the state highway commission, announced the roads which the commission proposes to improve this year. The highways which are marked for improvement as soon as plans and specifications can be prepared are as follows: National road, from Terre Haute to a point five miles east of Stilesville; 31.7 miles of improvement. Lincoln highway, in Elkhart county; two stretches, totaling ten miles, which completes the improvement of the Lincoln highway between South Bend and Ligonier. The road between Indianapolis and Greenwood, approximately ten miles. The range line north of Indianapolis for seven miles. National road, west of Indianapolis to the Marion county line, six miles. Michigan highway, in Marshall county, for 8.7 miles north of Plymouth. Niles road for 4.7 miles north of South Bend. National road in Wayne county for one and one-half miles east of Cambridge City. The French Lick road in Warrick and Spencer counties through Boonville, 15 miles, part of which is east and part of which is west of Boonville.

Indianapolis.—An organization of discharged men from the Tenth infantry was completed at a meeting here. Officers were elected to serve until July 4 when a general rally of the men who served in that regiment will be held.

South Bend.—Janet Anderson, age forty-three, and Benjamin Willis, age forty-five were instantly killed, and Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Weise was hurt when the Twentieth Century Limited, a New York Central train, crashed into their automobile at Portage crossing, which is three miles west of this city.

Terre Haute.—William T. Gleason, named by Governor Goodrich as judge of the superior court, created by act of the last legislature, qualified and announces that the first term of his court will open June 2.

Connersville.—Connersville is to build 500 new homes during the coming year, according to an announcement by local building corporations. The city is sorely in need of houses for its inhabitants, as many families have been living in shacks and in tents.

Indianapolis.—Frank N. Wallace, entomologist for the state conservation commission, says that farmers in Indiana need not fear the so-called 17-year locust now due and arriving in Indiana. He believes that they will not appear in such numbers as to cause much damage.

Shelbyville.—Russell G. East, county agricultural agent, announces that he has discovered several fields of corn in Shelby county that have been ruined by the corn maggot. The insect works inside the stalk of corn, eating out the heart, and kills the tender shoot. These fields will be plowed and replanted.

Washington, D. C.—At the request of a number of farmer constituents, Representative Bland of Indiana has introduced a bill to repeal the daylight saving law. It is contended by the farmers that the law is a disadvantage to them, inasmuch as it shortens their working day for farm employees by an hour every day.

Jeffersonville.—A half crop of berries is in sight here, but on a smaller acreage than usual. The first strawberries from local growers are on the market. Red raspberries escaped the freeze, black raspberries were killed, but the rain has permitted a new setting, and blackberries also are expected to make a fair crop.

Franklin.—The Johnson county memorial commission, appointed by Judge Fremont Miller to arrange for a memorial to the county's soldiers and sailors who took part in the world war, have decided that a county hospital be erected. A questionnaire was conducted, and it was found that sentiment was generally in favor of a hospital.

Washington, D. C.—Representative Will R. Wood of the Tenth Indiana district introduced bills in the house to grant captured German cannon to the cities of Crown Point, Monticello, Battle Ground and West Lebanon. Senator Watson has recommended A. V. Burch of Evansville for appointment to the central fuel committee for the coal industry of Indiana and Illinois.

Indianapolis.—The state board of tax commissioners agreed with a committee of the County Auditors' association to confer informally with county officials concerning tax levies to be proposed by the counties, with the conferences to be held prior to the actual fixing of the levies by the counties and prior also to the formal consideration of the levies after they are fixed, subject to the approval of the state board, by the counties.

Logansport.—Fruit growers of this county are more optimistic about the fruit crop now than they were several weeks ago. It is believed that the early strawberry crop was ruined by frost but that the berries from the later bloom will make a fair crop. Many horticulturalists who abandoned the spraying of their orchards after the frost a week ago, thinking that the entire crop had been destroyed, have started spraying again.

Indianapolis.—For the control of the milk supply of Indianapolis and other cities of the state, the Indiana state board of health will make public monthly a list of dairies that fail to meet the sanitary standards required by the state. Firms buying milk from such dairies, before the requirements of the state board have been complied with will lay themselves liable to prosecution with the offending dairyman, it was said by Harry E. Barnard, state food and drug commissioner.

Terre Haute.—The Vigo County Farmers' association has adopted a resolution by practically a unanimous vote, protesting against the present system of motor mail delivery, many urging a return to the old wagon delivery, which, it is contended, gave better service for farmers than the plan now used. The association recently has shown a growth in membership of 66 per cent. Members have been urged to buy pure-bred, registered live stock and to avoid mixing breeds.

Petersburg.—The cold, rainy weather has caused the cutworms to do much damage in this part of the state to young corn and tomatoes. One tomato grower living south of Petersburg has 40 plants left out of 1,000 planted. Many farmers are delaying corn planting until the weather becomes hot and kills the cutworms. The worms are more numerous in solid soil than land that had been in corn last year. Tomatoe growers who lost thousands of plants by the late freeze have no surplus plants and cannot plant their acreage, if the cutworms continue their work. Potato bugs, the hard-shelled kind, also have attacked the tomato plants and growers have a double fight, with the cutworm below the earth and the potato bug above.

Indianapolis.—Governor Goodrich authorized the legislative reference bureau to enter into a co-operative agreement with the United States department of agriculture for the purpose of collecting, compiling and disseminating crop and live stock statistics.

Lafayette.—Authorities at Purdue university's agricultural experiment station here do not believe that there is any danger of serious loss being suffered in Indiana this year as a result of the appearance of Australian take-all, a new wheat disease in the United States.

CHAPTER XIX.

Laying the Trap.

Our first job was executed much more easily than I had anticipated. We caught Manuel sound asleep, and LeVere had sinewy hands at his throat before the fellow could grasp a weapon. The narrowness of the stateroom prevented my taking much part in the affair, but the mulatto needed no help, as he dragged the cursing Spaniard from his bunk to the deck and throttled him savagely. Indeed he would have killed the fellow had I not interfered and twisted his hands loose, leaving Estevan barely conscious. A blanket ripped into strips served to bind him securely enough for the present, but I thought it best to lock the door, and keep the key in my own pocket. LeVere would have knifed him even as he lay there helpless, but for my threat and insistence. Once back in the cabin my eyes distinguished the frightened face of the steward peering forth at us from out the dark of the passage leading forward.

"Come here, Gunsaules," I said sternly. "Step lively, lad; there's nothing for you to fear. Senor Estada has been killed during the night, and we have just captured his murderer," I explained. "There is reason to believe this act was part of a conspiracy to seize the ship in connection with those fellows amidships. Does that passage lead to their quarters?"

"It did once, senor, but now there is a closed door of oak, studded with iron, not only locked, but barred on this side. There are but two keys—one for the captain and the other for him who commands the buccaneers."

I stood there a moment, considering this information. The only way the mutineers could reach the cabin then would be from the deck, descending through the companion. So long as they remained unaware of the capture of Manuel there was little danger of their taking such action.

"Very well, steward," I said. "You go on about your work as though nothing had happened. If any word of this affair gets to the crew, or to those fellows forward, I'll hold you responsible. You are not to leave this cabin without my permission, nor speak to anyone. LeVere."

The mulatto faced me respectfully enough, and I had a feeling he would obey orders, largely because he dare not rebel.

"They will be wondering why you are not on deck. It will be better for you to take charge of the watch at once, and keep the men busy. Relieve Watkins at the wheel and send the man down to me. He can choose the fellows who will stick better than you could, and then can circulate among them without arousing suspicion."

Watkins soon shuffled down the steps. He whipped off his cap and stood waiting.

I put my hand on his shoulder. "Tom," I said soberly, "we are in the same boat, and understand each other. The chance has come for both of us, if we play the cards right. Listen while I tell you the situation, and what I plan doing."

I told it briefly, wasting no words, yet relating every fact. He listened eagerly, but without interruption until the end.

"What do you make of it?" I asked.

"About what you do, sir. I knew there was something of the kind going on—some of the men forward are in on it. You've got the ring-leader."

"Manuel, you mean. Who did he count on for help in the forecastle?"

"Cochose, and a handful of others, niggers and Spaniards, mostly. They meant to pull the affair off either today or tonight. Your plan gives us a fair chance, sir. A dozen good men on deck might do the business."

"But are there a dozen aboard to be trusted?"

"Well, yes sir. I rather think there are. I'd say that in both watches there's maybe fourteen to be relied on."

"In my watch there's Jones, Harwood and Simms, either English or Welsh. They're all right. Then there's a nigger named Sam; Schmitt, a Dutchman, with his partner, whose name I don't know, and two Frenchies, Ravel and Pierre. That makes eight, nine counting myself. Then in the starboard watch I'd pick out Jim Carter and Joe Cole, two Swedes, Carlson and Ole Hallin, and another nigger. Then there are a couple of Finns who ought to be with us, but I can't talk their lingo. That would give us sixteen out of thirty, and it's quite likely some of the others would take a hand with us, if they thought it was safe. I haven't any use though, sir, for Francois LeVere. There ain't a worse scamp aboard."

"I know that," I admitted, "but he had to be used."

"And what is my part now?"

"This is my watch below, and it will be best for me to keep off the deck until all is prepared. You select those men and get them together; wake up the ones in the starboard watch you feel sure are all right, and have them slip quietly on deck. Then we'll get these arms in the rack here, and be ready for business—the rest will be done in a hurry. I'll wait here for your report."

At the very best Watkins could scarcely perform the task assigned him in less than an hour. The success or failure of our effort depended entirely upon taking these fellows by complete surprise. If it came to an open fight our cause was hopeless, for that would mean fourteen or fifteen men unarmed, pitted against over a hundred thoroughly equipped and trained fighters. Only by confining them below, with hatches battened down, and a carronade trained upon them, would we be safe.

I sat where I could watch the stairs, and the entire forward part of the cabin. Gunsaules lowered the table, and began preparing the morning meal. Finally he announced breakfast.

"Suppose you rap on the lady's door yonder, and ask if she will join me. Say your message is from Senor Gates."

She came at once and seated herself opposite me, and we spoke of the weather while Gunsaules served. He was still hovering about, but my anxiety to have a word with her alone caused me to send him to attend Captain Sanchez. We waited until he disappeared within the after stateroom, bearing a tray; then her eyes suddenly lifted to mine, filled with questioning.

"Tell me what has happened?" She breathed eagerly. "I heard the noise of a struggle out here, and voices conversing. Why are you alone?"

I leaned over to speak in as low a tone as possible. And I told her the situation in detail and my plans.

She sat silently gazing at me across the table, her parted lips trembling to an unasked question. Before she could frame this in words, the door to the companion opened, and Watkins descended the stairs. At sight of her he whipped off his cap.

"You may speak freely," I said. "This is the young lady I told you about, and of course she is with us. Only talk low."

"Yes, sir," using a hoarse whisper, and fastening his gaze on me. "It's all right, sir."

CHAPTER XX.

The Deck Is Ours.

I had the next step carefully outlined in my own mind, and yet I hesitated a moment, glancing into the two faces before me, with a sudden realization of what the contemplated action would mean to all of us, if by any chance it should fail of success. I managed to speak cheerfully, putting a ring of confidence into my voice.

"Then the sooner we act the better. Watkins, have LeVere order these men aft. Let him say that Senor Estada wishes them to break out some stores in the lazaret. They need be here only long enough for us to distribute these arms among them, and for me to speak a word of instruction to them."

"But have I no part? Is there no way in which I can help?" asked the girl.

"You have your pistol? Then remain here. I shall have to go on deck with the men, and will not dare leave them a moment until the ship is absolutely secure. Manuel is locked in that stateroom, but must not be communicated with by anyone. It will be your part to see that Gunsaules neither enters that passage leading amidships, nor approaches this door. Keep him in sight. You will save us a man. Wait here now until I see how securely this passage forward is closed."

It was as described to me—a heavy oaken door, nail studded, not only locked, but held firmly in place by a stout iron bar. There was not the faintest possibility of any entrance aft, except through assistance from this side. As I returned to the cabin, Gunsaules came out of the captain's room and crossed the deck. At sight of me he stopped instantly.

"Gunsaules," I said, "you are to remain in this cabin until I give the word. The lady here has a pistol, and orders to shoot if you attempt to either enter this passage, or approach the door of Manuel's stateroom. How did you find Sanchez?"

"Sitting up in his bunk, senor, and able to eat."

"Does he know what is occurring on board?"

"No, senor. He questioned me, but I only told him everything was all right, so far."

In my heart I believed the fellow deliberately lied, but there was no opportunity to question him further, for at that moment the door of the companion opened and a miscellaneous group of men thronged down the stairs. They were a rough hairy lot, here and there a sturdy English countenance meeting my gaze, but the faces were largely foreign, with those of two negroes conspicuous.

"Twelve here, sir; I couldn't get Harwood down from the foretop," said Watkins.

"And there are others below who will join us?"

"Yes, sir; six more I count on."

"Which means lads, that with Harwood, Senor LeVere, and myself, we'll total twenty-one in this shindy. Now I'll tell you what is up. Watkins gave you some of it no doubt, but a word from me will make it clearer. I'm no pirate; I'm an English sailor, shanghaied. Estada named me first officer because I understand navigation."

I stopped speaking, staring at one of the faces before me; all at once it appeared familiar. "What is your name, my man?"

"Jim Carter, sir."

"You were on the Sinbad, three years ago?"

"I was that, Mister Carlyle," he answered grinning. "I know'd you the minute I cum down yere."

"Then that is all I need say on that line. Here's one of your mates, lads, who will vouch for me. Now, as I've been told, you are all of you in the same boat—you are prisoners on board. Luck has given us a chance to make a break, and get away. Captain Sanchez is wounded and helpless. Pedro Estada is dead, and I've got Manuel locked in that stateroom. His cut-throats are all below, and now all we've got to do is clap on the hatch and keep them there. Now, what I want to know is are you fellows with me?"

Watkins answered up promptly; then Carter; the others joining in with less heartiness, the different accents revealing their nationalities. I knew sailors well enough to feel assured they would follow their leaders once the game started.

"That's good enough; now we've got to hit hard and quick, lads. There are six men on deck who are not with us. Watkins will take care of them with those fellows I don't assign to other work. Jones, you and Carter make straight for the forecastle and don't let anyone come up the scuttle. One of you had better drop down below, and prevent any of those lads from unbarring the door leading amidships. Who is the best for that job?"

"Let Carlson do it."

"All right—Carlson it is then. You Frenchmen, and the two negroes, your part will be to ship the main hatch. Do a quick job, and clamp it down tight."

"I'll come down to you Carlson, as soon as we have the deck. It ought not to take more than five minutes to handle those lads, and slew around a carronade. Watkins, you and Carter hand out the cutlasses from the rack; you boys will handle those better than firearms. Good; now are you all ready?"

There was a low murmur of voices, the faces watching me showing their increasing excitement and eagerness. Our little talk had served to arouse their confidence in my leadership, and with gleaming weapons in their hands they became self-reliant volunteers. Once turned loose my greatest difficulty might be to restrain them, rather than urge them on. Revenge for past wrongs was in each heart, and they welcomed a chance to strike.

I whispered a parting word of admonition into the ear of Dorothy, receiving in return a glance from her eyes, which gave a new throb to my heart; then straightened up, and pistol in hand, pushed my way through the throng of sailors to the foot of the stairs.

"Follow me, lads," I said quietly.

MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT READ BY CLERK

Important Legislative Recommendations Made in Document Sent From Paris.

LABOR UNREST CHIEF POINT

Necessity for Intelligent Dealing With Situation Which Constitutes Menace to World Pointed Out—Domestic Measures to Be Dealt With.

Washington, May 20.—The message of President Wilson, cabled from Paris, was read to the congress today by Patrick J. Halligan, the reading clerk of the house. Substantially, it was as follows:

"Gentlemen of the Congress: I deeply regret my inability to be present at the opening of the extraordinary session of the congress. It still seems to be my duty to take part in the counsels of the peace conference and contribute what I can to the solution of the innumerable questions to whose settlement it has had to address itself; for they are questions which affect the peace of the whole world and from them, therefore, the United States cannot stand apart. I deemed it my duty to call the congress together at this time because it was not wise to postpone longer the provisions which must be made for the support of the government. Many of the appropriations which are absolutely necessary for the maintenance of the government and the fulfillment of its varied obligations for the fiscal year 1919-1920 have not yet been made; the end of the present fiscal year is at hand; and action upon these appropriations can no longer be prudently delayed. It is necessary, therefore, that I should immediately call your attention to this critical need. It is hardly necessary for me to urge that it may receive your prompt attention.

"I shall take the liberty of addressing you on my return on the subjects which have most engrossed our attention and the attention of the world during these last anxious months.

Domestic Legislation.

"I hesitate to venture any opinion or press any recommendation with regard to domestic legislation while absent from the United States and out of daily touch with intimate sources of information and counsel. I am conscious that I need, after so long an absence from Washington, to seek the advice of those who have remained in constant contact with domestic problems and who have known them close at hand from day to day; and I trust that it will very soon be possible for me to do so. But there are several questions pressing for consideration to which I feel that I may, and indeed must, even now direct your attention, if only in general terms. In speaking of them I shall, I dare say, be doing little more than speak your own thoughts. I hope that I shall speak your own judgment also.

"The question which stands at the front of all others in every country amidst the present great awakening is the question of labor; and perhaps I can speak of it with as great advantage while engrossed in the consideration of interests which affect all countries alike as I could at home and amidst the interests which naturally most affect my thought, because they are the interests of our people.

Rights of the Worker.

"By the question of labor I do not mean the question of efficient industrial production, the question of how labor is to be obtained and made effective in the great process of sustaining populations and winning success amidst commercial and industrial rivalries. I mean that much greater and more vital question, how are the men and women who do the daily labor of the world to obtain progressive improvement in the conditions of their labor, to be made happier, and to be served better by the communities and the industries which their labor sustains and advances? How are they to be given their right advantage as citizens and human beings?

"We cannot go any further in our present direction. We have already gone too far. We cannot live our right life as a nation or achieve our proper success as an industrial community if capital and labor are to be antagonistic instead of being partners. If they are to continue to distrust one another and contrive how they can get the better of one another, or what perhaps amounts to the same thing, calculate by what form and degree of coercion they can manage to extort on the one hand work enough to make enterprise profitable, on the other justice and fair treatment enough to make life tolerable. That bad road has turned out a blind alley. It is no thoroughfare to real prosperity. We must find another, leading in another direction and to a very different destination. It must lead not merely to accommodation but also to a genuine co-operation and partnership based upon a real community of interest and participation in control.

"Labor legislation lies, of course, chiefly with the states; but the new spirit and method of organization which must be effected are not to be brought by legislation so much as by the common counsel and voluntary co-operation of capitalist, manager, and workman. Legislation can go only a very little way in recommending what shall be done. The organization of industry is a matter of corporate and individual initiative and of practical business arrangement. Those who really desire a new relationship between capital and labor can readily find a way to bring it about; and perhaps federal legislation can help more than state legislation could.

Industrial Democratization.

"The object of all reform in this essential matter must be the genuine democratization of industry, based upon a full recognition of the right of those who work, in whatever rank, to participate in some organic way in every decision which directly affects their welfare on the part they are to play in industry. Some positive legislation is practicable. The congress has already shown the way to one reform which should be world-wide, by establishing the eight-hour day as the standard day in every field of labor over which it can exercise control. It has sought to find the way to prevent child labor, and will, I hope and believe, presently find it. It has served the whole country by leading the way in developing the means of preserving and safeguarding life and health in dangerous industries. The members of the committee on labor in the two houses hardly need suggestions from me as to what means they shall seek to make the federal government the agent of the whole nation in pointing out, and if need be, guiding the process of reorganization and reform.

Duty to Returning Soldiers.

"I am sure that it is not necessary for me to remind that there is one immediate and very practical question of labor that we should meet in the most liberal spirit. We must see to it that our returning soldiers are assisted in every practicable way to find the places for which they are fitted in the daily work of this country. This can be done by developing and maintaining upon an adequate scale the admirable organization created by the department of labor for placing men seeking work; and it can also be done, in at least one very great field, by creating new opportunities for individual enterprise. The secretary of the interior has pointed out the way by which returning soldiers may be helped to find and take up land in the hitherto undeveloped regions of the country which the federal government has already prepared or can readily prepare for cultivation, and also on many of the cutover or neglected areas which lie within the limits of the older states; and I once more take the liberty of recommending very urgently that his plan shall receive the immediate and substantial support of the congress.

Future Commerce.

"Our new merchant ships, which have in some quarters been feared as destructive rivals, may prove helpful rivals, rather, and common servants very much needed and welcome. Our great shipyards, new and old, will be so opened to the use of the world that they will prove immensely serviceable to every maritime people in restoring, much more rapidly than would otherwise have been possible, the tonnage wantonly destroyed in the war. I have only to suggest that there are many points at which we can facilitate American enterprise in foreign trade by opportune legislation, and make it easy for American merchant ships where they will be welcomed as friends rather than as dreaded antagonists.

"And credit and enterprise alike will be quickened by timely and helpful legislation with regard to taxation. I hope that the congress will find it possible to undertake an early reconsideration of federal taxes, in order to make our system of taxation more simple and easy of administration and the taxes themselves as little burdensome as they can be made and yet suffice to support the government and meet all its obligations. The figures to which those obligations have arisen are very great indeed, but they are not so great as to make it difficult for the nation to meet them, and meet them, perhaps, in a single generation, by taxes which will neither crush nor discourage. They are not so great as they seem, not so great as the immense sums we have had to borrow, added to the immense sums we have had to raise by taxation, would seem to indicate; for a very large proportion of these sums were raised in order that they might be loaned to the governments with which we were associated in the war, and those loans will, of course, constitute assets not liabilities, and will not have to be taken care of by our taxpayers.

"The main thing we shall have to care for is that our taxation shall rest as lightly as possible on the productive resources of the country, that its rates shall be stable, and that it shall be constant in its revenue-yielding power.

"Many of the minor taxes provided for in the federal legislation of 1917 and 1918, though no doubt made necessary by the pressing necessities of the war time, can hardly find sufficient justification under the easier circumstances of peace, and can now happily be got rid of. Among these, I hope you will agree, are the excises upon various manufactures and the taxes upon retail sales. They are unequal in the incidence on different industries and on different individuals. Their collection is difficult and expensive. Those which are levied upon articles sold at retail are largely evaded by the readjustment of retail prices. On the other hand, I should assume that it is expedient to maintain a considerable range of indirect taxes; and the fact that alcoholic liquors will presently no longer afford a source of revenue by taxation makes it the more necessary that the field should be carefully restudied in order that equivalent sources of revenue may be found which ot will be legitimate and not burdensome to draw upon.

Import Duties Correct.

"There is, fortunately, no occasion for undertaking in the immediate future, any general revision of our system of import duties. No serious danger of foreign competition now threatens American industries. Our country has emerged from the war less disturbed and less weakened than any of the European countries which are our competitors in manufacture. So far from there being any danger or need of accentuated foreign competition, it is likely that the conditions of the next few years will greatly facilitate the marketing of American manufactures abroad. Least of all should we depart from the policy adopted in the tariff act of 1913, of permitting the free entry into the United States of the raw materials needed to supplement and enrich our own abundant supplies.

Asks Woman Suffrage.

"Will you not permit me, turning from these matters, to speak once more, and very earnestly, of the proposed amendment to the Constitution which would extend the suffrage to women and which passed the house of representatives at the last session of the congress? It seems to me that every consideration of justice and of public advantage calls for the immediate adoption of that amendment and its submission forthwith to the legislatures of the several states. Throughout all the world this long-delayed extension of the suffrage is looked for.

"The telegraph and telephone lines will, of course, be returned to their owners so soon as the retransfer can be effected without administrative confusion; so soon that is, as the change can be made with least possible inconvenience to the public and to the owners themselves. The railroads will be handed over to their owners at the end of the calendar year; if I were in immediate contact with the administrative questions which must govern the retransfer of the telegraph and telephone lines, I could name the exact date for their return also. Until I am in direct contact with the practical questions involved I can only suggest in the case of the telegraphs and telephones, as in the case of their railways, it is clearly desirable in the public interest that some legislation should be considered which may tend to make of these indispensable instrumentalities of our modern life a uniform and co-ordinated system which will afford those who use them a complete and certain means of communication.

"The demobilization of the military forces of the country has progressed to such a point that it seems to me entirely safe now to remove the ban upon the manufacture and sale of wine and beers, but I am advised that without further legislation I have not the legal authority to remove the present restrictions. I therefore recommend that the act approved November 21, 1918, entitled, 'An act to entitle the secretary of agriculture to carry out during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1919, the purposes of the act entitled "an act to provide further for the national security and defense by stimulating and facilitating the distribution of agricultural products," and for other purposes,' be amended or repealed in so far as it applies to wines and beers.

"I sincerely trust that I shall very soon be at my post in Washington again to report upon the matters which made my presence at the peace table apparently imperative, and to put myself at the service of the congress in every matter of administration or counsel that may seem to demand executive action or advice.

Rats Harm Airplanes.

An inspector in the aerial department of the bureau of construction and repair in Washington writes in American Machinist:

"It has been noticed that since the use of casein glue at the Burgess plant the rats have increased in alarming numbers. After the workmen quit in the evening the rats immediately appear on the floor and make a raid on the casein glue cans. In the opinion of this office this could be very serious, as no doubt rats could destroy a wing panel in their attempt to get the glue. It is suggested that some poisoning be introduced into the glue or something be done to make the casein glue less delicious to the taste of the rodents. It would be dangerous to leave machines in storage which were made up with casein glue."

Naming a Trio.

In a civil court of North Carolina a judge was hearing a lawsuit regarding some road construction matters in which three contractors—grandfather, father and son—were concerned. One of the engineers who testified was asked how he designated the three men of the same name. His reply made everyone, including the judge, laugh.

"I called them Grandpap, Pap and Papoose," he said.—Youth's Companion.

Half Shoes for Women in the Black and the Brown Kid.

Women are wearing half shoes this spring, both because the new oxfords are so attractive in appearance, and because the season has been favorable for the very general wearing of low shoes.

Those who do not buy their shoes by chance, but use discrimination in making a selection, enjoy exercising their choice among the several new styles at Lawrence's. These show distinctive character, assured style, correct fitting quality, fine leathers, high quality shoemaking. They set properly, without gaping at side and heel. Also made to keep their shape in service, and to wear well.

BLIND MAN POULTRY FANCIER

Missourian Has Made Success of the Work, Despite Handicap Which Would Seem Insurmountable.

Blind Edward Jones of Jefferson City, Mo., has made a record in keeping poultry which many who have eyes have not equaled. Moving among his birds, which seem to understand how he is handicapped, and guided only by his sense of touch, he performs his daily work. He has built his own poultry house and brood coops, and has hatched and raised all his chicks. Blindness does not prevent him from culling his flock. The birds not intended to be kept are marketed as broilers, and the others are kept for the production of winter eggs.

Mr. Jones attended every poultry meeting held in his section last fall. He is now trying to organize a poultry club for blind people, and the home demonstration agent in the county has volunteered to read to the members the publications on poultry sent from the United States department of agriculture.

The Pleasures of Travel.

"Wa-al-p'ts—no," said the ancient Arkansawyer, "I hain't never did much of what you'd call traveling. I was 97 years old last grass; born and raised right here in Shagbark township, and hain't been outside of the county, but once. That was when I was about 80 years old. I went over to Torpidville, and they just nacher'ly took and started to lynch me the minute I got to town, for something or nuther, I never did find out what. One foot was already in the air and the other barely touching the ground when some feller came running and hollered that they were making a mistake—I wasn't the guilty party a-tall. As soon as they turned me loose I lit out for home as the crow flies, and I hain't done no traveling to speak of since. I always figgered that on the next occasion the feller that knowed it was a mistake might not get there in time to do me any good."—Judge.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

(By REV. P. B. FITZWATER, D. D., Teacher of English Bible in the Moody Bible Institute of Chicago.)

(Copyright, 1919, by Western Newspaper Union.)

LESSON FOR JUNE 1.

FAITH, WHAT IT IS AND WHAT IT DOES.

LESSON TEXTS—Hebrews 11:1-40; 12: 1, 2.

GOLDEN TEXT—Ye believe in God, believe also in me.—John 14:1.

ADDITIONAL MATERIAL—Matt. 8:5-13; Mark 2:1-12; Rom. 1:16-17; 3:21-30; 5:1; 1 John 5:4.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Story of a Man Who Believed in Jesus. (John 9:1-38.)

JUNIOR TOPIC—Heroes of Faith.

INTERMEDIATE TOPIC—The Victory of Faith.

SENIOR AND ADULT TOPIC—The Place of Faith in Religious Life.

In Hebrews, chapters 1-10 the grounds of faith are clearly set forth. In this lesson its nature and glorious triumphs are displayed.

I. The Nature of Faith (11:1-3).

1. Faith is the eye of the soul, enabling it to see the invisible (v. 1). It is not merely intellectual assent to that which commends itself as being reasonable, but it is the soul's attitude toward God.

2. Faith seizes the things of the future and lives and walks in their power in the present (v. 1).

3. It enabled the "elders" to obtain a good report (v. 2). It made God's promises so living and real to them that it became the dominant force in their lives.

4. Faith enables us to understand how the worlds were made (v. 3). No man was present when God made the worlds, so the foundation for our knowledge is the Word of God. The one who has faith wholly believes that Word.

II. The Triumphant Victories of Faith (11:4-38).

1. Faith of the antediluvian saints (vv. 4-7). As representative of this period three men are pointed out: (a) Abel (v. 4), who displayed his faith in his worship. He took his place before God as a sinner and offered a bloody sacrifice, thereby showing that he looked forward to Christ's atonement, which is substitutionary—a life for a life. (b) Enoch, who displayed his faith in his walk in fellowship with God (v. 5). (c) Noah, who by faith, stood loyal to God in a time of universal apostasy and wickedness (v. 7). Noah's task was a stupendous and difficult one. He executed it in the face of many a sneer and taunt, but his faith carried him through, securing salvation for himself and his family.

2. Faith of the Hebrew saints (vv. 8-38). (a) Abraham (vv. 8-10, 17-19). Abraham went out not knowing whither he went, but he knew that the Lord had spoken and that was enough. By faith he offered up Isaac, believing that God was able to raise him up from the dead and fulfill his promise that in Isaac the promised seed should obtain. (b) Sarah through faith received strength to conceive seed when she was old, counting him faithful who had promised (vv. 11, 12). (c) Jacob by faith pronounced a prophecy concerning Joseph's sons (v. 21). By faith he penetrated the unseen and pronounced destinies which should be experienced by them both. (d) Joseph by faith foresaw the entrance of his people into the promised land and made them swear to carry his bones there for burial, for even his body must not be left behind in the land of judgment and death (v. 22). (e) Moses (vv. 23-28). Faith in the hearts of his parents caused them to disregard the king's decree. Faith caused him to turn his back upon the honors of Egypt and identify himself with his enslaved brethren.

III. Faith's Grand Exemplar (12: 1, 2).

Christ taking upon himself human nature and passing through the trials of life to a triumphant goal is the supreme example for us. Those who fix their eyes upon him will (1) lay aside every weight. To run with success all burdens must be cast off. Things which may not be sinful in themselves, if they impede our progress must be laid aside. (2) Lay aside the sin which doth so easily beset us. (3) Run with patience the race set before us. (4) Looking unto Jesus. Our eyes must be steadfastly fixed upon him. Having him as our example we will endure the cross. To follow Jesus means suffering and trials.

Love as a Word.

Love, even as a word only, must stand alone. It is one of the great monosyllables of our great language—Love. It is the invisible gravitation of life. With its invisible cords, viewless but potent, it draws hearts together over eternal spaces, and holds them together in an indissoluble bond in Time and Eternity.

The Wonder of It!

"Lord, when I look on my own life it seems thou hast fed me so carefully, so tenderly, that thou canst have attended to no one else. But, when I see how wonderfully thou hast led the world, and are leading it, I am amazed that thou hast had time to attend to such as I."—St. Augustine.

CURIOUS IDEAS ABOUT GOLF

Some of Them, That Have Been Preserved, Will Be Appreciated by Devotees of the Game.

Twenty years ago the majority of women knew nothing about golf, and many good anecdotes are still told of some of the curious ideas they had regarding the game. One lady, making sympathetic conversation at dinner, said to an enthusiastic golfer:

"I often see you in your red coat. Do you need many dogs to play golf?"

A younger lady said she knew exactly how the game was played.

"They get what they call caddies to hunt about in the grass till they find a round stone, and then they hit it into a rabbit hole."

A third lady, who had evidently enjoyed a nearer view of the game, said:

"It is played by two men. One is a gentleman and the other is a common man. The common man sticks a ball on a lump of dirt, and the gentleman knocks it off!"

If You Need a Medicine You Should Have the Best

Have you ever stopped to reason why it is that so many products that are extensively advertised, all at once drop out of sight and are soon forgotten? The reason is plain—the article did not fulfill the promises of the manufacturer. This applies more particularly to a medicine. A medicinal preparation that has real curative value almost sells itself, as like an endless chain system the remedy is recommended by those who have been benefited, to those who are in need of it.

A prominent druggist says "Take for example Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, a preparation I have sold for many years and never hesitate to recommend, for in almost every case it shows excellent results, as many of my customers testify. No other kidney remedy has so large a sale."

According to sworn statements and verified testimony of thousands who have used the preparation, the success of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is due to the fact, so many people claim, that it fulfills almost every wish in overcoming kidney, liver and bladder ailments; corrects urinary troubles and neutralizes the uric acid which causes rheumatism.

You may receive a sample bottle of Swamp-Root by Parcels Post. Address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., and enclose ten cents; also mention this paper. Large and medium size bottles for sale at all drug stores.—Adv.

Looked Like Melodrama.

When Lewis Waller was playing Charles Surface in "The School for Scandal" he unfortunately stumbled just before making his entrance, and his right hand was thrust into a pot of red paint, with which a scenic artist had been retouching some of the "props." There was no time to lose, so Mr. Waller walked on the stage with his hand apparently dripping with gore, as from some hideous crime. The audience imagined the actor had injured himself, until his uncontrollable mirth reassured them.

Now is the time to flush the system. In helping the bowels to keep regular, Wright's Indian Vegetable Pills work like a charm.—adv.

Well, Even That Will Help.

"They say food is going to be cheap pretty soon," remarked the hopeful chap.

"No," said the man who loves to look on the dark side; "it isn't going to be cheap—it will merely seem cheap by comparison."—Boston Transcript.

ROAD BUILDING

OPERATION OF A ROAD DRAG

Principal Factor Is Skill on Part of Operator—Suggestions Given as Guide.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The principal factor in successfully operating a properly constructed road drag, provided that the condition of the road is favorable, is skill on the part of the operator. Such skill can be obtained only by intelligent experience in the use of the drag, and no rules can be laid down which would enable an inexperienced operator to produce first-class results. The following suggestions are intended, therefore, to serve rather as a guide to the judgment than as a criterion to be implicitly followed.

Under ordinary circumstances the position of the hitching link on the draw chain should be such that the runners will make an angle of from 60 to 75 degrees with the center line of the road, or, in other words, a skew angle of from 15 to 30 degrees. It is apparent that by shifting the position of the hitching link the angle of skew may be increased or diminished as the conditions require. When dragging immediately over ruts or down the center of the road after the sides have been dragged, it is usually preferable to have the hitching link at the center of the chain and to run the drag without skew. When the principal purpose of the dragging is to increase the crown of the road, the drag should be sufficiently skewed to discharge all material as rapidly as it is collected on the runners. On the other hand, if depressions occur in the road surface, the skew may perhaps be advantageously reduced to a minimum, thus enabling the operator to deposit the material which collects in front of the runners at such points as he desires by lifting or otherwise manipulating the drag. Many other examples of conditions which require modifications in the angle of skew might easily be cited, but these will readily suggest themselves to an intelligent operator as his experience increases.

The length of hitch is another very important consideration in operating a road drag. In the designs which have been discussed the draw chain may be readily taken up or let out at either end and the length of hitch thus increased or diminished as desired. It is impracticable to prescribe even an approximate rule for fixing the length of hitch, because it is materially affected by the height of the team and the arrangement of the harness, as well as by the condition of the road surface. Experience will soon teach the operator, however, when to shorten the hitch in order to lessen the amount of cutting done by the front runner and when to lengthen it in order to produce the opposite effect.

When the road surface is sufficiently hard or the amount of material which it is desired to have the drag move is sufficient to warrant the operator standing upon the drag while it is in operation, he can greatly facilitate its work by shifting his weight at proper times. For example, if it is desired to have the drag discharge more rapidly, the operator should move toward the discharge end of the runners. This will cause the ditch end of the runners to swing forward and thus increase the skew angle of the drag. The operator may, of course, produce the opposite effect by moving his weight in the opposite direction. In the same way, he can partially control the amount of cutting which the drag does by shifting his weight backward or forward, as the case may be.

An intelligent and interested operator will soon learn many simple ways by means of which he can easily control the different features of the work which a drag performs, and he will also learn to utilize effectively every effort which his team exerts.

Prosaic Matter.

"What did that poet have to offer?"

"Something in the newer vein, he said, inspired by hearing the rattling of milk cans early one winter morning."

"You didn't accept that sort of rot, I hope?"

"No. I told him as kindly as I could that the milkmaid has her place in poetry, but a milk can is a milk can and nothing more."

A Parlous Life.

"Is the editor in?"

"He's somewhere about," said the office boy.

Our Language.

"Did you call Edith up this morning?"

Miss Vera Baxter, talented musician, 1526 Liberty street, Terre Haute, Ind., says: "Every person who is nervous, has stomach trouble or is run down should take Pepgen because it is a splendid tonic. For months I suffered with nervous dyspepsia. I was afraid to eat more than enough to keep me alive. If I ate heartily I was sure to have awful pains. Pepgen restored my stomach to normal condition and strengthened my entire nervous system. I am able to eat whatever I want and I do not feel bloated afterward. Tasks that were formerly hardships are now pleasures. Thousands of people here in Terre Haute are taking Pepgen and our newspapers give the names of many of our most prominent citizens who indorse it for stomach, kidney, liver and nervous ills."

Guardian of the Royal Mint.

An important guardian of the royal mint in London, where golden pounds and silver coins are made, is a big, brown-coated terrier. He was taken to the mint as a puppy, and was well trained to his work. His duties do not begin until evening. Then he turns out with the guard and remains on patrol throughout the night. He goes everywhere—into the big places where the officer on duty accompanies him; into the little places capable of hiding someone, where a policeman could not enter. He knows his time and his beats, and after a certain hour he will not permit the presence of anyone in the mint who is not in policeman's uniform.

One of the little hydroplanes at the naval flying station at Far Rockaway went into a tail spin and dived straight into the hydrogen tank shown in this photograph. The machine is seen resting inside the frame of the tank. The aviators killed were Ensign Adams and C. P. O. Carey.

One of the features at this big English nursery camp is the out-of-doors sleeping quarters for the children. Every day that weather permits the children take this healthy way of getting their afternoon nap.

The dome of the United States Capitol at Washington is kept in excellent condition by painting it every few years. For this work forty painters are steadily employed for three months' time. Over five thousand gallons of paint are required for one coat. The reason for painting the Capitol dome at regular intervals is to prevent disintegration of metallic surface.

W. C. T. U. NEWS

Mrs. Chloe Hart was hostess to the W. C. T. U., Thursday afternoon. The meeting was principally for and with the children. The opening song was America which all children enjoy singing. Mrs. Sheffer read an appropriate passage of scripture and Rev. Johnson offered prayer. After roll call, to which many bright sayings of children were used as responses, Rev. Johnson gave a talk on "Kindness to Man and Beast." He remarked of the kindness of the St. Joe children to their pets. He also said that kindness was one of the greatest of human virtues This was followed by music and two recitations. Duet, Mesdames Sechler and Leighty, Sound the Jubilee. The children were then asked to tell what they liked about the Young Crusader, to which those who take the paper responded. A short business session followed. The hostess, assisted by two members served refreshments. Twenty-three children were present, also Mesdames Ray Herrick and Merritt Maxwell and Rev. Johnson were guests.

Ford

THE UNIVERSAL CAR

World-wide distribution and the continually growing demand for Ford cars are the best proofs of Ford value. Ford cars are utilities—they are positive necessities—for they have revolutionized modern business, brought country and city together, and opened up new life to the family. The Ford car has become a necessary part of everyday life.

Ford cars are not an experiment. Years of concentration on a single model have produced a motor car of proved value. It is as important in modern life as the mail service or telephone. Behind the Ford car is genuine Ford scervice, by competent mechanics using genuine Ford parts—with regular standard Ford prices. That is the service given by this agency.

Dear Folks:

Just received two letters from home, one dated March 20 and one April 2. The last letter sure came through in a hurry, only taking about seventeen days. I just came back from pass yesterday, I wasn't due back until tonight but I got tired of traveling around and came back. I was in Paris, Orleans, Nice, Monoco, Monte Carlo, Menton, Cannes, over in Italy a little ways, took a short ride on the Mediterranean sea. I was in several other places but they were not worth mentioning. If you look on the map of France you will see that most of these places were in the extreme southern part of France

I often wondered where France received the name of "Sunny France," so I started out to find out and found it. The trees down there are loaded with oranges and lemons, all kinds of flowers are blooming, etc. Everything was too beautiful to describe so I got a chance to get a couple pictures of the place which I will send home in a few days or carry them with me until I come home. If I carry them with me, maybe they will be worn out before I get there. Its hard to tell just how soon I will get to come home, all we hear now is go up to the Rhine for a while.

I got a card from Leon, he was at Brest when he wrote, he said he was ready to sail, wish I were going with him.

Looks very much like rain again this morning, but of course that would be nothing out of the ordinary. Well news is rather scarce so I'll ring off for this time. Hope these few lines find you folks all well. Write soon and often as I am always glad to hear from home.

Love to all, from Leroy Haifley.

Why The Editor Left

He saw the following in his paper: "Mrs. Johnson read a paper for the women's club entitled: 'Personal Devils.' Seventeen were present."

"Mr. John Crouse shipped a carload of hogs to Kansas City. Three of his neighbors went in with him to make up the load."

Another Road Petition Out.

A petition is being circulated for a gravel road commencing at the county line and extending north to the Thomas White corner. Then commencing at the point where the main street intersects this road, extending east to the Dale Widney corner, thence north to the Newville road, thence east to the road due north into Butler. This is a much needed road and is meeting with success by those carrying petitions.

Home From Overseas.

One by one, our soldier boys are being returned to their parents and families. Stanley Monroe of Butler, is the last one to have returned home, he arriving on Memorial day. Saturday, Sunday and Monday he and his family spent at St. Joe, with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. F. M. Monroe. Stanley is looking fine in spite of the many hardships of the soldier life, and in converse he says "there is no place like the United States."

See those potted plants at News office. You can save half by getting your plants here.

Dexter L. Thomas Dies

—Civil War Veteran, died at his Home in Omaha on Memorial Day—Born at Newville in 1841.

Omaha Bee, Saturday May 31.

Dexter L. Thomas, Omaha pioneer and well-known lawyer and real estate man, died early Friday morning at his home, 4624 Farnam street, after an illness of several months, starting with the influenza.

Mr. Thomas was 78 years old and had lived in Omaha 49 years. He was born in Newville, Ind.

In August 1862, before he was 21 years old, he enlisted in the 88th. Indiana regiment as a private. This regiment, recruited at Fort Wayne, Ind., was hurried into action and was in many of the bloodiest battles of the war.

Mr. Thomas soon showed the finest mettle of bravery and in recognition of several heroic deeds he was raised from the ranks to lieutenant and then to captain. He participated in the terrible charge up the Cumberland mountains in face of the "jackass batteries." He was in the battle of Lookout mountain, Burnt Hickory and many other engagements. He marched with Sherman from Atlanta to the sea.

At the close of the war Captain Thomas led his company in the historic march down Pennsylvania ave., Washington, in the grand review of the Union veterans.

His first venture into the far west mas made in 1867, when he came to Des Moines, Ia. The next year he taught in the high school in Butler, Ind. With the money earned there he went through the law school of the University of Michigan and was admitted to the bar. He went west and arrived in Omaha April 23, 1870.

In October, 1870, having established himself in Omaha in the law and real estate business, he made a trip to Ann Arbor and was married to Miss Frances I. Jefferies.

Mr. Thomas has built scores of houses in Omaha and engaged in large real estate dealings. He was also deeply interested in religious work. He established "Grace Mission" and was at the head of it for many years. He was one of the most active workers in the erection of St. John's Episcopal church. He had been a Sunday School superintendent in Omaha for 25 years.

Mr. Thomas is survived by his wife, four sons and a daughter. The sons are Charles and Guy of Omaha; Hugh of New York City and Warren of Syracuse, N. Y. The daughter is Miss Clara Thomas of Omaha.

The funeral was held Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock in All Saints Episcopal church, Rev. Dr Mackay officiating. Interment in Forest Lawn cemetery.

Leaves The Penal Farm.

Word came to St. Joe Monday, that Richard Clark, had escaped from the Penal farm, where he was serving a term of six months for child desertion. Clark deliberately left his wife and child some weeks ago and as a penalty, was sentenced to the state farm. When he is correlled this time, he sure will be sorry that he left home.

Howard W. Mounts of Garrett was appointed by the county commissioners Monday as county attorney for the balance of the year to succeed William P. Endicott, of Butler, who tendered his resignation in order to enter the new law firm of Atkinson, Endicott & Husselman. Mr. Endicott was elected county attorney in January to take the place of Mr. Atkinson, who held the place nine years.

POWDER IN SHOES AS WELL AS GUNS

Foot-Ease to be Added to Equipment of Hospital Corps at Fort Wayne.

Under the above heading the Detroit Free Press, among other things says: "The theory is that soldiers whose feet are in good condition can walk further and faster than soldiers who have corns and bunions incased in rawhide."

The Plattsburg Camp Manual advises men in training to shake Foot-Ease in their shoes each morning.

There is no foot comforter equal to Allen's Foot-Ease, the antiseptic, healing powder to be shaken into the shoes and sprinkled in the foot-bath, for hot, tired, aching, perspiring, smarting, swollen, tender feet, corns, bunions, blisters or callouses. What wouldn't you give to be relieved of one day's pain of your corns and bunions? Here is relief for every day. You won't realize this until you have tried Allen's Foot-Ease yourself. You simply forget all about your feet they are made so comfortable. Ask your druggist to-day for a package of ALLEN'S FOOT-EASE.

FIXING LEAKY FOUNTAIN PEN

Really No Need to Put Up With Annoyance That Can Be Remedied Easily.

If you have a fountain pen that leaks around the joints, especially so if it is one of those types of fountain pens having a point which disappears by turning a section of the barrel, try an application of heavy oil. To remedy the defect, soak the pen in warm water, not hot, and allow it to dry, particularly inside. Then apply oil on the spindle which revolves. The oil should be worked through the bearings from end to end. You can now refill the pen and wipe off the excess oil. A heavy cylinder oil is best for this purpose. To unscrew the parts of a fountain pen which have become set, merely heat the pen with hot water or by holding it near a flame, but be careful not to get too hot for there is danger of melting. While pen is heated a slight twist will often loosen the set.—Frank P. Goeder, Colorado Agricultural College, Fort Collins, Colo.

Ancient Precautions.

"We'll have this friendly agreement of ours carved upon a monument of stone," said one ancient king.

"So that all the public can read it," added the other.

"Not only that. It will make it impossible to treat it as a scrap of paper."

Why the Changed Phrase.

Bonita had been taught to say, "Excuse me, please," on leaving the table before others. One day she astonished mamma by remarking, "Please half excuse me."

"Why, what do you mean?" asked her mother.

"I'm only half through eating, of course," snapped Bonita indignantly; "I'm coming back!"

Good Advice.

"I am to make my first public speech tomorrow night. What would you advise me to do?" asked the young man of an old-time after-dinner speaker.

"Are you fond of your wife and children?" asked the old-timer.

"Yes, very."

"Like your home?"

"Very much."

"Do you enjoy having an occasional evening at home with your wife and kiddies?"

"I certainly do."

"Well then take my advice. Make that speech of your's tomorrow as bad as you possibly can. Make it so bad that they'll never ask you to speak in public again, and live in peace and contentment the remainder of your life."

A Liberal Helping.

The Wyn-Jenkins were giving a little dinner party. Pa Wyn-Jenkins was carving a fowl. It was older than it looked, and, the knife refusing to do its bit, the bird shot into the silken lap of the principal guest.

Mrs. Wyn-Jenkins went pale, but her husband never lost his sang-froid.

"I believe," he said to the guest, recapturing the bird, "that I've helped you to too much. Allow me to take back a little."

Knocking the Judge.

A discouraged counsellor remarked to the court, "My poor client is little likely to get justice done her until the judgment day."

"Well, counsellor," said the judge, "if I have an opportunity I'll plead for the poor woman myself on that day."

"Your honor," replied the other, "will have troubles of your own upon that day."

Venial Crime.

"Punkryter tells me that he has killed the hero of his new novel."

"Well, he needn't worry about that —any jury will acquit him."

ROAD BUILDING

ATTENTION TO EARTH ROADS

Authority on Highway Construction Likes Concrete, but Favors More Care of Lanes.

"More attention has got to be paid to the earth roads if the coming bond elections are to go over." This is the opinion of E. L. Stevens, inventor and road expert. Mr. Stevens is, perhaps, one of the most unique characters in the road-building world. A graduate civil engineer, he felt the tremendous need for the perfection and development of the road system of America. He stepped out from the promising channels of the regular engineering profession and went down almost below the level of ordinary men to study road building, says Rocky Mountain News. He has made road building and maintenance his life work and is now, probably, as well qualified as any man to tell the methods for the proper upbuilding of the nation's highway system.

For a number of years Mr. Stevens has been highway commissioner for the Estes Park highway. This piece of road work in itself is a testimony to his ideals. He is also the inventor of the Stevens improved road drag, one of the simplest and most efficient road machines on the American market.

Mr. Stevens believes in concrete highways and prepared boulevards, but he also believes that the earth road, which comprises more than 80 per cent of the country's highways, is of no less importance. "A concrete highway isn't going to do a farmer much good if he has got to haul his load three miles through hub-deep mud before he gets to it," is Mr. Stevens' attitude.

The farmer is the man who is going to pay for most of the country roads, and although concrete roads are needed where the traffic is sufficiently heavy the earth roads that feed the concrete road must be kept up.

As an inventor of road machinery, a road engineer, a road supervisor and a road worker for his practicalities and the life dream of better roads as his idealism, Mr. Stevens is ably qualified to judge highway problems.

UTAH TO SPEND $8,000,000

Part of Money Is to Be Spent for Improvements on Arrowhead Trail to California.

The state of Utah has decided to spend about $8,000,000 on roads in the next two years, with an expenditure this year of about $2,000,000. Some of the Utah millions, which are made up of state and federal funds, are going to be used on the development of the Arrowhead trail, which is tributary to all parts of southern California, from San Diego and Imperial valley on the south to Fresno and San Luis Obispo on the north.

$300,000,000 FOR HIGHWAYS

Sum Which If Capitalized at 5 Per Cent Would Represent Investment of $6,000,000,000.

Government road officials estimate that road construction and maintenance in the United States involve an annual outlay of over $300,000,000, a sum, which, if capitalized at 5 per cent, would represent an investment of $6,000,000,000. There has never been a nation-wide traffic census to show either the direction or volume of traffic over these highways.

Roads Must Be Linked Up.

If we are to keep costs down, our highways must be linked up and there must be through trunk lines provided to which feeders can be built.

Lower Hauling Costs.

Hauling costs are lowered by good roads because the size of the load is limited by the worst spot in the road.

One of Major Activities.

Road building will shortly become one of the major activities of our government.

NEW FASHIONS IN GOWNS AND COATS

Styles as They Are Reflected in the Latest Ideas of Apparel.

MANY PARIS MODES ADOPTED

Evening Coats Vie With Evening Gowns in Their Brilliancy—Taffeta Favorite Fabric—Tunics in Evidence.

Fashionable cities of the United States keep their fingers on the pulse of Paris. The mood of the moment expressed on the banks of the Seine is immediately felt by the style diagnosticians on this side of the Atlantic. Every symptom is known, every fashion idea is gauged by the clothes specialists over here.

Many of these Paris modes are adopted outright because they spring from a field long fertile with all that is lovely. Many others have to be adapted to the American woman and still others created especially for her.

The wise designer, observes a prominent fashion correspondent, like the true artist, knows what is beautiful and selects it from the myriads of ideas and fabrics which are as conglomerate as a hundred daubs of paint on an artist's palette.

Out of this class of fashion creators with "the know" has arisen the American couturier, who, while keeping a watchful eye on Paris, knows how to create her own models, which rival in loveliness and perfection any importation that France may send over.

With the coming of peace the Parisienne burst into bloom. Like some rare bulb that had lain in dark hibernation awaiting the call of the spring sun, she dazzled the world. Her evening gowns could not be sufficiently brilliant in color to express her mood of joyousness.

Naturally, the American woman, atune with the same joy of victory, followed suit. Brilliancy marked every gathering. Jewels were brought from their velvet boxes, and once more the American woman bloomed. The marvel was how quickly femininity was able to clothe itself in the new and brilliant raiment of joyous peace.

Taffeta Favored for Coats.

Evening coats vie with evening gowns in their brilliancy. Taffeta is the favorite fabric for these summer mantles, though baronette satin with its glimmering folds makes exquisite evening wraps. Glace silk, with two tones running in its depth, is found in many of these capelike garments. Two contrasting layers of chiffon or georgette crepe make delightfully pretty wraps and give sufficient warmth for balmy summer evenings.

These wraps are frequently yoked in the drop shoulder line and the silhouette suggests the old-fashioned dolman, which lends itself perfectly to these modern capes. Crystal tassels, or those of silver, gold and jet, trim these garments or act as ornaments on heavy strands of beads that tie the fronts of the cap together. Pearl and jet are effectively combined in this bead trimming.

Gown of White Taffeta With Design of Pink Roses.

The collars of these wraps are sometimes made of the material. They are cut straight, made double, and are gathered and wired at the center back to give the high line reaching nearly to the crown of the head. Fur, especially white fox and skunk, is used with lovely softness on these capes when a fur collar is needed. The contrast of pelt ry with silk is always lovely, however inconsistent it may look in summer.

Ostrich feathers are profusely used to trim these evening capes. The graceful fronds of ostrich make the ideal trimming for the summer wraps. Fringe is seen on these garments, but not so much as formerly.

A lovely evening wrap is made of geranium pink taffeta. A long cape falls loosely over the shoulders, but is cut to wrap snugly around the ankles, giving the narrow silhouette.

Over this cape fall two long, graceful overcapes that hang in points at the back. These points are weighted with giant tassels of pink and pearl beads that dangle from a calyx of jet. Two long strands of pink and pearl beads start from the front under the collar and meet between the shoulders in a bead cabuchon. A single strand then hangs from this ornament and ends with a tassel on line with the other two.

Tunics characterize evening gowns. This is the natural outcome of the narrow line around the feet. The short tunic, quite full or knife plaited, is used with delightful effect on dance frocks.

A beautiful black and gold evening gown is taken out of all sombreness by the brilliancy of its trimming. The bodice is black tulle, sleeveless, as most evening gowns are.

Black and Gold Lace Evening Gown With the Prevailing Tunics.

The tunic of this gown is serpentine. It is made of black lace flecked with gold. Around the edge of this lace run three bands of vividly contrasting colors, blue, purple and emerald green. Beneath this tunic falls the tight skirt of black charmeuse with a short train. A long sash end is weighted with a tassel of jet and gold. The girdle of this gown belongs to the "rainbow division" of girdles. Four bands of color, blue, purple and green, are flanked with gold.

A tunic of different length is on the frock, with the underdress of lace ruffles. This gown is particularly picturesque on a young girl. White taffeta is flowered with brilliant pink roses. This material is used for the overskirt and the four triangles which make the bodice. The modeste consists of soft cream lace ruffles mounted on flesh-colored mousseline. The ruffled underskirt is likewise mounted on a scant petticoat of mousseline.

The girdle of this gown is pink taffeta in the same shade as the roses. It is bound with silver ribbon.

Vagaries of Tunics.

A spiral tunic that describes a double line is the distinctive mark of an evening dress which is chiffon in the shade of rose that carries a violet tone in its threads. This very unusual shade is combined with turquoise blue. The bodice is made of rose chiffon with a surplice of flesh pink. A tunic of rose chiffon overlaps another of turquoise blue. This same idea is repeated in the sleeves, where turquoise blue shows beneath the rose sleeve which is cut very short. Tiny rows of silver gauze ribbon run on both of these tunics and tie the sleeve.

The girdle of this varicolored gown is rose chiffon and it is strapped with two geranium pink ribbons and one of turquoise blue, the center line being blue. These ribbons tie at the left side and the three ends hang in varied lengths.

The skirt of this frock reaches to the ankles and is draped in a slightly bias line to conform to the swirl of the tunics.

SOME DAINTY EVENING GOWNS

Metal and Beaded Nets Afford Elegant Costumes for Wear on Formal Occasions.

Never were such gleaming, glittering materials used for evening gowns. There are metal and bead embroidered nets, metal brocades, heavily spangled and jetted nets, lustrous satins and rare laces. No fabric seems too costly to put into this season's evening gown and if one cannot afford a gleaming costume, one must "go in" for diaphanous, dainty girlish effects, or do something to a simple satin or silk frock that will make it stand out with noticeable distinction among the glittering creations roundabout.

Such a trick has been tried with a black satin dinner frock, which has tulle wings at either side of the skirt and garlands of flowers attached in striking manner to skirt and bodice. This simple dance frock is interesting and it has the new, perfectly flat back, with a train falling from shoulder to floor. Over this train of blue and silver brocade floats a light drapery of black lace, and the same lace is draped over the arms and falls in scarf ends at the front.

THIN PEOPLE SHOULD TAKE PHOSPHATE

Nothing Like Plain Bitro-Phosphate to Put on Firm, Healthy Flesh and to Increase Strength, Vigor and Nerve Force.

Judging from the countless preparations and treatments which are continually being advertised for the purpose of making thin people flashy, developing arms, neck and bust, and replacing ugly hollows and angles by the soft curved lines of health and beauty, there are evidently thousands of men and women who keenly feel their excessive thinness.

Thinness and weakness are often due to starved nerves. Our bodies need more phosphate than is contained in modern foods. Physicians claim there is nothing that will supply this deficiency so well as the organic phosphate known among druggists as bitro-phosphate, which is inexpensive and is sold by most all druggists under a guarantee of satisfaction or money back. By feeding the nerves directly and by supplying the body cells with the necessary phosphoric food elements, bitro-phosphate should produce a welcome transformation in the appearance; the increase in weight frequently being astonishing.

Increase in weight also carries with it a general improvement in the health. Nervousness, sleeplessness and lack of energy, which nearly always accompany excessive thinness, should disappear, dull eyes become bright, and pale cheeks glow with the bloom of perfect health.

CAUTION: — Although bitro-phosphate is unsurpassed for relieving nervousness, sleeplessness and general weakness, it should not, owing to its tendency to increase weight, be used by anyone who does not desire to put on flesh.

Mean Intimation.

"Mr. Jones says he would die for me."

"How can he when he's bald?"

"CALLUS CORNS" LIFT RIGHT OFF

Apply a few drops of "Freezone"—No pain!

Don't suffer! A tiny bottle of Freezone costs but a few cents at any drug store. Apply a few drops on the corns, calluses and "hard skin" on bottom of feet, then lift them off.

When Freezone removes corns from the toes or calluses from the bottom of feet, the skin beneath is left pink and healthy and never sore, tender or irritated.

Speaking by the Card.

Weak From Pain

Mrs. Gibbert Was in Misery, But Doan's Brought Her Splendid Health.

"About 15 years ago my kidneys were in bad condition," says Mrs. Lucy Gibbert, 15310 Columbia Ave., Harvey, Ill. "There was a constant, dull, bearing-down pain in the small of my back. I couldn't turn over in bed without such pain I could hardly breathe. Mornings I was stiff, sore and lame all over; my back was like a rusty hinge.

Mrs. Gibbert

"Inflammation of the bladder nearly drove me wild. The kidney secretions passed every little while, day and night, a little at a time, and burned like fire. Great sacs of water formed under my eyes.

"I was in such misery I would become weak and so nervous I would scream. I had nerve-racking headaches and the back of my neck pained me. I was so dizzy I didn't dare bend over for fear of falling on my face. My sight became blurred. I was sick all over.

"Five boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills cured me of kidney trouble. Since then I have enjoyed splendid health and I owe it all to Doan's.

THIS WEAK, NERVOUS MOTHER

Tells How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Restored Her Health.

Philadelphia, Pa.—"I was very weak, always tired, my back ached, and I felt sickly most of the time. I went to a doctor and he said I had nervous indigestion, which added to my weak condition kept me worrying most of the time—and he said if I could not stop that, I could not get well. I heard so much about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound my husband wanted me to try it. I took it for a week and felt a little better. I kept it up for three months, and I feel fine and can eat anything now without distress or nervousness."—Mrs. J. WORTHLINE, 2842 North Taylor St., Philadelphia Pa.

The majority of mothers nowadays overdo, there are so many demands upon their time and strength; the result is invariably a weakened, run-down, nervous condition with headaches, backache, irritability and depression—and soon more serious ailments develop. It is at such periods in life that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will restore a normal healthy condition, as it did to Mrs. Worthline.

BILIOUSNESS Caused by Acid-Stomach

If people who are bilious are treated according to local symptoms they seldom get very much better. Whatever relief is obtained is usually temporary. Trace biliousness to its source and remove the cause and the chances are that the patient will remain strong and healthy.

Doctors say that more than 70 non-organic diseases can be traced to an Acid-Stomach. Biliousness is one of them. Indigestion, heartburn, belching, sour stomach, bloat and gas are other signs of acid-stomach. EATONIC, the marvelous modern stomach remedy, brings quick relief from these stomach miseries which lead to a long train of ailments that make life miserable if not corrected.

EATONIC literally absorbs and carries away the excess acid. Makes the stomach strong, cool and comfortable. Helps digestion; improves the appetite and you then get full strength from your food. Thousands say that EATONIC is the most effective stomach remedy in the world. It is the help YOU need. Try it on our money-back-if-not-satisfied guarantee. At all druggists. NO SECRECY IN MEAT SITUATION WHEN UNITED STATES REPORTS ARE UTILIZED

Government Market Reports Follow These Porkers to Market.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

That every one interested in meat—from the stock raiser to the consumer—may have the benefit of knowing market conditions in the meat industry, the bureau of markets, United States department of agriculture, issues daily and other reports to facilitate distribution, improve transportation, stabilize values and to help the producers in placing their stock where it will sell to the best advantage.

On the assumption that the dissemination of market information will tend to improve conditions, the bureau of markets has developed a system of market reporting that has already had some effect in restoring confidence in the markets. While the information made available by the bureau is being used most extensively by those actively engaged in some branch of the live-stock or meat industries, it is believed that sooner or later the public generally will utilize this knowledge and with it bring into line any retailers who reduce consumption by an unwarranted margin of profit.

Present Market-Reporting System.

The present market-reporting system, which was begun in the fall of 1916, has developed rapidly, and at present there are 17 service centers, each of which distributes daily, weekly and monthly reports on the various branches of the industry. These include daily reports on meat-trade conditions in Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Washington, Pittsburgh, San Francisco and Los Angeles; daily reports on live-stock loadings; daily reports on the estimated receipts and prices of live stock at Chicago and Kansas City; reports of live-stock movements in grazing and feeding sections; monthly reports on stocks of frozen and cured meats, eggs and poultry; monthly reports on live-stock receipts and shipments at all public stock yards, and monthly estimates on the supply of marketable live stock.

The report on meat-trade conditions at the leading markets brings to the small dealers, as well as to producers, information that was formerly possessed only by the larger meat-packing institutions. Specialists obtain full information daily on the fresh-meat supply, including various grades of beef, veal, pork, lamb and mutton at the markets, and this information is tabulated and distributed widely by telegraph, through a leased-wire system, to meat-market centers. In a similar manner daily price quotations are furnished on different grades of live stock. As applied to fresh meats, this service results in giving to the public full information as to the supply and accurate data on values of all commercial grades. Secrecy is eliminated, so that when prices on meats are high, as compared with values on foot, it is possible to locate the profiteer.

Shipments Reported Each Day.

Daily reports prepared by the bureau furnish the industry with information on live-stock shipments. This information is obtained from transportation companies who report by wire each night to the Chicago office of the bureau. The wide distribution of this information tends to stabilize values. It furnishes to the producer information which will enable him to ship his stock to market where there is the greatest demand. A knowledge of the demand by smaller plants, which these reports furnish, has a tendency to stimulate competition among buyers with the subsequent effect of raising values. Also, when the amount of live stock moving from production areas is known, it is possible to regulate the supply of cars needed and to determine whether car shortages for any particular district are apparent or real. Improving the system of distribution makes fewer cars necessary, and they can be moved with greater dispatch.

The better distribution of live-stock receipts resulting from information obtained from the loading reports enables commission men and buyers to render better service in handling live stock after it arrives at the stock yards. Heavy receipts arriving unexpectedly create congestion and confusion, which in turn invariably result in unnecessary shrinkage and costly delays, working in reality an injury to the producer and thereby discouraging production.

Bureau Issues Variety of Reports.

An important branch of the live-stock reporting system of the bureau of markets consists of the telegraphic bulletins prepared by representatives of the Chicago and Kansas City offices, and issues from time to time during the market hours of each day. They report the actual live-stock arrivals and the exact conditions of the market, and are transmitted over the bureau's leased wires to other markets where local offices are established. Markets all over the country rely on these daily reports, and these prices are used as a basis in determining values.

Steady progress has been made by the bureau in collecting and distributing information obtained from grazing and feeding sections, which is of use in lessening market congestion and preventing violent fluctuations in values. Reports on meats in storage are issued monthly. The bureau also issues monthly reports on receipts and shipments of live stock in 81 of the leading stock yards in the country. In addition the bureau furnishes a weekly bulletin, the Live Stock and Meat Trade News, which supplies miscellaneous trade information coming from outside sources. All of the reports issued by the bureau are given wide publicity and are available to any person who has use for them.

MAKE EQUIPMENT TO CLEAN DAIRY PAILS

Heating Apparatus Is One of Greatest Conveniences.

Low-Pressure Upright Boiler Is Desirable Where a Large Number of Cows Are Kept—Cream Separator Saves Labor.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

One of the greatest conveniences on the farm where cows are kept is some means of heating an abundance of water for washing the milk vessels. Where a considerable number of cows are kept, heating water by means of steam from a small, low-pressure upright boiler is desirable, but on the small farm a stove with a basin fitted into the top (or it may be separate from the top) can be purchased cheaply, and will serve the purpose, provided the water is properly heated. Water can be pumped from the well directly into the basin. In order to avoid heating the milk room and to do away with smoke and ashes, the water heater should be placed immediately outside the milk room and, if elevated, the water from it can be run into the washing vat.

Some equipment is necessary in which to wash utensils used in handling milk. A vat is very convenient. One end of the vat can be used for washing and the other for rinsing and scalding.

Fiber brushes for washing milk utensils should replace the common dishrag, as they do better work and are more easily kept clean.

On every farm where as many as four or five cows are kept a cream separator is advisable, as it will reduce the labor required in handling the milk from cows more than any other one thing.

A refrigerator or ice box is desirable upon every farm where either a few or many cows are kept if it is practicable to secure ice for use in summer.

PHYSICALLY FIT AT ANY AGE

It isn't age, it's careless living that puts men "down and out." Keep your internal organs in good condition and you will always be physically fit.

The kidneys are the most overworked organs in the human body. When they break down under the strain and the deadly uric acid accumulates and crystallizes look out! These sharp crystals tear and scratch the delicate urinary channels causing excruciating pain and set up irritations which may cause premature degeneration and often do turn into deadly Bright's Disease.

One of the first warnings of sluggish kidney action is pain or stiffness in the small of the back, loss of appetite, indigestion or rheumatism.

Do not wait until the danger is upon you. At the first indication of trouble go after the cause at once. Get a trial box of GOLD MEDAL Haarlem Oil Capsules, imported direct from the laboratories in Holland. They will give almost immediate relief. If for any cause they should not, your money will be refunded. But be sure to get GOLD MEDAL. None other is genuine. In sealed boxes, three sizes.—Adv.

Many People Poisoned

Scores of people meet death each year by a slow process of poisoning that is going on within our bodies. This poisoning is caused by the liver and kidneys failing to perform their proper function. Poisonous matter accumulates within the body and health declines. The unsightly liver splotches, billiousness, headache and dizziness, bad taste in the mouth, coated tongue, a pain in the back or under the shoulder blade, a tired or achy feeling are some of the most common symptoms of this poisoning. If this poisoning it not expelled and the cause removed the resisting power is finally gone and life pays the penalty. Are you of the heedless class or are you safeguarding your health? If you want health you must keep the liver, kidneys and bowels active. Glando Tonic is what you need to restore this activity and expell the poisons. Keep on the safe side and use a reliable remedy. Glando Tonic is put up in a treatment form and guaranteed to do the work. Ask your druggist for a large $1 treatment. Take it as directed and you will be surprised to know how much poison was stored up within your body. When the liver is inactive a mucus or slime collects within the stomach and bowels which hinders digestion and the assimilation of food. This is called catarrh of the stomach or bowels. Glando Tonic cuts this slime and mucus and removes it. A nauceated feeling is sometimes experienced when this mucus is breaking loose but as soon as it is removed from the bowels, you will feel fine, the complexion clear, the appet te return and you will want to tell others of your wonderful cure.

Glando Tonic is sold by druggists or may be secured by sending direct to the Gland-Aid Co., Fort Wayne, Indiana.

Half Shoes for Women in the Black and the Brown Kid.

Women are wearing half shoes this spring, both because the new oxfords are so attractive in appearance, and because the season has been favorable for the very general wearing of low shoes.

Those who do not buy their shoes by chance, but use discrimination in making a selection, enjoy exercising their choice among the several new styles at Lawrence's. These show distinctive character, assured style, correct fitting quality, fine leathers, high quality shoemaking. They set properly, without gaping at side and heel. Also made to keep their shape in service, and to wear well.

To Play Great Organ at the Methodist Centenary

MRS. MONTGOMERY LYNCH of Seattle will play the great $50,000 organ in the presentation of "The Wayfarer," the magnificent pageant of the Methodist Centenary Celebration, in Columbus, O., June 20 to July 13. Montgomery Lynch, her husband, will direct the chorus of 1,000 voices, which is a part of the pageant.

REDUCED FARE ADDS INTEREST

Visitors to Methodist Centenary to be Well Cared For.

REGISTRATIONS ON INCREASE

Housing Committee of the Celebration Have More Than Forty Thousand Rooms in Private Homes at Their Disposal, Where Those Who Attend Can Be Lodged as Conviently as at a Hotel.

Announcement by the government that a special low rate of one and a third fares for the round trip has been authorized for the celebration, Columbus, O., June 20 to July 13, has tremendously increased the interest in that event and advanced manifold the inquiries and registrations coming from all parts of the United States. At headquarters the other day a single mail brought cash registrations from 14 separate states and South America.

The low rate has increased work for the special committees, which are responsible for housing the large influx of visitors now seen to be certain. Accommodations fall into three classes:

First, the hotels, which have an average daily capacity of 5,000 visitors.

The second field of accommodation will be in public buildings, which have been specially fitted up for this sort of service for the celebration. These include the State School for the Blind, the State School for the Deaf, the large barracks which were provided at Ohio State university for the student army training corps, and other buildings of a similar nature held in reserve should the throng exceed even present generous expectations.

The third line of convenience for the hospitality of Columbus is in the homes of the citizens themselves. More than 40,000 rooms have been listed with the housing committee, and these are card indexed by location, telephone number and best means of access. Visitors to the Celebration can be lodged as conveniently as a clerk at a hotel assigns a visitor to his room. In order that there might be no misunderstanding the committee in charge has a uniform rate for accommodations in private dwellings. The charge will be $1 per day for a single person in a room and $1.50 per day for two persons in a room.

Always generously provided with restaurants, Columbus at the present time is having its number largely reinforced by reason of many places being turned into restaurants which were occupied as cafes before May 24, when the state became dry. In addition to these, extraordinary facilities for feeding large numbers quickly are being installed in the exposition grounds.

Hoosier State Happenings

Seymour.—The Jackson County Cow Testing association has been formed in this county, and a large number of dairymen are members.

Peru.—Joint township commencement exercises for Miami county's schools will be held in Peru June 14. Eleven of the fourteen townships will join in the event, and there will be 200 graduates.

Indianapolis.—The state board of tax commissioners declined to consider the petition of Madison county officials for a $50,000 bond issue to finance a new Madison county tuberculosis hospital.

Elwood.—The American Sheet and Tinplate mills which closed down indefinitely May 10, will resume operations June 9. A number of employees who have left the city are expected to return. The mills will run each day in the week, instead of part time.

Terre Haute.—Nearly 375,000 gallons of spirits and gin have been found by the assessor for Harrison township, stored at the Commercial distillery here, without ostensible owners and therefore, not returned for purposes of taxation. The assessor was informed that it was impossible to give the names of the owners as certificates had been issued for it, and no record kept of them.

Chicago, Ill.—Universal military training will work wonders toward the elimination of feeble-mindedness in America and the degeneracy and vice accompanying it, in the opinion of Dr. George S. Bliss, superintendent of the Indiana School for Feeble-minded Youth, at Fort Wayne. He spoke here before the opening meeting of the forty-third annual conference of the American Association for the Study of Feeble-minded.

Shelbyville.—Mrs. Raymond Heck, Mrs. Minnie Engle, Mrs. Lizzie Martin, John Heck and William Talbert, all of Morristown, Shelby county, and Edna Heck of this city, were sentenced to serve two to twenty-one years in prison and each were fined $50 in the Shelby circuit court by Judge Alonzo Blair, on pleas of guilty to charges of perjury. The sentences of imprisonment were suspended during good behavior in each of the cases.

Rushville.—That the taxables of Rush county will be almost tripled this year is indicated from reports from seven of the twelve townships in the county, which show valuations for the purpose of taxation this year total $26,802,793 as compared with a combined valuation in the same township last year of $10,802,793. The biggest increases, according to the township assessors' reports, have been made in real estate and improvements.

Indianapolis.—During the last year the growth in membership of the Masonic lodges in Indiana has resulted in the greatest net gain in the history of the grand lodge, according to the annual report of Thomas B. Bohon of Jeffersonville, grand master, at the business session of the ninety-eighth annual meeting of the grand lodge, F. and A. Mason, at the Masonic Temple. The membership of the Indiana lodges is 90,000, representing a gain of 20,000 in the year.

Franklin.—The highest scholastic honor that can be given a student of Franklin college at the close of his four-years' course will be conferred on Clarence G. Lowe of Columbus, when he graduates with the 1919 class on June 18. He will receive his diploma and bachelor of arts degree, "summa cum laude," and will be the first recipient of this honor in the history of the college. Mr. Lowe has won his right to the honor with an average for the entire scholastic course of about 98 per cent.

Indianapolis.—Dr J. N. Hurty, state health commissioner, has advised residents at Culver and along the shores of Lake Maxinkuckee that previous experience with the epidemic which now is scourging fish in the lake gives assurance that the epidemic probably cannot be transmitted to human beings. Doctor Hurty said that even if fish in the lake are eaten no dangerous results likely would follow. The fish are afflicted with water-mold, a fungus growth more or less prevalent in Hoosier lakes.

Indianapolis.—The alignment of the separate units of the canning industry in Indiana to put into effect a plan of competitive inspection of all canned goods, devised by the National Canners' association, has been in progress with excellent prospects for its acceptance by all Indiana packers. The ultimate object of the plan is to promote the use of canned foods by guaranty to the consumer of the purity and excellence of the products, certified by a label issued by the national association under rigid restrictions.

Lebanon.—Reports of township assessors, just tabulated, show that, exclusive of the corporation valuations yet to be added, the taxables of Boone county have jumped from $28,000,000 to $60,000,000. An estimate of the corporation valuation gives the county a total of $84,000,000 of taxables.

Jeffersonville.—Farmers report to V. J. Mann, county agricultural agent, the presence of the Canadian thistle. Reports of local appearance of the "Australian Take-All" are erroneous, Mann says. Seventeen-year locusts have not appeared, but farmers report having dug some up.

Seymour.—An increase of $10,692,770 in the taxable property of Jackson county, exclusive of the railroads, public utilities and other corporations assessed by the state tax board, is revealed by a report compiled by the county assessor, from figures provided by the township assessors.

Indianapolis.—Foreign investigators from England, Australia and Canada who came to Indianapolis with William Jennings Bryan as the guests of the Anti-Saloon league, expressed themselves as delighted with the good results they found in this state after more than a year of prohibition.

Greencastle.—Three-fourths of the members of the student body of DePauw university voted in favor of the immediate adoption of an honor system of examinations in the institutions at a mass meeting held here. The matter was settled by a referendum vote.

Columbus.—A gain of 84 per cent in the valuation of taxable property in Bartholomew county, outside the city of Columbus, is shown in a report by the county assessor. The total assessment outside Columbus is $29,886,790, which is a gain of $13,430,875 over the $15,955,915 assessment in 1918.

Shelbyville.—Shelbyville and Morristown, and the townships of Addison, Hanover, Hendricks, Union and Liberty, have received honor flags in recognition of the fact that each attained its quota in the fifth Liberty loan drive. Despite the fact that only five of the fourteen townships in the county reached their quotas the county exceeded its allotment.

Terre Haute.—William Mitch, secretary of District 11, United Mine Workers of America, has sent out notices to locals throughout the district, which includes the greater part of Indiana, calling a meeting of representatives of the 246 locals to be held in this city July 8. It will be the twenty-seventh consecutive and fourth biennial convention of the district.

Jeffersonville.—Fourteen prisoners arrived at the Indiana reformatory here recently. These included six from Allen county, four who tried to escape at Huntington a few days ago and two brothers from Jefferson county. The count has been increased to 649, which is the highest since the big transfers to the state prison and state farm were made a year ago following the fire of February, 1918.

Columbus.—Thirty-one cows owned by members of the Bartholomew County Cow Testers' association, produced more than forty pounds of butterfat in the third month of the existence of the association, as against 13 the first month and 17 the second, according to the report of F. R. Hyatt, tester. Of the 31, ten produced 50 pounds, and two produced more than 65 pounds. Mazurka Gem, a calf club heifer.

Michigan City.—Veterans of the world war met here and unanimously adopted resolutions opposing official participation by Fred C. Miller, mayor of Michigan City, in a patriotic celebration to be held July 4. In addition the returned soldiers, sailors and marines said that they would refuse to accept certificates of appreciation for their services in the conflict against Germany, if they are signed by the mayor, as had been planned.

Indianapolis.—Harry B. Smith, adjutant general of Indiana, announced that money for uniforms bought by members of the headquarters company, One Hundred and Thirty-ninth field artillery, can be had by calling at his office in the statehouse. The money available is to reimburse members of the company for money they spent in equipping themselves for military service and not since returned to them by the federal government.

Indianapolis.—Reports received by officials indicating that thousands of families in Indiana have been making dandelion wine and other beverages containing more than one-half of 1 per cent of alcohol, have caused a warning to be issued by Peter J. Kruyer, collector of internal revenue, that people must be careful or they will be violating the federal statute. He interprets the law to mean that anyone who manufactures an intoxicating beverage for sale or private use in Indiana may make himself liable to to prosecution.

Indianapolis.—The state board of tax commissioners has completed the assessing of all the property in Indiana over which it has assessing jurisdiction, and statistics compiled show that under the tax reform law enacted by the 1919 legislature the board has so increased valuations as to require corporations assessed by it formerly under the old tax law to pay taxes on nearly three times as great a total assessment as they are paying taxes on now. The board assessed at an increase of $520,998,763 the Indiana property of the railroad, interurban, telephone, telegraph, express, sleeping car, pipeline and transportation companies. These properties were assessed in 1918 at a total of $295,004,757. This year the board assessed them at $816,003,525.

Indianapolis.—The Indiana appellate court held that juvenile court laws relative to neglected children cannot be resorted to for the purpose of obtaining the possession of children to the end of having them adopted by those who really are in possession of the children. In so holding the court reversed the Howard circuit court.

South Bend.—St. Joseph county will have the largest yield of wheat this season that it ever had. Forty-nine thousand acres have been planted. The normal acreage is 30,000. Reports show wheat in all parts of the county to be in good condition.

WILSON SPEAKS IN U. S. CEMETERY

President Eulogizes American Soldier Dead; Says League Fruit of Sacrifice.

MUST PREVENT ANOTHER WAR

Views Foes of Society of Nations in Same Light as Those Who Opposed Union of North and South.

Paris, May 31.—The text of the Memorial address of President Wilson at Suresnes cemetery, is as follows:

"Mr. Ambassador, Ladies and Gentlemen, Fellow Countrymen:

"No one with a heart in his breast, no American, no lover of humanity, can stand in the presence of these graves without the most profound emotion. These men who lie here are men of a unique breed. Their like has not been seen since the days of crusades.

"Never before have men crossed the seas to a foreign land to fight for a cause of humanity which they did not pretend was particularly their own, but knew was the cause of humanity and of mankind. And when they came they found comrades for their courage and their devotion. They found armies of liberty already in the field—men who, though they had gone through three years of fiery trial, seemed only to be just discovering, not for a moment losing, the high temper of the great affair; men seasoned in the bloody service of liberty. Joining hands with these, the men of America gave the greatest of all gifts—the gift of life and the gift of spirit.

Praises Unflinching Courage.

"It will always be a treasured memory on the part of those who knew and loved these men that the testimony of everybody who saw them in the field of action was their unflinching courage, their ardor to the point of audacity, their full consciousness of the high cause they had come to serve and their constant vision of the issue.

"It is delightful to learn from those who saw these men fight and saw them waiting in the trenches for a summons to the fight that they had a touch of the high spirit of religion, that they knew they were exhibiting a spirit as well as a physical might, and those of us who know and love America know that they were discovering to the whole world the true spirit and devotion of their motherland. It was America who came in the person of these men and who will forever be grateful that she was so represented.

"And it is the more delightful to entertain these thoughts because we know that these men, though buried in a foreign land, are not buried in an alien soil. They are at home, sleeping with the spirits of those who thought the same thoughts and entertained the same aspirations. The noble women of Suresnes have given evidence of the loving sense with which they received these dead as their own, for they have cared for their graves, they have made it their interest, their loving interest, to see that there was no hour of neglect and that constantly through all the months that have gone by the mothers at home should know that there were mothers here who remembered and honored their dead.

"You have just heard in the beautiful letter from M. Clemenceau what I believe to be the real message of France to us on a day like this, a message of genuine comradeship, a message of genuine sympathy, and I have no doubt that if our British comrades were here they would speak in the same spirit and in the same language. For the beauty of this war is that it has brought a new partnership and a new comradeship and a new understanding into the field of the effort of the nation.

Lesson Taught by Sacrifices.

"But it would be no profit to us to eulogize these illustrious dead if we did not take to heart the lesson which they have taught us. They are dead; they have done their utmost to show their devotion to a great cause, and they have left us to woe to it that that cause shall not be betrayed, whether in war or peace. It is our privilege and our high duty to consecrate ourselves afresh on a day like this to the objects for which they fought.

"It is not necessary that I should rehearse to you what these objects were. These men did not come across the sea merely to defeat Germany and her associated powers in the war. They came to defeat forever the things for which the central powers stood, the sort of power they meant to assert in the world.

"So it is our duty to take and maintain the safeguards which will see to it that the mothers of America and the mothers of France and England and Italy and Belgium and all other suffering nations should never be called upon for this sacrifice again. This can be done. It must be done. And it will be done. The things that these men left us, though they did not in their counsels conceive it, is the great instrument which we have just erected in the league of nations.

"The league of nations is the covenant of government that these men shall not have died in vain. I like to think that the dust of those sons of America who were privileged to be buried in their mother country will mingle with the dust of the men who fought for the preservation of the Union, and that America might be united, these men have given their lives in order that the world might be united.

"Those men gave their lives in order to secure the freedom of a nation. These men have given theirs in order to secure the freedom of mankind, and I look forward to an age when it will be just as impossible to regret the results of their labor as it is now impossible to regret the results of the labor of those men who fought for the union of the states. I look for the time when every man who now puts his counsel against the united service of mankind under the league of nations will be just as ashamed of it as if he now regretted the union of the states.

Fight Final Battle for Right.

"You are aware, as I am aware, that the airs of an older day are beginning to stir again, that the standards of an old order are trying to assert themselves again. There is here and there an attempt to insert into the counsel of statesmen the old reckoning of selfishness and bargaining and national advantage which were the roots of this war, and any man who counsels these things advocates a renewal of the sacrifice which these men have made; for if this is not the final battle for right, there will be another that will be final.

"Let these gentlemen who suppose that it is possible for them to accomplish this return to an order of which we are ashamed and that we are ready to forget, realize they cannot accomplish it. The peoples of the world are in the saddle. Private counsels of statesmen cannot now and cannot hereafter determine the destinies of nations.

"If we are not the servants of the opinion of mankind, we are of all men the littlest, the most contemtible, the least gifted with vision. If we do not know courage, we cannot accomplish our purpose, and this age is an age which looks forward, not backward; which rejects the standard of national selfishness that once governed the counsels of nations and demands that they shall give way to a new order of things in which only the questions will be, 'Is it right?' 'Is it just?' 'Is it in the interest of mankind?'

"This is a challenge that no previous generation ever dared to give ear to. So many things have happened and they have happened so fast in the last four years that I do not think many of us realize what it is that has happened. Think how impossible it would have been to get a body of responsible statesmen seriously to entertain the idea of the organization of a league of nations four years ago!

"And think of the change that has taken place! I was told before I came to France that there would be confusion of counsels about this thing and I found unity of counsel. I was told that there would be opposition and I found union of action. I found the statesmen with whom I was about to deal united in the idea that we must have a league of nations; that we could not merely make a peace settlement and then leave it to make itself effectual.

Spirits Not Buried With Bodies.

"Ladies and gentlemen, we all believe, I hope, that the spirits of these men are not buried with their bones. Their spirits live. I hope—I believe—that their spirits are present with us at this hour. I hope that I feel the compulsion of their presence. I hope that I realize the significance of their presence. Think, soldiers of these comrades of yours who are gone. If they were here, what would they say? They would not remember what you are talking about today. They would remember America which they left with their high hope and purpose. And they would say:

"'Forget all the little circumstances of the day. Be ashamed of the jealousies that divide you. We command you in the name of those who, like ourselves, have died to bring the counsels of men together, and we remind you what America said she was born for. She was born, she said, to show mankind the way to liberty. She was born to make this great gift a common gift. She was born to show men the way of experience by which they might realize this gift and maintain it, and we adjure you in the name of all the great traditions of America to make yourselves soldiers now once for all in this common cause where we need wear no uniform except the uniform of the heart.'"

YANK BRINGS BRIDE AND SIX

Wife, Baby, Mother-in-Law, Father-in-Law, Sisters-in-Law, Come, Too.

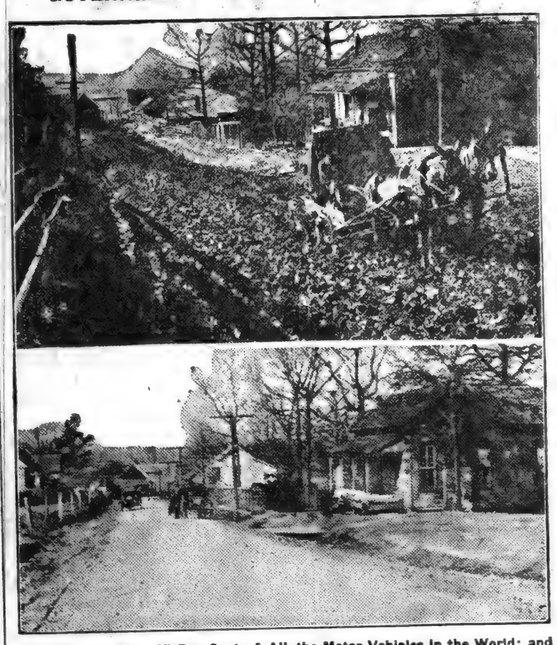
Brest, May 31.—American soldiers who escaped from the embrace of Mars but who fell before the darts of Cupid and married French girls are permitted by Uncle Sam to bring home their brides at the expense of the government.

Recently there appeared at the troop movement office a burly sergeant accompanied by a woman bearing a babe in arms, three other anxious-looking women and another elderly woman. An old gentleman also belonged to the party.

They were respectively the wife, baby, sisters-in-law, mother-in-law and father-in-law of the sergeant. He wanted them to return to America with him.

"You win," said the desk officer; "you must have been the greatest soldier of them all."

WHY CITY MEN SHOULD CO-OPERATE WITH GOVERNMENT PLAN OF BETTER HIGHWAYS



This Country Has 87 Per Cent of All the Motor Vehicles in the World; and It Has Eight Times As Many Dirt Roads (Top Picture) as Hard-Surfaced Roads (Bottom Picture).

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

If all the automobiles in this country stood evenly distributed over all the roads of this country there would be five motorcars to every two miles of road. And there are 2,547,334 miles of public road.

If every motorcar in the United States were loaded to its limit with people, half the population of the United States could be hauled at one load. And there are about 110,000,000 people in this country.

Getting down to boot heels and bitulithic—just to avoid the vulgar phrase of bedrock and brass tacks—about 87 per cent of all the motor vehicles in the world are on the roads of the United States. By estimate, there were 7,000,000 automobiles in the world on January 1, 1919. By actual count, 6,146,677 of these were in the United States. Those motor vehicles paid, in license and other fees, $51,477,416. And this is exclusive of the 107,000 motor vehicles manufactured for the government.

Each one of those six million one hundred and odd thousand motorcars, when it runs on unimproved roads, pays about twice as much for tires and about twice as much for gasoline as when it runs on surfaced roads. And there are about eight times as many miles of unimproved as of improved public roads in the United States. To be specific, the public roads in the United States measure 2,457,334 miles, of which only 296,290 miles, or about 12 per cent, are surfaced. The rest are earth roads.

Half Billion for Roads.

Are the owners of those six million and odd automobiles interested in the federal aid road-building program for 1919? It is the most stupendous road-building program in the history of the world.

Expenditures for road construction this year are likely to reach $500,000,000, according to the estimates of the United States department of agriculture, the government agency charged with the administration of the federal aid road act. Practically all states are planning a continuous system of connecting highways throughout each state, and there is a more general disposition than was ever manifested before toward co-operation among neighboring states so that improved roads will not terminate at state lines.

Congress, shortly before adjournment, made an extra appropriation of $209,000,000 in the post office appropriation bill to meet the federal part of the program. Officials of the bureau of public roads, United States department of agriculture, point out that this is the largest appropriation ever made by any government for a similar purpose, and that it will enable the federal and state governments to carry on a road-building program of a magnitude never approached in the history of the world. This work, it is estimated, will employ more than 100,000 men in active road work, in addition to the men engaged in the production and furnishing of road-building materials. It affords one of the large opportunities for profitable employment for returned soldiers and sailors.

Automobile Owners and Road Bonds.

The program is a continuing one. The recent federal appropriation is for three years. State, county and local funds will come largely from bond issues. And there is where the 6,000,000 automobile owners ought to shine with a tremendous radiance.

Both sensible selfishness and plain duty call upon the automobile owner to vote for road bonds. His tire and fuel costs, as before mentioned, are cut in half by good roads. More important still, if he be a city man, as a very large proportion of automobile owners are, it brings what he eats to his door at less cost. Good roads have always meant something in the way of reducing living costs, but they mean more now that the motortruck has come to stay—and to expand. One function of the motortruck is to relieve congestion in the neighborhood of large cities—a congestion that has increased during the past several years, and that, if it continues, will tend to run up the cost of living. Those are a few of the main reasons why, from the standpoint of self-interest, the city automobile owner should vote for road-bond issues.

Good Roads as Military Measure.

From the standpoint of duty, the military element probably takes first place. When it became necessary two years ago to concentrate great numbers of men in cantonments, it was found that the roadways connecting the cantonments with the surrounding cities were in no sense adequate. For the most part new roads had to be constructed. There is always the possibility of another such emergency, and the only means of insuring facile communication is by the construction of surfaced roads over which motortrucks can operate.

While the security of the nation in such an emergency might depend upon good roads for military uses, their service to the nation would not be confined to military matters. For a great portion of the time during the past two years 90 per cent of the railroad capacity of the country was required for military purposes. The transportation of food, fuel and the like had to be accomplished largely by means other than rail. Some hardships were entailed. The motortruck, however, over such roads as were passable, rendered excellent service. When the present road-building program is carried out and the total of improved roads is several times larger than at present, the service possibilities of the motortruck will be correspondingly increased and the safety of the nation and the comfort of the people more fully insured.

WAYS TO CONTROL HOG LICE

Complete Eradication Is Best Secured by Use of Dipping Vats—Some Other Methods.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Lice on hogs can be controlled in various ways, but complete eradication is best secured by the use of dipping vats, experiments conducted by the United States department of agriculture show.

Medicated hog wallows and rubbing posts, the experiments showed, kept the number of parasites reduced so that they caused little or no damage, but neither of these methods destroyed all the lice. Crude petroleum was used on the rubbing posts and the wallows were medicated with coal-tar creosote dips, pine tar, crude petroleum, and bland oils. Crude petroleum and coal-tar creosote dips proved to be more effective when applied from an ordinary sprinkling can than when used in wallows or on rubbing posts.

GENERAL FARM NOTES

Start a fight against the weeds early in the season.

A young weed is easier to overcome than an old, tough one.

Sweet clover must be regarded largely as a substitute for red clover.

Sweet clover is best cut for hay early in June, before any buds appear.

Sweet corn and peas are products that should be grown for canning and drying.

Tomatoes are of high food value because they can be canned and preserved so readily.

* * *

Pumpkins and squashes can be grown with so little effort that they may be considered in the calculations.

WOLVES of the SEA

We emerged through the companion, and I stepped aside as the others rushed by. There was no shout, no cheer, the fellows seeming to realize the desperate nature of their work, and the importance of surprise. They were outnumbered five to one, and their only hope of success lay in rendering their opponents helpless before they could rally to a defense. All the pent-up hate of years was in their hearts, blazed madly in their eyes; they were tigers leaping at the throat of their prey, yet sane enough to comprehend even in their blood-rage that they must act together. It was over so quickly I scarcely saw it all. My eyes swept from group to group—the four toiling at the cover of the main hatch; the fellows racing toward the forecastle; and Watkins' squad driving straight into the grouped watch beyond the foremast. It was smartly done; Watkins had taken no cutlass, but went in with both fists, asking no questions, but battering right and left, his men surging after, with steel blades flaming in the sunlight. The astounded watch, cursing and fighting grimly, held for a moment, and then went staggering back against the port rail, unable to stem the rush, and roaring for mercy. I had view of Carlson dropping recklessly down the forecastle scuttle, and then sprang forward myself to give a hand to the four wrestling with the main hatch. Together we dragged it into position, forcing relentlessly back as we did so, a dozen struggling figures frantically endeavoring to reach the deck. Shots were fired, the bullets whistling through the opening, the flare lighting up the black depths below, revealing vaguely a mass of frantic men staring up, and cursing us fiercely in a dozen languages; but, in spite of them, we clamped the hatch down tight, and locked it securely into place with an iron bar.

Watkins needed no help; he had his party rounded up. To my orders they were driven into the cook's galley and a guard stationed at the door. Then I turned to the more serious work confronting me in the forecastle. We must have men enough to sail the bark, and if I was to command them, I must first of all prove my courage and enforce authority. The whole success of our effort depended on this.

"What's going on below?" I asked.

"Cursin' mostly," answered Carter, peering down through a slight uplifting of the scuttle. "They don't just know what's happening yet, but the big nigger seems ter be raisin' hell. Carlson is a holdin' him back with his cutlass."

"Open up and let me down."

I fell, rather than clambered along the rungs of the ladder, coming to my feet on deck in the midst of a group of angry men. The light was so poor I could scarcely see their faces; a babel of voices greeted me, and more than one hand gripped me fiercely as the excited owner yelped a demand to know what in hell we were up to. I roughly cleared a space, aided by Carlson's cutlass, and fronted them. Towering above them all, his black apelike face, distorted with rage, I distinguished the giant Cochose, his immense hands grasping a wooden bar ripped from a bunk. Plainly enough he was the leader. If I was to rule, this black brute must be conquered at the very start, conquered by my own hands, and in the presence of his mates.

"Stand back there lads," I said sternly. "I'll explain all that has happened presently, but first I am going to lick that black within an inch of his life. Step out of there, Cochose."

He came grinning widely, balancing the heavy club.

"You mean me, sah? You all think yer kin lick me?"

"Yes, I think so; I'll try it anyway. Here Carlson, take this pistol and sheath knife. If anyone interferes shoot him. All I ask is fair play. Drop that club, Cochose, and throw away your knife. You and I will fight this out with bare hands."

His dull brain worked slowly, and he stared at me, his eyes ugly. His silence and lack of response, awoke a growl from the impatient circle of men behind. One fellow kicked the club out of his hand contemptuously, and another plucked the knife from his belt.

"You big skulker," the latter said, with an oath of derision, "go on, and fight!"

"What for Ah fight this white man? Ah don't even know who he is."

"Then I'll tell you. Estada is dead; Manuel is a prisoner. I'm in command of this bark. You are a big, boasting cur! I heard what you said when I came down, and now I'll make you prove it."

I took two steps forward, my advance so swift and unexpected the big negro had not even time to throw up an arm in defense. With open hand I struck him squarely across the face.

CHAPTER XXI.

In Full Possession.

A roar of delight went up. I knew sailors and felt they would welcome a fight like this and their immediate sympathy would be with me for starting it. More than that, this black bully, ruling over them by brute force, could be no favorite. They might fear him, but with that fear would be mingled hate, and a delight in his downfall.

In that instant, although I cannot recall removing watchful eyes from the negro's face, I received an impression of my surroundings never to be erased from memory—the gloomy interior, the deck, foul, littered with sea boots, and discarded clothing, and the great beams overhead blackened by smoke. The rays of the swinging slush lantern barely illuminated the central space, the rows of bunks beyond remaining mere shadows, yet this dim, yellowish light, fell full upon the excited half circle of men who were roaring about the negro. They were a rough, wild lot, ranging in color from the intense black of Central Africa to the blond of Scandinavia, half naked some, their voices mingling in a dozen tongues, their eyes gleaming with savagery.

I know not whether Cochose lunged forward of his own volition, or was pressed on from behind, yet suddenly he was within reach of me, and the battle was on, his object evidently being to crush me in his giant grip, mine to oppose science to strength, and avoid his bear-hug. We swayed back and forth to the sharp pitching of the ship. Then he sprang straight at me determined to smash me to the deck by the very power of his onslaught. But I side-stepped him, getting in two swift blows, which rocked his head, and tore open one cheek, from which blood trickled. Yet he kept his feet, blindly gripping for me.

I evaded his clutch by leaping aside, but the space was far too small to permit these tactics to carry long, and finally he had me. Yet, even as he seemingly crushed the very breath out of me, his giant strength met with a resistance which increased his fury. Already the fellow had lost his head, but I fought coolly, putting my skill against brute force, every wrestler's trick I knew flashing into my brain. Breathlessly, my flesh scraped and bruised, I wriggled partly free, and tripped him, his great body striking the deck with a thud. I fell with him, dragged down by his desperate grip, but was first upon my feet, saluted by a roar of delight from the lips of those crowding about us. As he staggered up also, I struck him again, a blow which would have ended the game, had not my foot slipped on the reeling deck. As it was it drove him to his knees, groggy, and with one eye half closed, yet with strength enough left to regain his feet as soon as I. This time he charged me like a wild bull, froth whitening his lips, scarcely appearing human in the yellow light. In mad rage he forgot all caution, his one thought to reach me with his hands, and throttle me into lifeless pulp. I fought him back, driving blow on blow through his guard, side-stepping his mad rushes, landing again and again on his body. Twice I got in over his heart, and at last, found the chance I sought, and sent a right jab straight to the chin. All the force of one hundred and eighty pounds was behind the clenched fist, and the negro went down as though floored by a poleax. Once weakly he endeavored to rise, but this time I used my left, and he never stirred again, lying there with no sign of life except the quivering of the huge body. Assured that he was down and out, I stood above him, gazing into the ring of excited faces.

"That's one attended to," I said shortly. "Now is there any more of you who would like to fight this out?"

There was no answer although the ring widened under the threat of my eyes, and I met sullen faces here and there. I was in no mood to take chances.

"Carlson," I said, "you know all these men. Pick out those you can trust, and have them stand over there to the right. Call them out by name; be lively now."

They stepped forth eagerly enough, and ranged themselves before the bunks, the faces mostly those of northern Europe, although a negro or two was among them. As the Swede ceased calling, six or seven yet remained clustered in front of me, a motley lot, one of them an Indian, the others mostly half-breeds. I glanced from face to face inquiringly.

"How about it, you?" I asked. "Are there any more of you fellows who take a chance with us? This is my last offer."

"What's the game?" asked a sullen voice in English, and a bearded fellow, burned black, pushed his way to the front. "I used ter be Scotch; now I don't know what I am. One flag is as good as another ter me—only I want to know what sorter game I'm playin' in. Who are yer? An' whar'd yer cum from?"

"I am an English seaman," I answered shortly, "and how I came aboard makes no difference. Right now I am the only navigator on the Namur. Estada is dead—knifed last night by one of the buccaneers. Manuel Estevan had a hand in the business, and he's safely locked in a stateroom aft. Captain Sanchez is wounded and helpless, and those cut-throats amidships are battened down below hatches. LeVere and I are the officers left, and we control the deck."

"Yer mean those fellers were aimin' ter take the ship?"

"Exactly that; now where are you lads? With Manuel and his bunch of pirates? Or with us?"

"What er yer going ter do with us, an' this ship? That's the fu'st question."

I had not decided that even in my own mind, but the answer came promptly enough.

"I am going to leave that to the crew. As soon as we have all secure, I'll have every man on deck, and then we'll talk it over. That's fair enough isn't it?"

"It looks fair. Come on, mates; I'm fer the Englishman."

Only one followed him, however, a sheep-faced boy; the others remained sullen and defiant. I had no further time to waste in explanations. I glanced up at Carter's face framed in the scuttle hole.

"Carter, pass these men up and take them forward with the others. Turn them over to Watkins. Then come back here, and report to me."

They went up the ladder one by one, and disappeared onto the deck above. Carlson and I watched the others until Carter stuck his head once again through the opening.

"All safe, sir—they was like lambs."

"Very well; stand by to help. Now you lads, lift this black and shove him up to where they can get hold above."

They hoisted the unconscious form up the ladder and forced it through the hole onto the deck. At my stern command they crawled forth into the sunlight. There they picked up Cochose and carried him aft.

I went to the main hatch, and had the cover slipped to one side, the armed sailors gathering close about the edge, as I peered down. It was a scene of pandemonium, revealed in the yellow flame of slush lanterns, a group of white faces showing clearly, as the prisoners below struggled forward, gesticulating and shouting. Ignoring their mad roaring, and the threat of leveled guns, I stared down at the infuriated faces, until the clamor ceased sufficiently to let my voice be heard.

"What are you men trying to do, frighten me? You might as well stop that. This opening is lined with guns, and if one of you fire a shot we'll pour lead into you. More than that; if you attempt to climb out there is a brass carronade trained on the hatch. So listen! We are in control of the ship and mean to keep it. The old officers are either dead or prisoners. What we do with you will depend on your actions, but we're ready to kill if necessary. If you keep quiet down there, and obey orders, you'll be fed, and treated decently enough. Pass up your arms."

There was no movement, only a glare of hostile eyes, an indistinguishable growl of voices.

"Kneel down, lads and cover those fellows," I ordered sternly drawing my own pistol. "Now you below there, this is my last word. I'll count ten, and you'll either pass up those weapons or we'll pour our fire into you. Take aim, boys."

There was a moment of deathly silence, except for my counting. One man uttered a curse, and the jam of figures at the foot of the ladder endeavored to work back out of range, yet, before I had spoken the word eight, guns were held aloft, and poked up within reach, and at this sign of surrender even the most desperate lost heart and joined the more cowardly. It was a strange collection of weapons stacked on the deck—guns, cutlasses, knives and pistols of every description. Probably all had not been delivered, yet I felt no further fear of the few pieces remaining hidden.

"That's all, is it? Very well—now take care of this big nigger we're sending down; no, he is not dead, only stunned. Now stand aside while a few of your friends join you, they'll tell you what's up. Make room there."

We passed the forecastle scum down one by one. Ignoring the indignant roar of voices which greeted my order, I watched the men shift the heavy hatch cover into place, and then permitted my eyes to survey the deck, as I hastily considered our next action.

Rich Rhine Country.

Strange to say, the fine grapes are grown on the eastern slopes of the Rhine and the choicest varieties, as Johannisburger and Steinberger, are produced higher up the river, south of the Rhine province. It is, nevertheless, the land of the vine, especially the Moselle valley. The substantial claim of the province is its mineral wealth.

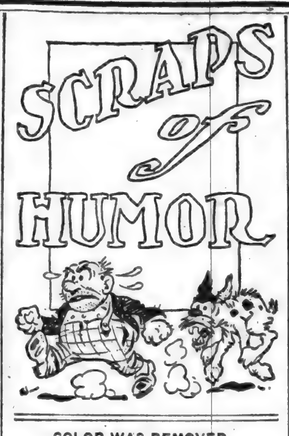
SCRAPS of HUMOR



COLOR WAS REMOVED.

Mr. Jones keeps pigeons, and Mr. Brown, next door, tries to keep pigeons—quite a different state of affairs. Mr. Brown is constantly losing birds, while Mr. Jones is constantly suspected of finding them. The other morning Mr. Brown with a smile and a sixpence, approached the youthful son and heir of Mr. Jones.

"Willie," began Brown, holding up the coin, "did daddy find a bird yesterday?"

"And was it a blue bird with some white feathers in its wing?"

"Dunno," responded Willie, pocketing the sixpence. "You can't tell their color when they're in a pie!"—London Tit-Bits.

The Reason.

"John, you really need a new suit of clothes."

"Do you think so?"

"I do. The one you're wearing now is so shabby you won't be fit to be seen with me when I get into the new outfit I've just ordered."

EXPLAINED.

"I tell every girl I meet she is the only girl I ever loved."

"How can you do it?"

"Well, why not? They're only girls."

Sure Enough.

The butcher in the slaughter house
Put on his apron white,
And chuckled to his fellow men:
"I'm dressed to kill, all right."

His Theory.

"How do you suppose Henry VIII looked on the marrying habit?"

"That a man could stand it, but it made a woman lose her head."

Self-Evident.

"Does the patient snore in his sleep?"

"Well, I've never noticed him snoring at any other time."

Hard Case.

"Yonder man leads a hard life."

"In what way?"

"He is always itching for office and has to scratch for a living."

FOR LEISURE MOMENTS.

"A successful man must study the faults of others."

"Well, I don't know that it will make a man successful, but it ought to be a delightful study."

Too Much to Follow.

This world is but a fleeting show;
A circus with at least three rings.
You stare and twist and yet you know
You're missing lots of bully things.

Personally Conducted Tempest.

"I understand that your recent speech aroused a storm of criticism."

"Yes," replied Senator Sorghum, complacently; "it sounded like some storm, didn't it? I was behind the scenes supervising the sheet-iron thunder and the artificial lightning myself."

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

LESSON FOR JUNE 8

OBEDIENCE.

LESSON TEXTS—Gen. 12:1-4; John 14: 21-24; Matt. 7:16-29.

GOLDEN TEXT—Ye are my friends, if ye do whatsoever I command you.—John 15:14.

ADDITIONAL MATERIAL—Deut. 4:1-10; I Sam. 15:22, 23; Matt. 5:19; Acts 4:19, 20; I John 3:16-24.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Showing Our Love to God by Obedience.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Abraham's Obedience and Its Rewards.

INTERMEDIATE TOPIC—When to Obey and How.

SENIOR AND ADULT TOPIC—Obedience a Test of Discipleship.

I. A Notable Example of Obedience (Gen. 12:1-4).

At the command of God Abraham went out not knowing whither he went (Heb. 11:8). His was not the obedience of convenience or prudence. To separate from home and kindred and take up the life of a pilgrim was not easy. Abraham did not stop to ask why, or what he would get out of it. The obedience that asks why is not obedience at all.

II. The Motive of Obedience (John 14:21-24).

The grand incentive of obedience is love to God. The obedience that is the result of fear or the hope of reward is not true obedience, therefore has not the approval of God. Only the child who reverences his father and affectionately strives to obey him enjoys his loving favor. The obedience which springs out of a heart of love issues in a life of joy and friendship with God (John 15:10-14).

III. The Solemn Obligation of Obedience (Matt. 7:16-29).

1. Warnings against false prophets (vv. 15-20).

(1) Their real existence. Ever since God has had a people false prophets and teachers have appeared among them. This need not surprise us, for Christ predicted that such should be the case.

(2) Their nature (v. 15). (a) Hypocritical. The devil does his most successful work by masquerading as an angel of light (II Cor. 7:14, 15). His ministers appear in this way and turn people from the narrow to the broad way. (b) This is suggested by their being "ravening wolves." It is when the wolf is in sheep's clothing that he does his most destructive work. The enemies of Christ posing as his ministers are most destructive.

(3) The unfailing test (vv. 16-18). Their fruits. If one gives sufficient time for development the fruit can be discerned. Every tree bears its own kind of fruit. Nature is inexorable in her law as to this. You may search the universe in vain for an exception. It is equally true in the spiritual world. There is a vital connection between the faith of a heart and the fruit of a life. That which comes out in the conduct was first in the heart. A right heart is essential to right conduct. Give the false teachers sufficient time and observe closely and you will find that their lives will prove the teaching.

(4) Their end (v. 19). All false teachers shall finally be punished by being cast into the fire. Although God bears long he will see to it that this wickedness does not go on forever.

2. The dangers of empty profession (vv. 21-23).

Calling Christ "Lord" will not answer for disobedience to his will. One may even be a Sunday school teacher or preacher, and even perform many mighty works, as casting out devils and healing the sick and yet hear the awful declaration of Jesus Christ, "I never knew you," "depart from me."

3. The one and only safe way (vv. 24-29).

(1) Hear the sayings of Christ. To do this, one must prayerfully attend to reading the Word of God and meditate upon the same.

(2) Do what Christ commands. Hearing and doing the teachings of Christ is building upon solid rock. Such building can never be destroyed by flood and storm. Hearing and not doing Christ's sayings is building upon the sand which in time of the storm of God's wrath and judgment will be utterly destroyed. Obedience must follow hearing Christ.

The Need of God.

People are asking in these days of upheaval and chaos, "What is wrong with the world." It needs God; it needs the religion of Jesus Christ and it needs that religion practically embodied in the lives of men. We see it in the lives of these men of the gospel. We need men like that multiplied many-fold in every church. We need men like that multiplied ten thousandfold in our land.

Rejoice!

O God, animate us to cheerfulness! May we have a joyful sense of our blessings, learn to look on the bright circumstances of our lot, and maintain a perpetual contentedness.—Channing.

Every Want Supplied.

Precious to us, O Lord, is the death of thy saints, which makes us heirs of so great a wealth; which leaves us furnished with so great variety of examples, that every want is abundantly supplied.—John Austin.

PRACTICED 42 YEARS

Eminent Physician Says, "Pepgen Not Only Relieved Me but Helped Many of My Patients."

Dr. John Q. Adams, 506 E. Fifth street, Dayton, Ohio, formerly professor of chemistry at the Cincinnati, Ohio, College of Medicine and Surgery, who has practiced medicine for forty-two years, and who is one of the best physicians in America, says:

Dr. John Adams.

"If you have trouble with your stomach, kidneys, liver or nerves I advise you to take Pepgen. It is a splendid tonic. Pepgen not only relieved me but it has helped many of my patients. A short time ago I was in a badly run-down condition. Recent epidemics kept me, like other physicians, going day and night. I needed something to build up my nerves and strengthen me. I took Pepgen. In a short while I felt like a different man. I was so pleased with the tonic that I began prescribing it. In every case the result has been satisfactory."

Pepgen may be obtained at any first-class drug store.—Adv.

The New Modesty.

"The new modesty," said Clarence Underwood, the magazine illustrator, "has a frank quality. It is born of athletic beauty. The old modesty was merely a desire to conceal ugliness.

"A beautiful girl in a white bathing dress came out of the water at Palm Beach the other day and advanced over the sand to her mother.

"'Dear me!' the mother whispered. 'You shouldn't have got white, darling. That suit is almost transparent.'

"The girl smiled calmly.

"'Don't worry,' she said, 'I'm not deformed.'"—Detroit Free Press.

"FAKE" ASPIRIN WAS TALCUM

Therefore Insist Upon Genuine "Bayer Tablets of Aspirin"

BAYER

Millions of fraudulent Aspirin Tablets were sold by a Brooklyn manufacturer which later proved to be composed mainly of Talcum Powder. "Bayer Tablets of Aspirin" the true, genuine, American made and American owned Tablets are marked with the safety "Bayer Cross."

Ask for and then insist upon "Bayer Tablets of Aspirin" and always buy them in the original Bayer package which contains proper directions and dosage.

Aspirin is the trade mark of Bayer Manufacture of Monoaceticacidester of Salicylicacid.

That Useful Guardhouse.

"Them gua'd houses at the trainin' camps is shuah doin' a gran' work, jes' like the Red Cross," observed Cindy, the colored laundress. "They saved mah boy Duke's life."

"How is that, Cindy?" queried her employer.

"I dunno how they done it. Only he wrote me a postal card sayin' if he hadn't got ten days in one of 'em he'd a' been a corp."

Cuticura Soap for the Complexion. Nothing better than Cuticura Soap daily and Ointment now and then as needed to make the complexion clear, scalp clean and hands soft and white. Add to this the fascinating, fragrant Cuticura Talcum and you have the Cuticura Toilet Trio.—Adv.

Protest From the Target.

The Manager—There'll be a big crowd today. The soldiers and sailors are to be admitted free.

The Umpire—Aw, nix, nix! Have a heart. Let in the gobs, but keep out the doughboys. Those guys are the champion grenade throwers of the army, and every one'll have a pop bottle.

A sluggish liver impedes Nature's functions. Wright's Indian Vegetable Pills rouse the liver and stimulate the bowels to function regularly.—adv.

Destructiveness.

"See that boy?"

"Yes."

"Very destructive."

"How so?"

"Wears a suit of clothes out first day he gets them."

"Impossible!"

"Well, he does. He wouldn't go naked, would he?"

If you trust to luck for anything you'll be lucky if you get it.

HOW CLEOPATRA'S NEEDLE WAS SAVED

New Process Invented to Preserve Surface of Monolith in Central Park.

HIEROGLYPHS OBLITERATED.

Rigors of Western Climate Caused Khedive's Gift to Disintegrate. Painting Ancient Obelisk With Special Preparation Stayed Decay—Ruined Portions Restored.

New Yorkers awoke one morning to find in their breakfast headlines the news that a zealous park employee had discovered signs of disintegration on the surface of the city's most treasured antique—Cleopatra's Needle. Photographs revealed that the monolith was peeling, large pieces of sandstone having fallen from the tall shaft, carrying with them part of the prized hieroglyphs.

London's twin sister of Cleopatra's Needle was reported as resting comfortably and enduringly on the banks of the Thames, and the rival port wondered whether a preparation would be found to stay the attacks of their harsher climate.

Such a preparation was soon forthcoming. A new paint combination as a preservative for stone was invented by Dr. William Kuckro, chemist of the Metropolitan Museum of Art. Many years previous coating with paraffin had been tried, but the application had not entirely accomplished its purpose. The new painting process, however, proved a success. Disintegration was halted and the damaged parts restored. New York breathed easily again.

THE OBELISK.

The Obelisk was presented to the City of New York by the Khedive of Egypt. Lieutenant Commander Gorringe, U S N., after a three years' effort obtained possession of it and moved it to its present position, at an expense of nearly $100,000. It was finally swung into position at noon, January 22, 1881.

The height of this monument, from base to tip, is 69 feet, 2 inches. The measurement of the base, square through its axis, is 7 feet, 8½ inches. The entire weight of the monolith is 219¼ tons.

Since it was quarried near the torrid zone, it has traversed the entire length of Egypt, most of that of the Mediterranean Sea, and the width of the Atlantic Ocean—a distance of 6,400 miles—proving itself a first rate traveler for one whose age has exceeded thirty-five centuries. In the course of its existence it has seen Pharaoh and his host going to their destruction in the Red Sea; Shishak marching to the Conquest of Jerusalem; Cambyses desolating the land; Herodotus, Plato and other Greek students engaged in pursuit of Egyptian lore; Alexander the Great on his victorious expedition through the land of Goshen; six and a half centuries of Roman sovereignty and Christian struggle at Alexandria; all the long line of Moslem rulers since Caliph Omar; and now, leaving altogether its native land, it stands looking upon the million dwellers in this metropolis, whose site was unknown to the Eastern world at a time when the Obelisk had been in existence for two thousand years.

PAINT PROTECTION AND ITS ECONOMY.

The preservation of structural materials, which may be obtained through the application of paint, constitutes a most vital means of furthering the conservation of our natural resources. It is, moreover, the most economical method of sustaining the appearance and general upkeep of any community.

A structure coated with sheets of India rubber would not be as well protected from decay as a structure coated with a good oil paint. This is due to the fact that a sheet of rubber is not so durable or as waterproof as a thin dried film of paint. The latter material when applied dries to a continuous elastic film containing finely divided particles of metallic, wear resisting pigments. A square foot of such a film upon a wooden surface costs less than a penny, yet it will beautify and protect a dollar's worth of surface for many years. This is a low rate of insurance.

Dwellings, barns, outbuildings, sheds, posts, fences, stock enclosures, wagons, implements, windmills and other structures, whether of wood, iron or cement, should be preserved, through the use of paint, from rapid decay. High grade paint may be used successfully for all such purposes. Colored paints will be found the most serviceable, the coloring matter in the paint adding from two to three years to the life of the coating.

PAINT AS AN ASSET.

Bankers Say They Lend More Money on Property When Buildings Are Well Painted.

AN INDICATION OF THRIFT.

One Concern Advances 25 Per Cent. More If Repainting Is Done Every Five Years.

Does it pay to paint carefully farm buildings? Does it add to the selling value of a farm when buildings are properly kept up and regularly painted? A careful inquiry of a number of leading bankers in the Mississippi valley, including such states as Iowa, Illinois, Michigan, Ohio, Indiana and Missouri, reveals the fact that in nearly every case the bankers did not hesitate to say that they would lend all the way from 5 to 50 per cent. more on land where farm buildings were well painted and kept in good condition. They maintain that well kept-up and well painted buildings and fences are an indication of thrift and that the thrifty farmer is a good client, and to him money can be safely loaned. An average of the returns from these bankers shows that the increased loan value because of painted buildings is around 22 per cent.

Some of these bankers make interesting comment. A Michigan concern says that, while not especially prepared to advise definitely in response to this inquiry, the officers would loan more money on farms where buildings were painted than where they were not so treated. This bank also finds that where houses, barns and fences are well taken care of the farm is a profitable proposition, and bankers in general consider the farmer a good client. Another Michigan bank says "farm buildings out of repair and needing paint indicate that the owner is slow pay." Such farms are rated at about one-third of the assessed value for loans. Where the farm buildings are in good shape the rating is one-half. The president of a middle western bank says that when real estate loans are considered, painted buildings are always taken into consideration in making an estimate. The general appearance of the property surrounding the house and barn and also the fields and fences would be carefully observed. He further says that he has no hesitancy in saying that he would absolutely refuse a loan on farms where the buildings were not kept up and well painted. In his judgment, unpainted farm buildings would reduce the loan value at least 25 per cent.

A Minnesota banker says that he is much more willing to loan money where the buildings are well painted. In his particular case he believes that he would loan 20 per cent. more than if the buildings were not properly taken care of. A farmer who will keep his buildings painted takes a much deeper interest in his work than one who does not. Another Minnesota bank says that well painted buildings have resulted in securing from his bank sometimes as high as 25 per cent. more money than where the buildings are not painted. An Ohio concern says that it will loan 25 per cent. more money on a well kept farm where buildings are painted at least once every five years. A southern Illinois bank says that it has no fixed rule about this, but it does make a decided difference when owners of farm lands apply for loans. If the buildings are well painted and thus well preserved the loan rate would not only be cheaper, but the amount of money borrowed would be larger. A northern Illinois bank does not hesitate to say that it would loan fully 50 per cent. more on a farm where buildings were well painted and in good order, than where they were not. The vice president, who answers the inquiry, goes on to say: "There probably are many farmers good financially and morally who permit their buildings to remain unpainted, but as a rule the most substantial people who live in the country keep their buildings well painted."

An Iowa bank, through its vice president, states that it would make a difference of at least 25 per cent. in favor of the farm with painted buildings. Another Iowa concern says that it would make a difference of at least 20 per cent.

All this being true, it is perfectly evident that it is a good business proposition to keep the farm buildings well painted. They not only look better and are more pleasing to the owner, but the farm would sell to better advantage, the loan value of the property would be greatly increased and the buildings themselves would last much longer and need less repair.—The American Agriculturist.

PAINT AND ILLITERACY.

Curious Fact Comes to Light That Localities Least Using Books Avoid Paint Also.

Washington, D. C.—A curious fact has been brought to light by the Educational Bureau and the Bureau of Industrial Research here. It is that in the states where illiteracy is most prevalent paint is least used. The paint referred to is the common or bara variety, of course, for the backwoods countries have no need for the finer pigments or facial adornments. It is true, though, that in the sections of all states where white illiteracy is highest painted homes are rare and painted outbuildings and barns are actically unknown. Probably the erates do not use paint on their lings because they do not understand its value as a preservative.

Notice To Bee Keepers

Almost everywhere throughout Indiana, with few exceptions, bees are in a starving condition right now. Many colonies are dying, some are already dead, the stores are entirly exhausted, colonies are swarming out, from lack of food, and the honey crop is seriously threatened. The only remedy is immediate feeding of all colonies short of stores. Tell your bee keepers to examine their bees at once and to feed all colonies that have less two frames of honey in the hive. If they have combs of honey left over from last year, or honey in sections from the previous year they can use them to good advantage. In the absence of honey tell them to make a syrup of two parts of sugar to one of water and feed immediately, ten or fifteen pounds to the colony. A good way to feed is to punch a dozen small holes in any friction top pail, (such as syrup or honey pails, which can be secured second hand from almost any grocery store) to fill the can with syrup and invert directly on top of the frames in an empty super or hive body. The feed had better be given at night fall or evening to avoid robbing. The prospects for clover flow are excellent and it would be the poorest economy to allow the bees to starve right on the verge of the honey-flow. The next two weeks will determine the fate of the colonies and will have a great influence on the honey crop of the year. Kindly get this warning to your bee keepers at once.

WHY HESITATE?

Saving money is very much like getting married, easier after you have made the start than you thought it would be. Many men hesitate to marry because they fear their ability to live up to the expectations of some good woman, and in many cases their fears are well grounded. So, too, many men and women earning fair incomes delay starting a savings account, fearing they may not be able to keep it up regularly, when the very truth is, that the start is the very strongest possible incentive to continue and once the account is opened it is surprising how it grows, and how much joy there is in going without many things you formerly thought you really must have in order to see that bank account grow.

F. M. Monroe's Entertain

Monday was a most pleasant day in the F. M. Monroe home, because of the fact that their two sons, Stanley and Vernie had returned home from overseas safely, and a fine dinner was served in honor of the boys in which their families participated besides M. H. Andress wife and daughter, William Miller and wife, Ad Herrick and wife, Mrs. H. G. Hursh, Mrs. C. G. Lucas and Ye editor and wife. Many interesting incidents of their experiences in crossing the ocean and while in France and on the battle lines, were cited by the boys as they visited about the day. Stanley had seen service, while Vernie was about to be put into the lines. The boys related that they did not see anyone they knew while away, (nearly 14 months) and at times they became homesick because of the lack of receiving mail from home, due to the mail service being so congested. While we are all glad that the boys are home, they do not care to repeat their experiences, and now that they are home they are glad that they have seen so much of the world.

Dies From Severe Fall

Dr. Sheffer was called to Bucyrus, Ohio, Saturday, by the family of S. S. Sheffer. Mr. Sheffer had fallen down stairs Friday evening and was rendered unconscious, dying on Sunday at 1:30 o'clock. Funeral was held Tuesday of this week. Through a misinterpretation of the telegram the St. Joe relatives were not in attendance. Mr. Sheffer was engaged in the job printing business and was in his usual health, having attended lodge that same night of the accident. Dr. Sheffer, upon his return home stated the family was accustomed to having the hall light upstairs burn all night and that they concluded that during the warm nights they would not use it. Mr. Sheffer had an occasion to get up and in leaving the bedroom he stepped into the stairway, falling to the bottom. He never regaining consciousness.

Editor News:

We are enclosing one year's subscription to you. The News is the most faithful of all our eastern friends, as it comes every week rain or shine.

We had quite a racket at our home yesterday, but it ended all right. We were just passing our 73 milestone and Mrs. Hannen had invited in some of our old neighbors to take dinner with us, and the first thing we knew we were surrounded and had to surrender, but all seemed to enjoy themselves and departed with a God bless you etc., etc.

We went to Spokane on Decoration and took part with our G. A. R. Post, which is Sedwic No. 8 Despite lowering skies and threatening rain also a cold wind, crowds lined the entire line of march to the armory, a majority attending memorial service held there. The parade was headed by 21st. U. S. Infantry band and 150 men from Ft. Wright, 3rd. Washington National Guards, behind the soldiers of the present came the veterans of the Civil War, stepping briskly all be in many a case with a limp and a halt, to the shrill and stirring music of their own fife and drum corps. Marching just ahead of the veterans of the G. A. R. were a dozen sons of veterans in 4 autos and several vets who did not feel equal to the long march. After them came the women of the W. R. C., 60 strong marching in columns of four, carrying flags. Women of the G. A. R. and daughters of the G. A. R. about 30 each, the latter dressed in white, followed by forty daughters of veterans, three womens auxilaries dressed in white carrying flags, police band veterans of Spanish-American war, colors guarded by 20 uniformed police, hundreds of boy scouts and fathers that had sent boys to France We just gave an outline here, it would take too much space to give full details. At the Armory the Regular Army and National Guard halted and formed in line two deep stood at present arms as the veterans passed them. The veterans responded by doffing their hats and carrying them against the breast. Mrs. Hannen and I spent a part of the day with our old friends B. F. Walter and family. Their family is small at present just Mr. and Mrs. Walter and Merritt, but they are getting along O. K. and we had a good visit.

INDIANA STATE NEWS

Indianapolis.—The Indiana County Superintendents' association will hold its sixty-second semi-annual meeting in the house of representatives at the statehouse June 19 and 20.

Indianapolis.—By a vote of 27,879 to 14,863, stockholders of the Indianapolis Street Railway company adopted a resolution approving and ratifying a proposed merger of that company with the Indianapolis Traction and Terminal company, which now operates the property of the former under a lease and which is in financial difficulties.

Aurora.—Stockholders of the East Enterprise Fair association have decided to disband and they have sold the grounds and race track, consisting of 31 acres, for $6,150. The association was organized more than half a century ago, and held an annual fair and race meeting on the grounds each year, but of late years the association has been losing money.

Marion.—Hundreds of men were in Marion to attend a district meeting of the Indiana Federation of Farmers. The counties represented were Adams, Blackford, Grant, Huntington, Jay, Miami, Tipton, Wabash and Wells. The meeting was among the first district meetings held since the perfection of the organization of the federation at Indianapolis.

Shelbyville.—Corn planting in Shelby county was completed last week. Many of the fields have been cultivated and rolled. There has been some replanting, particularly of the sugar corn. Shelby county farmers have turned away from the large ears to the ear of medium size, for the reason that the smaller ear matures more quickly. Wheat, oats and hay are all in good condition.

Indianapolis.—Increases in telephone rates in Indiana that will cost Hoosier telephone users millions of dollars a year—rates that several months ago when they were promulgated were heralded as decreases by the national administration—seemed certain to those who have been studying the decision of the United States Supreme court, which held that the federal telephone administration has authority above that of state utilities commissions to regulate intrastate telephone rates.

Columbus.—The new tax law has increased the assessment of the city of Columbus 30 per cent, the increase being much less than in the county at large, where a gain of 84 per cent was shown. The total taxable property in the city is $8,555,579, which is $1,084,506 more than that of 1918. The land valuation is given at $2,641,910; improvements, $3,222,635; personal property, $2,691,034. Last year's assessment was $6,571,073. The total tax rate for persons within the city this year is $3.98 on the hundred, as against $3.80 in 1918.

Richmond.—When the Wayne county board of review opened its session here to hear complaints against assessments made under the new Indiana tax law the first complaint was a farmer, who protested against a valuation of $9,450, made on 65 acres of land. The board listened to the grievance, then raised, instead of lowered, the assessment, adding $550, making the total assessment, $10,000. It announced that it would be the policy to bring all assessments up to 100 per cent standard and that it would in no case lower assessments unless the showing could be made that assessments were made higher than 100 per cent.

Princeton.—The first big sale of high grade, registered cattle in Gibson county was held here when W. M. Kister of Haubstadt sold his entire herd of Polled Herefords. It was the last sale of the season for the National Polled Hereford Record association, and for this reason, it was said, the bulls sold considerably lower than might have been expected. The cows, however, sold well, Clemma King bringing the top price of $1,400. One cow sold for $1,300, another for $1,225. The first thirty cows sold brought an average of $670. The bulls and young stock brought the average for the sixty-four head down to $429.53.

Indianapolis. — Governor Goodrich has apportioned to ten of the eighteen Indiana state benevolent and correctional institutions the $150,000 which the 1919 legislature placed in the emergency maintenance fund, from which institutions are assisted when they run short of money before the end of a fiscal year. The governor's emergency maintenance fund for this fiscal year now is exhausted and no legal way remains by which institutions may be assisted if they run short of money again before September 30, the end of the fiscal year. On the basis of what the institutions in question used during the corresponding period last year, nine of the ten will run short approximately $200,000, which, with the shortage up to this time, will make a total maintenance deficit of $350,000 for the institutions this fiscal year alone.

Rockville.—Otto Aumann and Carl Griffin, two young men whose homes are in Clinton, were sentenced to life imprisonment in the state penitentiary in the Parke circuit court here. Both were charged with having taken part in the shooting and killing of Clifton Taylor, a Clinton taxicab driver.

Winchester.—Reports of township assessors for real estate assessed in Randolph county outside town and cities show the value to be $37,108,260. The assessments of the town and personal property are expected to increase the total of the county to more than $39,000,000.

Vincennes.—Bicknell, in the northern part of this county, will spend more than $150,000 for the improvement of streets this summer.

Hammond.—Charges of alleged brutality to jail inmates by members of the West Hammond police force are to be investigated.

Peru.—Indications point to an unusually large pea pack by the Peru Canning company, which is preparing to open its factory here in the next thee weeks. The company has a larger acreage thon ever before and prospects are bright for a big crop. The company will employ 200 persons during the summer months.

Elkhart.—Three men were killed and five seriously injured by a boiler explosion which wrecked a creamery at Hopkins, Mich. The dead are: George Horner, Walter Huzen and Menno Kraft. They were buried in the wreckage. L. F. Seeley, A. Marquardt, Mrs. Vivian Keith, Buryee and Burt Lindsley were severely injured.

Indiannapolis.—Unless Indiana's vote becomes necessary for ratification of the Susan B. Anthony amendment, pased by the United States congress, the state legislature will not be called into special sesion to ratify the amendment. This announcement was made by Governor Goodrich, following a request by suffrage leaders that the state legislature be called to ratify the amendment.

Indianapolis.—The annual period in which Saturday is a half holiday for state, county, city and township offices in cities of 100,000 population or more began Saturday and will continue until the last Saturday in October, according to an Indiana statute. Statehouse and Marion county offices will observe the law. The city of Indianapolis observes each Saturday afternoon in the year as a half holiday.

Indianapolis.—The state board of tax commissioners completed a tabulation of its assessments of all the property in Indiana under its original taxing jurisdiction and the grand total of assessments reached the huge sum of $1,011,451,466.23. The assessments of banks, trust companies and mortgage guaranty companies was the last to be completed and the grand total of their assessments is $95,494,700. The board assessed 1,050 such companies.

Jeffersonville.—The arrival of warm weather has sent farmers hustling to get corn planted. It will take to June 10, under favorable conditions, to complete the work, which is ten days late. In the northern part of this county and in Scott county, farmers contemplate setting out more tomatoes than originally planned, using part of their proposed corn acreage for the purpose because of the season being so far advanced.

Sullivan.—Committees of the Sullivan Community club and the Sullivan County Pure Bred Live Stock association met to lay plans for the erection of a large live stock judging pavilion. The building is to be erected here this summer at a cost of $25,000. It is expected that the newly organized Community club will co-operate with the farmers' organization. The building is made necessary by the holding of a live stock show every fall in Sullivan, there being no adequate place for it.

Columbus.—The Bartholomew County Farmers' association will make a thorough wheat survey and, by beginning a year ahead of the ripening of the next crop, improve the condition of wheat by obtaining better seed. The plan to be followed is to appoint a committee which will make a survey of the county and mark fields which are free from weeds and disease, and which are in good condition generally. The owners of such fields will be asked to thrash them separately and to keep the grain for seed for farmers throughout the county.

Indianapolis.—The membership of the Knights of Columbus in Indiana has been increased 50 per cent since March 1, according to the annual report of the state deputy, Stephen W. Calahan, of Ft. Wayne, which was read at the session of the eighteenth annual state council of the order. It was reported that the membership on January 1, 1919, was 10,999, and that 5,400 new members had been added since the membership drive began on March 1. The report showed also that 25 per cent of the membership had served in the army or navy during the war.

Indianapolis.—Returns from the state-wide intelligence tests of high school seniors indicate a wide variation in intellectual ability, according to Oscar H. Williams, state high school inspector, who has just made a preliminary survey of the reports of the tests made by the high schools of the state. Some extraordinary instances of high-grade native intelligence have been found among high school seniors, said Mr. Williams. The tests were made on approximately 10,000 seniors, and were conducted in accordance with a plan worked out by Indiana university as an adaptation of the Binet tests, which formed the bases of the army intelligence tests. The tests were given under the auspices of the state high school department.

Columbus. — The Columbus-Hope group of the Seymour district of the southern Indiana M. E. conference has oversubscribed its quota of the centenary fund by $3,000, the quota being $87,000 and the subscription $90,000. There are 28 churches in the group.

New Albany.—Lieut. Gov. Edgar D. Bush spent several days in this city and since his departure it has become known that he told his friends here that he is an avowed candidate for the Republican nomination for governor. He stated that he soon will open headquarters in Indianapolis and that he will begin an active campaign.

PEACE TERMS GIVEN AUSTRIA

Summary of Treaty Presented at St. Germain, France, Is Made Public.

GIVEN 15 DAYS TO ACCEPT

Huge Territory Is Cut From Former Monarchy and 44,000,000 Nationals Are Taken Away—Dr. Renner Tells Allies "You Hold Our Fate."

St. Germain, France, June 4.—Fifteen days were given to Austria to reply to the terms of peace presented by the allied nations in the Stone Age room in the old palace at St. Germain.

M. Clemenceau, president of the peace conference, was the first prominent figure to arrive at the meeting at which the terms of peace were presented.

Secretary Lansing and Henry White were the first American representatives to arrive, Premier Orlando of Italy and Premier Paderewski of Poland and Arthur J. Balfour following. Col. E. M. House was the only member of the American delegation not present.

In addition to the conference representatives of the allied and associated powers there were present many distinguished persons, including Marshal Foch, General Bliss, Admiral Benson and American Ambassador Wallace.

Wilson Delays Proceedings.

President Wilson delayed the ceremony of presentation. He reached St. Germain at 12:14. A puncture of the tire of his automobile held him up on the way.

The mishap occurred at St. Cloud. While the punctured tire was being mended an army car passed. It was commandeered by the president's party and the president and Rear Admiral Grayson drove at high speed to St. Germain.

The Austrian representatives arrived at 12:22 o'clock, entering the chamber by a rear entrance. The delegates were attired in conventional morning dress.

The Austrians were escorted in by an Italian officer.

Immediately upon their arrival at 12:22 p. m. the session was opened formally by announcement of the head usher. Premier Clemenceau, president of the peace conference, at once began his address.

Clemenceau's Words Translated.

Clemenceau spoke in French. His remarks were translated into English, then into Italian and then into German. He spoke only three minutes.

The hall was densely packed, many of the secretaries having been admitted to the chamber and the denseness of the throng detracted somewhat from the impressiveness of the ceremony.

Paul Dutasta, general secretary of the peace conference, presented the terms to the Austrians at 12:37.

Dr. Karl Renner, the Austrian chancellor and head of the delegation, then began an address in French.

The Austrians closely followed the words of the French premier, especially Slatin, who tugged nervously at his ragged beard as he leaned forward watching the speaker.

Doctor Renner promised loyally to do his best to work out a peace on the basis presented. "Our state rests in your hand," said Doctor Renner following the presentation of the allies' terms, "and we hope before the conscience of the world that the allies will not abuse this power."

The entire peace treaty was not presented to the Austrians, and the 15-day stipulation with regard to their reply, therefore, refers only to the portion of the terms handed them.

Doctor Renner Complains of Delay.

Doctor Renner opened with a complaint at the delay in the presentation of the peace terms. The chancellor declared the Austrian republic was entirely free from the Hapsburg dynasty. It would never have declared war itself, he asserted. The chancellor concluded his address at 12:50. The address was translated into English and Italian.

Doctor Renner stood while reading his speech, and his attitude, like that of the entire Austrian delegation, was extremely courteous, contrasting sharply with that of Count von Brockdorff-Rantzau and the Germans at Versailles. The conciliatory tones of Doctor Renner apparently created a good impression on the allied delegation. The general atmosphere seemed quite friendly.

After Doctor Renner's address, in which the chancellor expressed gratitude for the food relief that had come from the Hoover commission, Premier Clemenceau asked if anyone else desired to speak. There was no response and he declared the ceremony ended.

The translation of Premier Clemenceau's and Chancellor Renner's speeches into three languages occupied the larger part of the session. It adjourned at 1:14 o'clock after having taken up 52 minutes.

Doctor Renner probably will go to Switzerland.

Those clauses which are not yet ready for presentation will be delivered as soon as possible, the Austrians in the meantime having the opportunity to begin work on the greater part of the treaty in an effort to facilitate a final decision.

Follows German Treaty.

The Austrian treaty follows exactly the same outline as the German, and in many places is identical with it, except for the change in name. Certain specific new clauses included, especially as regards the new states created out of the former Austro-Hungarian empire and the protection of the rights of the racial, religious and linguistic minorities in Austria, Czecho-Slovakia, Roumania and Serb-Croat-Slovene state.

Austria is left by the treaty a state of from 6,000,000 to 7,000,000 people, inhabiting a territory of between 5,000 and 6,000 square miles. She is required to recognize the complete independence of Hungary, Czecho-Slovakia and the Serb-Croat-Slovene state, and to cede other territory which previously in union with her composed the empire of Austria-Hungary, with its population of over 50,000,000 people.

To Demobilize Navy.

Austria agreed to accept the league of nations covenant and the labor charter, to renounce all her extra European rights, to demobilize her whole naval and aerial forces, to admit the right of trial by the allied and associated powers of her nationals guilty of violating the law and customs of force, and to accept detailed provisions similar to those of the German treaty as to economic relations and freedom of transit.

Of the following summary part one of the treaty containing the covenant of the league of nations and part twelve, containing the labor convention, are omitted as being identical with corresponding sections of the German treaty. Part six, dealing with prisoners of war and graves, and part eleven, with aerial navigation, are also identical except for the substitution of names, and are likewise omitted. Part thirteen of the German treaty containing guarantees of execution is not paralleled in the Austrian treaty.

Preamble.

The preamble is longer and more detailed than in the German summary and is as follows:

"Whereas, on the request of the former imperial and royal Austro-Hungarian government, an armistice was granted to Austria-Hungary on November 3, 1918, by the principal allied and associated powers in order that a treaty of peace might be concluded, and,

"Whereas, the allied and associated powers are equally desirous that the war in which certain among them were successfully involved, directly or indirectly, against Austria, and which originated in the declaration of war against Serbia on July 28, 1914, by the former imperial and royal Austro-Hungarian government, and in the hostilities conducted by Germany in alliance with Austria-Hungary should be replaced by a firm, just and durable peace; and

"Whereas, the former Austro-Hungarian monarchy has now ceased to exist, and has been replaced in Austria by a republican government; and

"Whereas, the principal allied and associated powers have already recognized that the Czecho-Slovak state, in which are incorporated certain portions of said monarchy, is a free, independent and allied state; and

"Whereas, the said powers have recognized the union of certain portions of the said monarchy with the territory of the kingdom of Serbia as a free, independent and allied state, under the name of Serb-Croat-Slovene state; and

"Whereas, it is necessary while restoring peace to regulate the situation which has arisen from the dissolution of the said monarchy and the formation of the said states, and to establish the government of these countries on a firm foundation of justice and equity.

Recognized as Republic.

"For this purpose the high contracting parties, duly named

"Who, having communicated their full powers, found in good and due form, have agreed as follows:

"From the coming into force of the present treaty the state of war will terminate.

"Austria is recognized as a new and independent state under the name of the Republic of Austria.

"From that moment, and subject to the provisions of this treaty, official relations will exist between the allied and associated powers and the Republic of Austria."

BAPTISMAL BELIEF OF AGES

Queer Ideas That Show the World Has Not Grown Far From the Era of Superstition.

There are many superstitions connected with the manner in which a baby is carried into church for the baptismal service, that are supposed to affect the character and disposition in after life. The nurse, or whoever carries the infant, should enter the church with the right foot, stepping briskly and dancing the baby in her arms, so that the little one shall grow up cheerful and light-hearted.

Another old-fashioned theory is that if a boy is baptized in the water previously used for a girl he will grow up feeble and effeminate; while if the case is reversed the baby will grow up lacking in womanly attributes. In every country white is employed for all baby garments, but where a little color is introduced the superstitious mother takes care that it is a lucky shade. Red is said to be a lucky color.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

(Copyright, 1919, by Western Newspaper Union.)

LESSON FOR JUNE 15

PRAYER.

LESSON TEXTS—Matt. 6:5-15; Luke 18:1-14.

GOLDEN TEXT—Be careful for nothing; but in everything by prayer and supplication with thanksgiving let your requests be made known unto God.—Phil. 4:6.

ADDITIONAL MATERIAL—Gen. 18:23-33; Ex. 32:31, 32; Matt. 26:39-46; Luke 11:1-13; John 17:1-26; I Thess. 5:17; James 5:16-18.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Talking With the Heavenly Father.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Jesus Teaches How to Pray.

INTERMEDIATE TOPIC—Prayer a Privilege and a Duty.

SENIOR AND ADULT TOPIC—The Christian Conception of Prayer.

I. The Proper Motive in Prayer (Matt. 6:5-8).

The righteousness which counts with God is doing right deeds with the right motive. Righteous as the act of praying is it may be an abomination unto God:

1. If it be to be seen and heard of men (v. 5). Much of the public praying is false—when there is more thought of what the people think than of what God thinks. In praying the individual is dealing with God, therefore if he be engaged in it to attract men's attention it is blasphemous. It is not wrong to pray on the street corner and in the synagogues; that which is condemned is doing it to be seen of men.

2. If there be the use of vain repetitions (v. 7). This does not mean that we should ask but once, for we have examples of Christ and of Paul praying three times for the same thing (Matt. 25; 39-46; II Cor. 12:7-8), but meaningless repetitions as done by the heathen. The reason assigned is that "your Father knoweth what things ye have need of before ye ask him" (v. 8). God is pleased with true prayer (v. 6). We should have a real desire for fellowship with God. Since prayer is a transaction of the soul with God, we should go to our inner chamber, where only God can hear, and there commune with him.

II. The Model Prayer (Matt. 6:9-15).

1. Right relationship. "Our Father." Only those who have become children of God by faith in Jesus Christ (Gal. 3:26) can pray aright.

2. Right attitude. "Hallowed be thy name. Thy kingdom come." When we realize that we have been delivered from the power of darkness and translated into the kingdom of his dear Son (Col. 1:13) by being made the children of God we cannot help pouring out our souls to him in gratitude and praise, longing for the coming of his kingdom.

3. Right spirit (1) That of trust which looks to him for daily bread. (2) That of love which results in the forgiveness of others. God will not listen to the prayer of the one who has an unforgiving spirit. (3) That of holiness which moves us to pray not to be led in temptation, and longs to be delivered from the evil one.

4. The ascription of praise. "Thine is the kingdom, the power, and the glory forever."

III. Persistency in Prayer (Luke 18:1-8).

The teaching of this parable is that men ought always to pray and not to faint (v. 1). The context shows that praying should be the business of the church while the Lord is absent. Having referred to the coming of the Lord at the close of the preceding chapter he uses this parable to enforce the obligation of the church under the figure of a widow crying day and night unto God. Though the unjust judge had neither fear of God nor regard for man he avenged her of her enemies. Much more, then, will the tender loving Father, God, avenge his own elect (v. 7). God is pleased with those who persistently pray, or, as popularly expressed, "pray through."

IV. The Proper Attitude in Prayer (Luke 18:9-14).

This is brought out in striking contrast by two men praying. The Pharisee's sense of self practically excluded the consciousness of God. The poor publican had a most keen sense of God, and therefore sought his mercy. The Pharisee presented personal credentials, while the publican cast himself upon God's mercy. The publican was justified, while the Pharisee was rejected. Let us come into the presence of God with humility, for God is holy.

Easy to Commit Sin.

It is a great deal easier to commit a second sin than it was to commit the first, and a great deal harder to repent of a second, than it was to repent of the first.—Benjamin Whichcote.

For One Another.

The will of God respecting us is that we shall live by each other's happiness, and life. . . . Men help each other by their joy, not by their sorrow. They are not intended to slay themselves for each other, but to strengthen themselves for each other.—Ruskin.

To Have Knowledge.

If we would indeed have knowledge thrive and flourish, we must water the tender plants of it with holiness.—John Smith.

PLAN TO MAKE A ROAD DRAG

Illustration Shows an Implement Which Is Simple and Inexpensive —Tough Wood Best.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The accompanying illustration shows a typical design for a road drag, which is very simple and inexpensive. The design contemplates the use of an ordinary log of timber, such as may be readily obtained in almost every locality. The log should be about 7 or 8 inches in diameter and from 6 to 8 feet long, and should preferably be of hard, tough wood which will not decay very rapidly when exposed to the weather. White oak, burr oak, chestnut, cedar, hickory, walnut, or any similar wood may be satisfactorily used, provided that it is well seasoned before the drag is put into use. Railroad ties have been frequently used for this purpose and possess the advantage that they are already cut to about the right length. In selecting the tie, however, care should be exercised to see that it is of sound wood and of the proper size.

The drag is made by splitting or sawing the log into two equal semi-cylinders, which are then framed together in the manner shown in the illustration. The better of the two pieces should form the front runner of the drag, because it is the one subjected to the greater wear. Moreover, while the front runner should always be placed with the face forward, it is claimed by many that better results may be obtained by having the round part of the back runner go forward in order to increase the smearing action of the drag. The two runners are usually spaced from about 30 inches to 36 inches apart, and are connected in ladder fashion by means of cross stakes or rungs.

The ends of the rungs are ordinarily fitted into 2-inch auger holes, bored in the runners, and are securely held in place by means of end wedges. The auger holes are so arranged that the runners, when framed together, will be displaced in a longitudinal direction with respect to each other. The object of this displacement, or offset as it is usually termed, is to make the ends of the front and back runners follow approximately the same line on the road while the drag is in operation. The amount of displacement, therefore, should depend on the amount of skew necessary to make the drag empty itself. But since this skew varies with the condition of the road surface, the proper offset to be given to runners cannot be definitely fixed. Under ordinary conditions an offset of from about 12 inches to about 16 inches will prove satisfactory.

In order to make it easy for a man to stand upon the drag and to shift his weight properly when dragging over a hard surface, the drag should be provided with two 1-inch boards parallel to the runners and nailed down to the rungs. These boards should be about 8 inches wide and their length should be slightly less than that of the runners of the drag.

The chain by means of which the drag is drawn should be about 8 feet long and its links should be made of three-eighths-inch steel. On light drags two trace chains may be used for this purpose.

Many road drags constructed as above described, without metal-cutting edges or other modifications, have been very satisfactorily used where the conditions were favorable. It is evident, however, that such drags are effective only on comparatively soft road surfaces, and to diminish this limitation and also to increase the life of the drag it is very desirable to provide a metal-cutting edge for the front runner. An excellent edge of this kind may be made from a strip of iron or steel about one-fourth inch thick and about four inches wide, and even old wagon tires or wornout grader blades have been very satisfactory.

GOOD ROADS ARE NECESSITY

Add to Joy and Comfort of Country and City Life—National Problem for Everybody.

Good roads will add to the joy and comfort of country life and city life. They are a public necessity. The problem is a township problem, a county problem, a state problem, a national problem for men and women of all business and industrial life. It deserves united co-operation.

WOLVES OF THE SEA

CHAPTER XXII.
—15—

The Crew Decides.

Except that many of the men remained armed there was no suggestion of violence. But for the gleaming carronade trained on the main hatch, and the small group of gunners clustered about it, the scene was peaceable enough, resembling the deck of some merchant ship. LeVere stood motionless at the poop rail, staring down and his attitude and expression of face aroused within me a doubt of the man, a determination to put him to the test. Evidently he had held aloof and refrained from taking even the slightest part in our activities. The men themselves were mostly forward, grouped together and still excitedly discussing the situation.

"Stand by to reef topsails," I shouted. "We're all one watch now. Go at it lively, lads, and when the job is over we'll eat, and decide together what's our next move. Two of you will be enough to guard the hatch and one of you go into the cabin and relieve the girl there. Keep your eyes open. I'll be down presently. Aloft with you and see how quick a job you can make of it."

Watkins led the way up the mainmast ratlines, and Cole was first into the fore shrouds, the others following eagerly. I watched them lay out on the yards and was heartened to hear the fellows sing as they worked, the canvas melting away as if by magic. I climbed the ladder to where LeVere stood on the poop, but carefully ignored his presence, my gaze on the scene aloft. Twice I gave orders, changing the steering direction slightly, and commanding the lower sails reefed. The mulatto scowling, joined me at the rail.

"What's all this about?" he asked. "That's no storm cloud yonder."

"There is always danger in fog," I answered coldly, "and besides there is no use carrying on until we know where we are bound. My purpose is to keep the men busy, and then talk the situation over with them. Have you any criticism of this plan, Senor LeVere?"

He hesitated, but his eyes were narrowed, and ugly.

"You'll do as you please, but you told me we sailed for Porto Grande. Was that a lie?"

"Not necessarily," and I smiled grimly. "Although I should not have hesitated to tell one under the circumstances. I mean to leave that decision to the men themselves. It is their lives that are in danger."

"That scum! half of them are English and French. All they want is to get away; they will never go back to Porto Grande without you make them."

"How make them?"

"By false observations; there is no navigator forward. It is a trick easy enough to play with a little nerve. I would never have taken part in this mutiny if I had supposed you meant to play into the hands of the men."

"It is very little part you took Senor LeVere, judging from what I saw. You seemed quite content to stand aft here and look on. However you are in it just as deeply as I am, and are going to play the game out with me to the end. Do you understand that?".

"What you mean, senor—play it out?"

"Go on with the rest of us; take your chance with the men and do your duty. I am captain here. The first sign of treachery on your part will send you below with those others. I don't trust you, and all I want is an excuse to put you out of the way—so be careful what you do."

I turned and walked away from him toward the forward rail. The men were still aloft but coming in from off the yards. Below me in the door of the companion, stood Dorothy, her eyes peering curiously about the deserted deck. She glanced up and saw me.

"May I come up there?" she asked.

"Certainly; let me help you. Stand here beside me, and you can see all that is being done. That's all, lads; breakfast is ready; lay down all except the lookout."

We watched while they streamed down the ratlines and gathered forward of the galley, squatting in groups on the deck. To all appearances the fellows had not a care in the world, or any thought of the stirring scenes just passed through. The girl's hand touched my sleeve, and I turned and looked into her face.

"Have you considered Captain Sanchez?" she asked.

"Why no," in surprise, "he is helpless below, badly wounded."

"Not so badly as you suppose," she said swiftly. "He is able to be up and about his stateroom. I heard him moving, and I believe the steward has told him what has occurred on board, and endeavored to bear a message from him to those men amidships. I held my pistol to his head and locked him in the pantry. He is there now, with the sailor you sent on guard. That is what I came on deck to tell you."

"He is a danger, of course, but not a serious one," I said confidently. "It is safe enough to leave him undisturbed at present. The first thing I need to do is to satisfy those men. I'll attend to that now, and then see to the proper securing of Sanchez. Remain here with LeVere while I go forward, and watch that he does not attempt to go below."

The fellows had not finished mess, but I felt the danger of further delay, and talked to them as they sat on deck, explaining briefly the entire situation, and the causes leading up to the mutiny. I dealt with the matter in plain terms, making no apparent effort to influence them, yet forcibly compelling each individual to realize what would be the result of our recapture. They listened earnestly, asking an occasional question, and passing comments back and forth freely among themselves.

I sent Watkins to the cabin for a roll of charts, and spreading these out, endeavored as well as I could, to make clear our probable position and the nearest point of land. When I had completed the explanation, and stood before them awaiting decision, it was Haines who acted as their spokesman.

"This yere is Cape Howarth?" he asked, a grimy thumb on the point indicated. "An' yer say it's 'bout a hundred and fifty miles west?"

"Yes, about that?"

"An' thar's no settlement?"

"Some colonists fifty miles north is all."

"That's 'bout right." He turned to the others. "Say mates, this is how I figure. We can't go on no long cruise with all those bloody rats in the hold. They're bound ter find some way out if we give 'em time 'nough. Fer as I'm concerned, I'm fer dividin' up whut we've got, and ter hell with piratin'. What 'er yer say, mates? Shall we run the ol' hooker ashore, an' leave her thar, while we tramp the coast? We're just a shipwrecked crew. What say yer?"

There was a chorus of approval sufficient in volume to satisfy me, and I accepted this as a decision.

"All right, lads," I said briefly. "In my judgment your choice is a wise one. I'll have an observation as soon as the fog clears and we'll head in for the Cape?"

"When do we divide the swag?"

"Fifty miles off the coast. That's fair enough, isn't it? And my share goes to you."

There was a straggling cheer, but I broke it up with a sharp order.

"Now stand by for work, all of you. Watkins and Carter, I want you aft."

CHAPTER XXIII.

The Prisoners Escape.

The two men followed me silently as far as the companion, where we paused a moment staring blindly about us into the fog. Even the guard at the main hatch was invisible.

"Carter, guard this after deck until Watkins and I come back. Under no circumstances permit LeVere to enter the cabin."

With the door closed, we were plunged into a darkness which rendered the interior invisible. I wondered dimly why the man on guard had not lighted the swinging lantern. I stumbled over something on the deck, as I groped forward, but did not pause until I had lighted the lantern. It blazed up brightly enough, its yellow flame illuminating the cabin and the first thing I saw was the outstretched figure of the sailor almost between my feet. We needed to ask no questions, imagine nothing—the overturned chair, the stricken sailor told the whole story. He had been treacherously stuck from behind, the blade driven home by a strong hand, and was dead before he fell to the deck. It had been silent, vengeful murder, and the assassin had left no trace. Who could it have been? Not Gunsaules surely—the steward lacked both nerve and strength for such a deed. Then there was but one to suspect—Sanchez!

I flung open the pantry door, but one glance inside told me that Gunsaules had vanished. On the deck lay the strands of rope with which he had been secured—they had been severed by a sharp knife, the ends discolored with blood stains. I held these out to Watkins.

"Cut since the murder," I said, "and by the same knife. What do you make of it, Tom?"

"Well, sir, the thing he'd most likely try fer wud be ter release them lads amidships. My idea is, sir, he thought he'd have time ter git the bulkhead door open, before anybody cum below—he an' the steward, who'd know whar the tools wus. That wus the scheme, only we busted in too quick. That's whar they both are—skulkin' back in them shadows."

He fitted the smoking lantern back onto the shelf to have his hands free for action, and drew a cutlass out of the arm rack, running one leatherly thumb along the blade to test its sharpness. His eyes sought mine questioningly.

"Probably your guess is the right one," I said soberly. "We'll give it a trial."

Murder had been committed for a purpose—it was the first step in an effort to retake the ship. If we were to retain our advantage there was no time to be lost; we were pitted now against Silva Sanchez, and he was a leader not to be despised or temporized with; no cowardly, brainless fool.

The passage leading forward was wide enough to permit of our advancing together and for a few steps the light dribbled in past us, quite sufficient for guidance. I had been down this tunnel once before, and knew the bulkhead was not far away, but the few steps necessary plunged us into profound blackness, through which we advanced cautiously with outstretched hands. No slightest sound warned of danger and I was already convinced in my own mind that the refugees were not hiding there, when it happened. Within an instant we were fighting for our lives, fronted not by two men, but by a score, who flung themselves cursing upon us. Their very numbers and the narrowness of the passage was our only salvation. At first our resistance was blind enough, guided only by the senses of touch and sound. We could see nothing of our antagonists, although their fierce rush hurled us backward. I fired into the mass, as Watkins slashed madly with his cutlass, both managing in some way to keep our feet. Hands gripped for us, a bedlam of oaths splitting the air; yet, even in that moment of pandemonium, I was quick to realize the fellows were weaponless, seeking only to reach and crush us with bare hands. The same discovery must have come to the mind of the sailor, for he yelled it out defiantly, every stroke of his blade drawing blood. I joined him, striking with the butt of the pistol. We killed and wounded, the curses of hate changed into sharp cries of agony, but those behind pressed the advance forward, and we were inevitably swept back into the light of the cabin lamp.

Then I saw faces, hideous in the glare, demoniacal in their expression of hatred—a mass of them, unrecognizable, largely of a wild, half-Indian type, with here and there a bearded white. Nor were they all bare-handed; in many a grip flashed a knife, and directly fronting me, with a meat cleaver uplifted to strike, Sanchez yelled his orders. Ignoring all others I leaped straight at him, crying to Watkins as I sprang.

"Back lad; dash out that light; I'll hold these devils here a minute!"

I did—God knows how! It was like no fighting ever I had done before, a mad, furious melee, amid which I lost all consciousness of action, all guidance of thought, struggling as a wild brute, with all the reckless strength of insanity. It is a dim, vague recollection; I am sure I felled Sanchez with one blow of my pistol butt; in some way that deadly cleaver came into my hands and I trod on his body, swinging the sharp blade with all my might into those scowling faces. They gave sullenly backward; they had to, yelping and snarling like a pack of wolves, hacking at me with their short knives. I was cut again and again. I stood on quivering flesh, crazed with blood, and seeking only to kill. I saw faces crushed in, arms severed, the sudden spurting of blood from ghastly wounds. Oaths mingled with cries of agony and shouts of hate. Then in an instant the light was dashed out and all was darkness.

Mends Granite Ware.

The government suggests we economize on kitchen utensils. To mend a hole in granite ware work a piece of putty until perfectly soft, then take a piece of the putty large enough to cover the hole and put one piece on either side of the metal, pressing together inside and out, smoothing down the edges. Place the vessel in a slow oven and bake until the putty is a deep brown. For containing water the vessel will be as good as new.

NEAREST.

A Southerner in one of the cantonments below the Mason and Dixon line, when called up for examination, was asked:

"What is your nearest living relative?"

"What you mean, 'relative,' mister?" returned the recruit.

"Oh, I mean your nearest living kinsfolk."

"Wal, that's my aunt you're talking 'bout."

Several other questions were answered satisfactorily, when there came:

"In case of death or accident, who shall be notified?"

"My mother," immediately came from the selectman.

"But you told me just a few minutes ago that your aunt was the nearest living relative that you have," objected the officer.

"You asked me who my nearest living kin was, didn't you? Wal, that's Aunt Liz—she lives jest two miles from where I been livin'; mother lives five."

MOTORS INSTEAD OF DOGS

Trip Over the Cascades in a Gasoline Sleigh Was a Distinct Success.

A spectacular trial trip was recently made across the Cascades in a motor sleigh, and a number of photographs, taken at various stages of the journey, are reproduced in Popular Mechanics. The achievement of the motor sleigh was almost as amazing as that of the first army tank, conquering, as it did, all kinds of obstacles. Skimming the surface of snowfalls, old or new, the strange little vehicle broke its way through primeval passes with never a stumble. The rescue of an automobile, hopelessly stalled in the drifts of Snoqualmie pass, was a mere incident in its progress. Crossing a deep gully on a pair of hemlock poles was but one of the day's adventures. The intended substitution of the motor sleigh for the dog drawn sledges of Alaska's snow-bound post trails means more to the people of that great territory than may be generally realized. Jack London and others have limned the malemute as a romantic figure; but the followers of the trail know well he is never that. It is the elimination of much human hardship, as well as canine inefficiency, that recommends the gasoline method.

Quick Action Called For.

Time's Changes.

"Times shore change," philosophically said Gap Johnson of Rumpus Ridge. "Just tuther day, as it were, nobody thought anything in pertickler if a feller took a demijohn to church under the back seat of his wagon, and after the sermon had grown sorter tiresome winked a few of his friends outside to help him lap it up and fool around and swap horses and mebbey fight a little in a general way.

"But now, by grit, if he even smells of patent medicine on a week day he's got to produce the omenick and p'int out the place whur it says he's got the deadly disease that he claims to have taken the medicine for."—Kansas City Star.

Proud of His "Profession."

"Burglars who served in the army are going back to their old trade," said a London police official the other day. "These men deliberately elect to live by stealing because they find it adventurous. It was with the same spirit that they joined the army. At least one convicted burglar won the Victoria cross." Confirmation of this characteristic is provided by a captain in a famous fighting regiment, who declares that one of the bravest men in his company, a corporal with a D.C.M. and other honors, declared himself a professional thief. "His one regret," remarked the officer, "was that the recruiting authorities would not let him describe his occupation on his attestation papers as 'burglar.'"

Many People Poisoned

Scores of people meet death each year by a slow process of poisoning that is going on within our bodies. This poisoning is caused by the liver and kidneys failing to perform their proper function. Poisonous matter accumulates within the body and health declines. The unsightly liver splotches, billiousness, headache and dizziness, bad taste in the mouth, coated tongue, a pain in the back or under the shoulder blade, a tired or achy feeling are some of the most common symptoms of this poisoning. If this poisoning it not expelled and the cause removed the resisting power is finally gone and life pays the penalty. Are you of the heedless class or are you safeguarding your health? If you want health you must keep the liver, kidneys and bowels active. Glando Tonic is what you need to restore this activity and expell the poisons. Keep on the safe side and use a reliable remedy. Glando Tonic is put up in a treatment form and guaranteed to do the work. Ask your druggist for a large $1 treatment. Take it as directed and you will be surprised to know how much poison was stored up within your body. When the liver is inactive a mucus or slime collects within the stomach and bowels which hinders digestion and the assimilation of food. This is called catarrh of the stomach or bowels. Glando Tonic cuts this slime and mucus and removes it. A nauceated feeling is sometimes experienced when this mucus is breaking loose but as soon as it is removed from the bowels, you will feel fine, the complexion clear, the appet te return and you will want to tell others of your wonderful cure.

Glando Tonic is sold by druggists or may be secured by sending direct to the Gland-Aid Co., Fort Wayne, Indiana.

Farmers To Organize

Old DeKalb to Get in Line in Behalf of the New Movement. Mass Meet Saturday.

Dr. W. H. Hickman of Montpelier, a prominent farmer and business man, and first vice president and chairman of the executive board of the Indiana Federation of Farmers' Associations, will address a mass meeting of the farmers of DeKalb county at the court house assembly room, Auburn, Saturday, June 14, at 8 o'clock. Dr. Hickman is a reasoner of no mean ability, and is in close touch with the needs of the agriculturists. He is a real farmer from Blackford county, and is familiar with the business from one end to the other. He took an active part in the state convention, March 25. Every farmer of the county who is at all interested in his calling should hear this seventy-year old young man, who is full of energy and enthusiasm.

At this meeting a permanent organization will be effected, to be a part of the state and national organizations. This is an organization of farmers to protect the interests of the farmers, and by education, legislation and other honorable means, to promote the largest good for all the people. It is not an organization antagonistic to any other organization of farmers, but on the contrary, seeks to federate all such in one central organization, whose influence will be effective.

The purposes of this association, as expressed by the state convention, through its constitution, adopted March 25, 1919, may be stated in general terms as follows: 1. An organization of the farmers by the farmers to protect and promote the interests of the farmers, and by education, legislation and other honorable means, seek the welfare of all the people. 2. In a broader sense the association federated in state and nation will support civil government, social and business security, and guarantee the stability of our republic—fundamental things in these troubled times. It is not an organization for profit. There will be no shares nor dividends, but it will greatly benefit and protect the members of the association, and farmers generally. The people also will share in the good results.

Organization is the word these days, and for a long time the farmer has felt the need of a federation of this character. Now is your opportunity to help make it an asset to the ruralists of your own community, and to those of the entire nation. Don't stay at home and expect someone else to pioneer the job, but come to this mass meeting and lend your assistance.

HOW MRS. BOYD AVOIDED AN OPERATION

Canton, Ohio.—"I suffered from a female trouble which caused me much suffering, and two doctors decided that I would have to go through an operation before I could get well.

"My mother, who had been helped by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, advised me to try it before submitting to an operation. It relieved me from my troubles so I can do my house work without any difficulty. I advise any woman who is afflicted with female troubles to give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial and it will do as much for them."—Mrs. MARIE BOYD, 1421 5th St., N. E., Canton, Ohio.

Sometimes there are serious conditions where a hospital operation is the only alternative, but on the other hand so many women have been cured by this famous root and herb remedy, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, after doctors have said that an operation was necessary—every woman who wants to avoid an operation should give it a fair trial before submitting to such a trying ordeal.

If complications exist, write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass., for advice. The result of many years experience is at your service.

Living Monstrosities.

Instances where a living creature appears to consist of two similar parts capable of a certain degree of separate life are cited by many authorities. It is noted that this phenomenon occurs abnormally and occasionally even among human beings. Instances are Helena and Judith, the Hungarian sisters (1701-1723), the famous Siamese twins (1814-1874), the South Carolina negresses Millie and Christina, and the Bohemian sisters, Rosalie and Josepha.

Often the union is so much closer that the consolidated individuals do not survive long after birth. Among the lower animals the phenomenon is far more common than it is among human beings, and it is thought possible that by persistent selection and breeding a race of double monsters might be established.

THIN PEOPLE SHOULD TAKE PHOSPHATE

Nothing Like Plain Bitro-Phosphate to Put on Firm, Healthy Flesh and to Increase Strength, Vigor and Nerve Force.

Judging from the countless preparations and treatments which are continually being advertised for the purpose of making thin people fleshy, developing arms, neck and bust, and replacing ugly hollows and angles by the soft curved lines of health and beauty, there are evidently thousands of men and women who keenly feel their excessive thinness.

Thinness and weakness are often due to starved nerves. Our bodies need more phosphate than is contained in modern foods. Physicians claim there is nothing that will supply this deficiency so well as the organic phosphate known among druggists as bitro-phosphate, which is inexpensive and is sold by most all druggists under a guarantee of satisfaction or money back. By feeding the nerves directly and by supplying the body cells with the necessary phosphoric food elements, bitro-phosphate should produce a welcome transformation in the appearance; the increase in weight frequently being astonishing.

Increase in weight also carries with it a general improvement in the health. Nervousness, sleeplessness and lack of energy, which nearly always accompany excessive thinness, should disappear, dull eyes become bright, and pale cheeks glow with the bloom of perfect health.

CAUTION: — Although bitro-phosphate is unsurpassed for relieving nervousness, sleeplessness and general weakness, it should not, owing to its tendency to increase weight, be used by anyone who does not desire to put on flesh.

FARMER SHOULD STUDY EXPERIENCES OF OTHERS BEFORE PURCHASING A TRACTOR

The Iron Horse Saves Time When Time Is Most Valuable.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

A tractor may be either a profitable or an unprofitable investment. Each farm has its own peculiarities; and a farmer must weigh the advantages and disadvantages carefully before buying a tractor. He should study the experiences of those who have used tractors in farm work, paying particular attention to those whose farms conform most nearly to his own in size and system of cropping. This is advice from specialists of the United States department of agriculture.

On an average, one farm in 30 in the United States now uses a tractor. It has been estimated by manufacturers that over 300,000 tractors will be made this year. It behooves every farmer contemplating buying one to study his farm problems from every angle.

Advantages in Using Tractor.

The advantage of a tractor lies not so much in the reduction in the cost of doing a piece of work as in being able to do it in less time. Thus the number of acres farmed can be increased and the work done quickly. Often the saving of time is the important factor in making a profit on the crop grown.

A tractor can be kept on the job in hot weather when horses are at a disadvantage. It can do heavy work and do it rapidly, thus covering the desired acreage in the proper season. It saves man labor, thus enabling the farm to be worked with less hired help. It sometimes decreases the number of horses needed, thus saving both investment in horses and the expense of their feed.

The tractor owner can increase his income somewhat by doing custom work of his neighbors; but this is often a doubtful practice. Outside work must be done at a time when it will not interfere with the necessary work on his own place or he will lose more by neglect than he makes by the custom work.

Disadvantages Mentioned by Owners.

The packing of damp soil and the difficulty of efficient operation are the chief disadvantages mentioned by tractor users. Where early spring work is necessary, the packing of the soil, especially a heavy soil, is a serious objection.

The fact that a tractor demands a certain amount of knowledge on the part of the operator can scarcely be considered a disadvantage. The training can be easily obtained at small expense. But too many men attempt to run tractors without learning anything about them except the starting, stopping and shifting gears. The important thing is the ability to detect trouble the minute it begins to develop, and know how to remedy it promptly instead of allowing it to run along until an expensive delay results.

It pays to spend a few days gaining experience under a competent instructor. It is unwise to attempt to run a tractor without such preparation. With the increasing use of tractors, as well as automobiles and stationary engines, farmers are rapidly becoming familiar with the care and operation of gas engines. At the same time, tractors are being improved and simplified so that difficulties in operation are growing less each year.

The comparatively large investment, rapid depreciation and fuel and repair bills have also been mentioned by farmers as points against owning a tractor. They point out, too, that a tractor is not adaptable to all farm work where horses are ordinarily used. However, the tractor can do much work that horses cannot do—work where belt power is needed.

Fit the Tractor to the Farm.

One of the most important points to consider when buying a tractor is the size of the farm. Experienced tractor owners rarely recommend the purchase of a tractor for use on a farm with less than 120 or 130 acres under cultivation, and for such farms the two-plow outfit is usually preferred. However, most of the farms on which tractors are being used successfully are somewhat larger than this, and a majority of the tractors pull three plows. Four-plow machines are being used satisfactorily on some farms where there is a larger amount of work to be done, and where the conditions are such that one man can operate an outfit of this size.

Size, however, is not the only factor to be considered, and the question whether or not a tractor will prove profitable is a problem in farm management which must be worked out for the individual farm.

RAT IS INVETERATE ENEMY OF CHICKENS

Rodents Destroy Feed, Eggs and All Kinds of Fowls.

Farmer in Virginia Reports Twenty-Six Turkeys Killed by Pests in One Night—Losses in Other Parts of Country.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Every poultryman should be on guard continually against rats. They destroy feed, eggs, and fowls, and are inveterate enemies to all kinds of poultry, from chicks, squabs, ducklings, and young turkeys just out of the shell to tough old birds awaiting the hatchet at the close of a long and noisy career. Although most of their depredations are confined to eggs and young birds, when driven by hunger rats kill full-grown fowls at roost, biting them through the head or neck.

Complaints about rats have come to the biological survey, United States department of agriculture, from many quarters. For example, a farmer in Virginia reported 26 turkeys killed by these pests in a night. Another, in Kansas, lost between 200 and 300 chickens and many eggs by rats during the course of the summer. His neighbors had similar experiences. From New Jersey has come a report of rats killing young ducks. An Ohioan has complained that the animals burrow beneath his coops and take chicks from under the hen. In certain neighborhoods of Massachusetts half of a season's hatch of chickens and ducklings have been killed by rats.

Rats multiply rapidly when left undisturbed where there is plenty to eat. One pair may increase to more than 2,000 in a single year.

Farmers' Bulletin No. 896, "House Rats and Mice," describes various methods by which the depredations of these pests may be prevented.

GREAT RESULTS FROM CLUBS

Opinion of Dr. Thomas F. Hunt, Dean and Director of the California Agricultural College.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The United States department of agriculture, the state agricultural colleges, and other agencies for the promotion of better farming are spending considerable money in club work among boys.

Does it pay? Here is the opinion of Dr. Thomas F. Hunt, dean and director of the college of agriculture, University of California.

"The college of agriculture did not, in my opinion, get as effective results from any other equal sum of money which it expended as it did from the amount of money spent on boys' clubs.

"These clubs have been running long enough for us to have some knowledge of their influence on the future lives of the boys concerned. I think I am well within the mark when I say that for the amount of money expended we get the greatest human results."

COCA-COLA WILL BE USED TO CHRISTEN ENGINE

Program Will Feature Exercises at Fire Hall on Wednesday.

[From Nashville Tennessean.]

Ann Dallas Dudley, the new fire engine at the Waverly-Belmont fire hall, will be christened on Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock with appropriate exercises. Mrs. Guilford Dudley, for whom the engine gets its name, is one of the state's pioneer suffrage workers and it is due to her untiring work that partial suffrage was given the women of Tennessee. Mrs. Miles Williams, a resident of the twenty-first ward, is chairman of arrangements, and also a pioneer suffragist, and little Judith Winston Folk, the 6-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Reau Folk, also a pioneer suffragist and the youngest member of the Nashville organization, has been chosen sponsor. Miss Folk has selected as her maids the following young girls, daughters of prominent suffrage leaders: Travania Dudley, Lenore Kenny, Kate Barksdale, Harriet Ingram, Mary Sue Cantrell, Jane Davis and Elizabeth Smith.

At the christening not champagne but a bottle of coca-cola will be broken and the maids will shower the engine with yellow flowers. Speeches will be made by Mayor William Gupton, Commissioner Tompkins and Chief A. A. Rosetta. Mrs. Dudley, a member of the national suffrage organization, and Mrs. Reau Folk, chairman of the city organization, will be honor guests of the occasion.—Adv.

IT'S NOT YOUR HEART; IT'S YOUR KIDNEYS

Kidney disease is no respecter of persons. A majority of the ills afflicting people today can be traced back to the kidney trouble.

The kidneys are the most important organs of the body. They are the filterers of your blood. If the poisons which are swept from the tissues by the blood are not eliminated through the kidneys, disease of one form or another will claim you as a victim.

Kidney disease is usually indicated by weariness, sleeplessness, nervousness, despondency, backache, stomach trouble, pain in loins and lower abdomen, gall stones, gravel, rheumatism, sciatica and lumbago.

All these derangements are nature's signals that the kidneys need help. You should use GOLD MEDAL Haarlem Oil Capsules immediately. The soothing, healing oil stimulates the kidneys, relieves inflammation and destroys the germs which have caused it. Go to your druggist today and get a box of GOLD MEDAL Haarlem Oil Capsules. In twenty-four hours you should feel health and vigor returning.

After you feel somewhat improved continue to take one or two capsules each day, so as to keep the first-class condition and ward off the danger of other attacks.

Ask for the original imported GOLD MEDAL brand. Three sizes. Money refunded if they do not help you.

The Effects of Opiates.

THAT INFANTS are peculiarly susceptible to opium and its various preparations, all of which are narcotic, is well known. Even in the smallest doses, if continued, these opiates cause changes in the functions and growth of the cells which are likely to become permanent, causing imbecility, mental perversion, a craving for alcohol or narcotics in later life. Nervous diseases, such as intractable nervous dyspepsia and lack of staying powers are a result of dosing with opiates or narcotics to keep children quiet in their infancy. The rule among physicians is that children should never receive opiates in the smallest doses for more than a day at a time, and only then if unavoidable.

The administration of Anodynes, Drops, Cordials, Soothing Syrups and other narcotics to children by any but a physician cannot be too strongly decried, and the druggist should not be a party to it. Children who are ill need the attention of a physician, and it is nothing less than a crime to dose them willfully with narcotics.

JUNE

IDEAL FARM LANDS

Minnesota Man at Last Found What He Sought.

After Long Search, the Wondrous Productiveness of Western Canada Was Pointed Out, and He Is Going There.

He farmed for a number of years near Windom, Minnesota, and as Mr. O. S. Marcy told it, he had done well. He had made sufficient money to see him and his wife through their remaining days.

"But there were the boys," said Mrs. Marcy, "and six of them, too—some of the six not yet back from 'overseas.' Yes, we are proud of them," the fond mother said, "but, oh! my, we had no girl," and she bemoaned that. These boys had to be looked after. "Why not settle them about you in your own neighborhood? You have good land there, splendid neighbors, and everything that might be desired."

"Yes, that is all true," replied this estimable lady, "but the land is so high-priced we couldn't afford to buy there, although worth every cent asked for it. You see we have six boys, and they are good one, too."

So, one day, three years ago, Mr. and Mrs. Marcy rigged up the automobile for a touring trip. They wanted to investigate for the boys' benefit. The journey lasted for a year. It took them through Arizona with its varied scenery, its climatic and agricultural attractions; into the canyons of Colorado they went, and the agricultural possibilities there aroused a large amount of interest. Still undecided, down into the valleys of California the automobile went. Fruit orchards were plentiful, grain fields were attractive, but the psychological time had not arrived. Reversing their way, they passed through Washington, Oregon and Montana and home. A year's journey and no, results. "Oh, yes," Mr. Marcy said, "we had a delightful time, enjoyed it all but the day and night up in Colorado, when we were held up by a wonderful snowstorm; we and six others. Planking the snow embankment, we came through safely, if a trifle inconvenienced."

It was interesting to hear these people talk. Their practical minds showed that they had not lacked opportunities for observation. They could not find what they wanted for the boys. When he was between twenty and twenty-five years of age, Mr. Marcy pictured to himself the kind of a home he wanted. He reared a family of boys and had yet to find such a place. His year's journey had been fruitless in that respect.

One day he decided he would try what Western Canada could do. He had read of it, and he had friends there who had done well. He toured the provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta. He saw the vast prairies, yielding their twenty and twenty-five, and as high as forty bushels of wheat, with enormous yields of other grains. The north central country, which afforded the grass and the shelter that made stock-raising a valuable adjunct to the growing of grain, was visited, interviews were had with the settlers, many from his own home district, and all were satisfied.

Only the other day he arranged for a car in which he will load his effects to be taken to the Alberta farm he had purchased when on his visit. Mrs. Marcy goes with him, and the six boys will follow. He found the place he had pictured in his mind when he was twenty or twenty-five years old. "I was unable to find it until I made my Western Canada visit. I bought the farm, and I am satisfied. When I saw a carload of four-year-old steers brought into the Edmonton market, weighing 1,700 pounds, that had never been inside a building nor fed a bit of grain, I was glad I had made up my mind."—Advertisement.

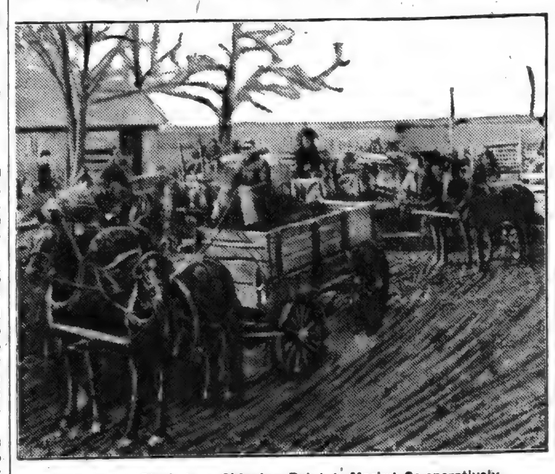
FARMERS GET BETTER RESULTS THROUGH MARKETING PRODUCTS CO-OPERATIVELY



Bringing Stock to a Shipping Point to Market Co-operatively.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Every successful manufacturing establishment has a well-organized sales department, and many farm communities are organizing co-operative marketing associations to act as their sales departments. The farmer, like the manufacturer, cannot afford to give attention to production alone, but must see that the marketing of his products is handled to best advantage.

The average farmer, however, finds it difficult to give attention to marketing necessary to obtain the best results, because his time is fully occupied with production problems. Moreover, the limited production of the average farm ordinarily prevents the operator from obtaining the highest efficiency in the sale of his products. Individuals are handicapped in securing complete market information on account of the time and expense involved, but a number of individuals can organize in a co-operative marketing organization and market their products successfully through the association, say specialists of the bureau of markets, United States department of agriculture.

May Employ Manager.

A co-operative marketing association having a sufficiently large volume of business is in a position to employ specialized marketing ability and to keep informed with respect to market conditions. The volume of business of such an organization also makes it possible to establish careful grading methods and to sell the products under brands. Desirable outlets can often be developed and maintained through co-operative effort where individual action is ineffective.

Factors such as these, together with a realization that marketing problems in a large measure are not merely individual problems but are difficulties which confront all the producers in a community, have led to the establishment of co-operative marketing associations in many localities. There are thousands of such organizations successfully operating among the farmers of the United States. They include farmers' grain elevator companies, co-operative creameries, cheese factories, fruit and vegetable marketing associations, live stock shipping organizations, and tobacco and cotton associations.

Builds Reputation for Potatoes.

An example of how co-operative associations are serving as sales departments for farming communities is shown in a western Maryland section where conditions have been found suitable for the production of seed potatoes. The farmers in this section realized from the outset that co-operative action was necessary for growers to agree on varieties and to work together on disease prevention and eradication and other important production problems. They also realized that efficient sales methods are equally as important as productive methods, and there soon developed in their organization a sales department through which their seed potatoes are successfully marketed. Through this association the section is building up a reputation for good seed potatoes, such as could not be done by growers if they sold their seed individually.

Fruit growers in a number of the valleys along the Pacific coast have developed co-operative marketing associations to a high degree. Grain growers in important grain-growing sections are successfully handling their crops in their own elevators. Dairymen in dairy sections of Wisconsin and other states are adding to their profits by organizing creameries and cheese factories. The marketing of early vegetables through co-operation has reached high development in many Southern states, and county agents in all parts of the country are helping farmers to combine their shipments of live stock so that carload lots can be sent to central markets where higher prices can frequently be obtained than on the local market.

Suggestions and assistance in connection with organization problems may be obtained from the bureau of markets, United States department of agriculture, and from the various state agricultural colleges.

CO-OPERATION GAINS RURAL POPULARITY

Experts Say It Is Not Remedy for All Market Problems.

Demand for Organized Effort Should Come From Those Who Unite to Form Organization—Members Must Give Assistance.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Much has been accomplished by the American farmer through co-operative marketing, and organized activities are gaining rapidly in popularity in rural communities. While much may be done through co-operation, it is not a remedy for all marketing difficulties, say co-operative organization men of the bureau of markets, United States department of agriculture. One of the precautions which must be observed in the organization of farmers' co-operative marketing associations is that the demand for organized effort should come from those who unite to form the organization. Another important point to be observed is that the organization should grow from a strong foundation.

The mistake is frequently made of attempting to form a large central organization before organized effort in a small way has been tried out successfully and the details of the plan carefully worked out. One of the causes of failure among co-operative organizations is lack of support from members, and on that account every care should be taken to hold them together. Ordinarily a co-operative association should cover only a limited area. If the territory included is too large, the membership is scattered, and it is difficult to keep the organization intact.

One of the principal obstacles to successful co-operation is the selfishness of the individual. It is important that the members understand clearly the purposes of the organization and the methods by which it expects to accomplish the desired results, in order that they may realize fully the responsibility resting upon them. The members should not be led to expect impossible results. Sweeping claims may serve to attract people to the association and may assist in its formation, but unless the organization is able to come up to expectations these claims are likely to react strongly. Each member should understand clearly that the success of his organization depends upon him and that it is his duty to do his part. Selfishness and petty jealousies have no place in any co-operative undertaking.

Lack of sufficient business to make operation practicable has caused many failures. A co-operative marketing association should not be undertaken unless the volume of business available is sufficient to make it worth while. As large a membership as possible should be secured, because there is a direct connection between membership and the support accorded to an organization. Disregard of this fact has resulted in the failure of some organizations.

The attitude of farmers in a community toward co-operative effort cannot be ignored. If the growers have not reached the stage where they are ready to give up individual effort for co-operative effort, failure is of course inevitable.

"I advise every person who feels bloated after eating or who cannot sleep soundly to take Pepgen. I think it is the best tonic in the world for the stomach and nerves. GROUP OF ITALIAN REFUGEES

Hundreds of thousands of people in Europe were refugees at some time or other during the war, like the little Italian family shown in this Red Cross official photograph, that fled in front of the Austrians. The men of this household were in the army. The women and children lived on nothing but yellow corn for days while they tramped to safety. It is among people like these that tuberculosis has increased terribly in the last four years.

LUCKY LITTLE YEOMAN

© Western Newspaper Union

Miss Betty Fisher, yeoman (F), second class, in the navy, is now a millionaire twice over. She has been informed that her uncle, an Oklahoma oil producer, has left her his whole fortune, which consists of properties worth over $2,000,000. The very pretty yeoman intends to stay in the navy until placed on inactive duty. She has already had a year's service. Two years ago she "roughed it" in Oklahoma with her uncle, John P. McMahon, a bachelor who ran away from home soon after his parents brought him from Ireland. As a result of that visit while he was staking out a new claim, Miss Fisher is today his sole heir. Her home is in New York city.

Made Sawdust Valuable.

Not many years ago the sawdust that accumulated each spring about the local mills was a nuisance to the mill-owners. It was in the way. Some of it was dumped into the streams and fish were exterminated, and some was given away to anyone who would make use of it. And about the only use that could be made of the sawdust was that of packing for ice in the ice-houses.

The expansion of dairy farming called for more ice, and more ice called for more sawdust. The demand notified the mill-owners that the by-product of their mills, which they had been giving away and throwing away, had a commercial value. Sawdust is now sold by the load.

Take Notice

When I moved away from my home, (thinking everything would be perfectly safe,) I left a large iron kettle there, which held many gallons. So in a short time it was discovered that someone had knocked the legs off of it. Then later on someone took it, (either to use it in time of butchering or stole it outright.) This belonged to my husband and was a family keepsake. I would recognise it from many others. If any person knowing of any one having a kettle of this description in their possession and will report same to me for investigation, I will reward them for it. Thanking you in advance.

WHY HESITATE?

Saving money is very much like getting married, easier after you have made the start than you thought it would be. Many men hesitate to marry because they fear their ability to live up to the expectations of some good woman, and in many cases their fears are well grounded. So, too, many men and women earning fair incomes delay starting a savings account, fearing they may not be able to keep it up regularly, when the very truth is, that the start is the very strongest possible incentive to continue and once the account is opened it is surprising how it grows, and how much joy there is in going without many things you formerly thought you really must have in order to see that bank account grow.

Ford

THE UNIVERSAL CAR

World-wide distribution and the continually growing demand for Ford cars are the best proofs of Ford value. Ford cars are utilities—they are positive necessities—for they have revolutionized modern business, brought country and city together, and opened up new life to the family. The Ford car has become a necessary part of everyday life.

Ford cars are not an experiment. Years of concentration on a single model have produced a motor car of proved value. It is as important in modern life as the mail service or telephone. Behind the Ford car is genuine Ford service, by competent mechanics using genuine Ford parts—with regular standard Ford prices. That is the service given by this agency.

Township Convention

The second all day Sunday school convention of Concord township was held at the Concord M. P. Church, June 15, beginning at 10:15 A. M. with a union Sunday School at which 201 were present and an offering of $14.75 was taken C. O. Johnson had charge of the adult division, A. K. Mumma of the young people and Eva Watt of the children. The county president, George Beugnot and vice president, Earl Wyatt had charge of the Sunday School. Garry L. Cook of Indianapolis, gave a short talk after the study of the lesson. After the close of the morning session a splendid basket dinner was served to over 200 people in the church basement.

At 1:30 the afternoon session began with song service led by Rev. C. O. Johnson. Mrs. George Johnson led the devotional exercises by reading a part of the 15fh. chapter of Matthew, and called for sentence prayers. Garry L. Cook gave the address of the afternoon, his subject being, "Adolescence." This period of life comes between the ages of 12 and 24, and he divided the period into three parts, Early Adolescence, when the physical appeals most; Middle Adolescence, when the emotional side of life seems to be uppermost and the latter Adolescence, the intellectual. The time of life when they demand a reason for everything which must be from a scientific standpoint. He showed himself to be a man with strong sympathies for the young people, perhaps it was because as he said he was not talking as one who had had no experience along this line but as one who now had 4 young people ranging all through the adolescent period. He also said the church is not making the appeal to the young people that she should. The church never had such an opportunity as it now has. He also spoke of the Y. M. C. A. activities telling of the good work during the past months they had done and that done under difficulties.

He ask us if we knew what he would do in every church if he had his way. First he would install a moving picture machine in the church, where the young people could have films of an uplifting and eduational nature. Second, he would put a stage in the basement, "footlights and all" where young people conld put on missionary plays and others of an educational kind. The main thing is to keep the young person busy and interested and there would be no trouble keeping them in the church. Having a good time was one of the characteristics of youth. Young life is not found in the church as it should be. Many more good things were said by Mr. Cook.

The departmental reports were not as fully given as at the March convention because of the change in the department. Childrens division superintendent, Mrs. Nellie Perry, reported a house to house visitation between April 27 to May 4 when 78 families were visited. 199 children were registered under 12 years old, 29 of whom were not in the Sunday School. Young People supt., M. T. Bishop, no written report. Adult division, J. R. Shilling supt. written report same as last convention. Rev. Johnson reported the teacher training class having been organized with an average attendance of about 15. Administrative division, F. B. Leighty supt., reported two meetings of the township officers and superintendents being held the past quarter. Three of the schools report monthly council meetings. He reported the schools all four endeavoring to reach the 100% International standard and have reached the following percent of efficiency to date: Christian, St. Joe, 100; M. P. St. Joe, 100; Lutheran, St. Joe, 90 and M. P. Concord, 70. 5 delegates has been appointed to the State convention at Marion on June 24-26, from Concord township. County president, George Beugnot made some encouraging remarks as to the standing of our township, which is 100 per cent. and that it is the second in the county to reach this standard, and that DeKalb County stands at the top in the State, having reached a 90 per cent. standard.

The evening session was not so largely attended, but an interesting time was had. "Progress in Adult Work" was the thought of the evening speaker. The possibilities being unlimited and the illustrations were practical. The fundamentals are essential to successful adult classes, organization, social gatherings and extra good teachers.

But 12 per cent. of the folks are in the Sunday school, is the report obtained from statistics.

The music of the day was furnished by the Hart Orchestra of Hicksville, which added much to the interest of the day.

Those in charge of the day are to be congratulated upon the success of the meeting. The St. Joe folks were taken by auto to Concord.

The accident occurred in the bend in the road just south of the E. Case home. Mr. Hart was in the act of lighting his pipe and this juncture and did not notice the car was leaving the road until near the small ditch, in his excitement he grabbed the wheel and attempted to turn to the road, and over they went. Mrs. Hart was bruised considerable and the son Ross has 2 broken bones in his foot besides some bruises. Elmer was held under the machine.

WHO IS WHO NOW

YORK: RED-HEADED PEACEMAKER

© Western Newspaper Union.

Sergt. Alvin C. York, Pall Mall, Fentress county, Tenn., Three Hundred and Twenty-eighth infantry, Eighty-second division (All-America), has been proclaimed as "the soldier who has distinguished himself above all men in the war in the achievement of the greatest individual deed in history." This deed is really a little battle in itself, but told as briefly as possible it is this:

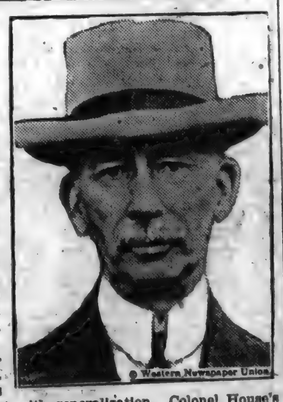
York, then corporal, October 8, 1918, killed 20 Germans with his rifle and pistol; captured 132 prisoners, including a major and three lieutenants; put 35 machine guns out of business, and thereby broke up an entire battalion which was about to counter-attack against the Americans on Hill 223 in the Argonne sector, near Chatel-Chehery.

Pall Mall is a mountain crossroads with possibly 20 houses scattered about. York was born there December 13, 1887, one of 11 children. He is a farmer and blacksmith. He provides for his mother, one brother and three little sisters. He is 6 feet and weighs 205 pounds. He is red headed. He is sure death with both rifle and pistol. As a fighter, he is the rare kind that gets cooler as the danger grows.

He used to drink a little, gamble a little and swear. He quit in 1915, and joined the Church of Christ and Christian Union, of which he is second elder and singing leader. He was a conscientious objector. His captain convinced him in camp that it was his duty to act as the peacemaker in Europe.

His "girl," Grace Williams, says: "It wasn't Alvin: it was the hand of God."

HOUSE'S INFLUENCE ON WILSON



© Western Newspaper Union.

Statesmen and laymen have speculated much upon the qualities possessed by Col. Edward M. House which give him an influence over President Wilson not possessed by any other individual—not even by any member of his cabinet.

Every now and then something comes from Paris that tends to throw light on this mystery. For example, it is now said that the American body of experts at the peace conference is probably the most notable in attendance and that Colonel House is to be thanked for its organization.

It is also said that Colonel House's great influence with the president is unquestionably due, primarily, to the fact that the president has found in the colonel a complement for his own mind.

The president's mind runs to principles—is inclined to shirk details. Relying greatly upon the power of his eloquence, he is inclined to be content with generalization. Colonel House's line of attack on difficult problems is exactly the opposite of that employed by the president.

Colonel House never made a speech in his life. He is unsentimental. He is influenced only by facts. He wants all the facts.

MISS ALICE PAUL: "JOAN OF ARC"

Alice Paul, national chairman of the National Woman's party, is called by her friends "Joan of Arc." In three years she has raised more than $300,000 and has formed a national organization of 50,000 members.

This militant leader of woman's suffrage forces is a Quaker. At first sight, in repose, she looks that part more than the militant suffragist who, for picketing the president, received a sentence of seven months' imprisonment. Her manners are quiet, her voice low. She is apt to keep her hands crossed on her lap. It is only on close scrutiny that one perceives her underlying firmness and ability to fight to a finish.

Miss Paul is a graduate of Swarthmore college and, after a course in the New York School of Philanthropy, went to England to study labor problems in the Universities of London and Birmingham. Her followers at the Washington headquarters say it was while working among the women in the slums of London that she decided to return to America and devote herself to suffrage. Before she founded the National Woman's party in 1913 she was associated with the older suffrage association. But from the first, her admirers recall, she was for downright fighting.

She resolved to take politics as she found it.

GARFIELD AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Harry A. Garfield, though retiring from the directorship of the United States fuel administration, remains in the public eye by reason of his connection with a possible program of governmental activities in connection with natural resources.

President Wilson is expected to present to congress a program which will provide for government association in the development of coal, oil and gas resources. His plan is not one of outright government ownership, it is said, but one which contemplates supervision and direction which will make impossible privately owned monopolies of these natural resources.

For some time Doctor Garfield has been working out a plan for the president. The purpose, it is understood, would be to obtain a more equitable distribution of these necessities of industrial life and eliminate the capitalistic dictatorship which has heretofore been in effect. Practically the greater part of the oil and anthracite coal output of this country is in the hands of powerful interests, and new gas wells are likely to be gobbled up as fast as they are discovered.

NEW FOULARDS TO HOLD HIGH FAVOR

Fabric Resplendent in Sprawling Designs Which Almost Cover Surface.

SPANISH VOGUE GAINS HOLD

Wide and Bouffant Skirts With Rather Tight Bodices Are in Evidence—Silken Gowns Are Beruffled.

After all is said and done, for the perfect summer wardrobe no gown ever gives quite as much satisfaction as does the one of some soft and clinging silk of a quiet color which permits it to be worn on any and all occasions. For this reason, observes a prominent fashion correspondent, the lovely foulards never seem to lose their popularity and year after year find their faithful friends who exploit them with undying devotion.

The newest weaves and designs in this sort of silk are resplendent in their huge sprawling effects which almost entirely cover the silken suface of the blue. White is usually preferred to all other tones though the sand and champagne shades are coming a good deal into favor especially for a combination of foulard and georgette.

One of the most satisfactory combinations, indeed, is achieved when these two fabrics are placed together. Since the smock is so important this summer and the chemise blouse is equally as much in demand, some excellent results are obtained by combining a georgette jacket with short French sleeves tipped with foulard and a belt of the silk slipped over a skirt of the foulard silk. To further enhance the beauty of the simple jacket or overblouse a deep hem of the foulard may be placed along the bottom edge.

One of the happiest results in summer things is the effect of smart simplicity for one wants to get away from the heavier and elaborate affairs of other seasons—the sort of dress just described is enchanting because of its extreme simplicity. It has been well developed in a gray foulard with a round cherry colored figure scattered over the surface, the silk being used for the skirt and a gray georgette of the exact shade being employed for the soft loose blouse. A preference for very narrow belts is noted and in this instance a mere ribbon string of cherry color is entwined about the waist with one of gray.

The Spanish Vogue.

Just who is responsible for the Spanish vogue no one seems to know, but that there is such a vogue no one can deny. Even in the matter of skirts one finds again and again the wide and bouffant models with rather tight bodices which are so often observed in Spanish paintings. The effect is achieved often by the addition of wide and very full ruffles placed along the bottom of the skirt which standing out give the desired effect of extra fullness.

Black taffetas and henna-colored chiffon have been happily placed together in a dress of the Spanish type. The taffeta is embroidered in henna silk and used to form a rather tight petticoat, over which fall wide side draperies from under a long pointed "basque." Down the front of the petticoat are placed henna silk tassels, which give a most unusual effect, while the crossed pieces of the waist, which end in the deep point in front, recall portraits of long ago.

Henna chiffon is used to form the upper part of the waist, the sleeves of which are longer than the French sleeves, but still are merely elbow length. It has been rather interesting to note to just what extent the bebe sleeves would be adopted for street wear, and as yet one finds little disposition to leave off the lower part of the sleeve when the dress is intended for more or less general service. The French frocks which came over earlier were frankly short as to sleeve and skirt, but later models arriving have added length to both.

The fancy for ostrich trimming continues at such a pace that an imported model of black taffetas is ornamented down the sides of the skirt with huge round disks of ostrich fronds held in place with rhinestone buckles. The tiny sleeves of chiffon are edged with the bright blue feather trimming placed almost like a fringe around the armhole and down the front of the bodice also. This is intended to illustrate the novel way in which the feather trimming can be employed, for the result is certainly striking enough for only the most daring to adopt.

The summer silken gown is finding itself beruffled in a way we have not seen in many years. A particularly youthful model in a ruffled skirt is a black taffeta with the same tight little narrow skirt women have been wearing for some time. Tiny frills of black net placed very close and from the top to the bottom of the skirt relieve the effect of skimpiness and make the whole very soft and light. We need not attempt to deny the fashion of the black taffetas gown—everything that clever makers and designers can do to take away its old and stiff look has been done—as is seen in this charming model. The bodice is not quite so befrilled as the skirt, but reproduces the tiny net frills in small clusters down the front in a vestee shape. The sleeves are likewise finished with the frills and a wide flowing sash of the net finishes the dress prettily.

An Attractive Dress of Crepe de Chine, and a Favorite of Foulard With Organdie Vestee and Sash.

Of course, in the demand for a dress of service for summer wear, such as a shopping expedition into the city from one's country place may demand, the darker tones are given preference and the tricolette, georgette and voile rank in favor with the foulards. We see less of the veiled foulards than last season displayed though they were such pleasing frocks with the big sprawling surfaces softly hidden under voile or georgette that possibly there may be a revival later on.

Challis Popular.

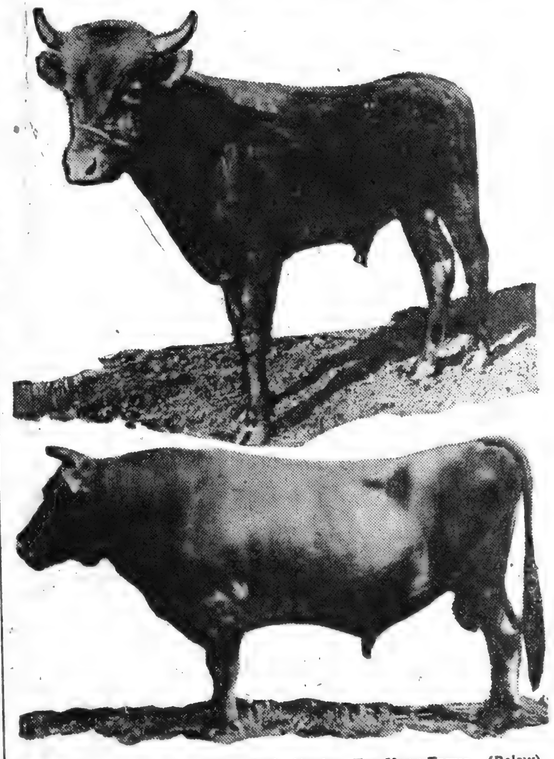
Strange to say, challis is having a rage such as no other fabric, not even tricolette can boast. The soft woolen material is esteemed for the utility dress as developed in the silks. The darker tones are likewise chosen in this, and collars, cuffs and sashes of crisp white organdie added for morning wear.

Challis were popular 25 years ago, but for some reason they have not been much used except for little girls' dresses and dainty boudoir gowns. Now, however, one's possession of a challis frock stamps one as being well aware of fashion's latest whim. Hats and parasols made of the same material as the dress are much seen. The challis hats, like the dresses, have organdie trimmings put on either in little flutings along the edge or that are tied in a wide bow in front. The parasols also repeat the organdie ruffles.

There is a certain demureness and quaintness about this old-time material which suggests quiet country towns and restful rural life, for though people in large cities have for so long forgotten challis, those who live in less hurried and crowded places seem always to keep a "best" challis for "occasions." The shirt waist type of dress lends itself well to the soft woolen fabric and embellished with the organdie makes the whole pleasing.

There is no material which will answer better for a hurried morning's motor trip into the city or informal wear in the country, for challis will not crush and rumple, and if one selects the colors carefully, one frock will go through a summer satisfactorily.

CO-OPERATIVE BULL ASSOCIATION SOLVES PROBLEM OF IMPROVEMENT OF DAIRY HERD



(Above) The "Expensive" Scrub Bull A Good Type of Dairy Bull Such as Used on Too Many Farms. (Below) Co-operative Bull Associations Use.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Practically all of the 23,000,000 dairy cows in the United States can be bred to purebred sires at less cost than grade bulls are costing their owners at present, declare specialists in the United States department of agriculture. Not only that but the amount of dairy products can in a few years be greatly increased without increasing the number of dairy cows or the cost of production. How can this be done? Simply by discarding all grade and scrub bulls and breeding dairy cows to nothing but good purebred sires with ancestors possessing high-production records.

"But I can't afford to own a purebred bull," says Mr. Average Farmer. "I keep only six cows. There isn't a purebred bull within ten miles of my farm. I can't afford either the time or the money to take my cows to the only available purebred bull near me. So how can I hope ever to improve my dairy cattle and increase the production of milk without increasing the number of cows I keep?"

The community bull association is the answer to Mr. Average Farmer's question. While few farmers can afford to own or use a $1,000 bull, any farmer can afford to own a share in one, regardless of whether he owns only four or five cows. By belonging to a bull association every farmer can use good purebred bulls, no matter what the size of his dairy herd is. In fact it is less expensive than using a scrub bull.

Community Breeding Successful.

The dairy division of the United States department of agriculture started organizing bull associations four years ago. There are now 55 such associations successfully operating in 21 states. Progressive farmers are quick to see the advantages of the plan, once it is explained to them. It is simply an organization of farmers for the joint ownership, use and exchange of high-class purebred bulls.

These societies also encourage careful selection of cows and calves; introduce better methods of feeding and housing; assist their members in marketing dairy stock and dairy products; fight the contagious diseases of cattle, and in many other ways help in putting the dairy business of their communities on a more profitable basis.

The typical co-operative bull association is composed of from ten to fifty farmers living in the same county. These farmers jointly purchase five bulls. The territory covered by the members is divided into five "breeding blocks," and a bull is assigned to each block. The bull is kept on a farm conveniently located.

Bulls Useful Ten Years.

To prevent inbreeding the bulls are interchanged every two years. The same bulls can thus be used for ten years in one association. This gives plenty of time to determine a bull's real value, and to select the offspring of the best bulls for breeding purposes.

Thus at small cost a purebred bull for every thirty to eighty cows is provided for ten years. And the only cost after the bulls are paid for is the cost of keeping the bulls.

The purchase price and the expense of keeping the bulls are distributed among the members of the association according to the number of cows owned by each. It is easily seen what an assessment of $10 per cow (amounting to $1 a year for ten years) will do in providing good bulls. Such bulls build up his dairy herd, and increase the production of milk, without increasing his expenses. Farmers belonging to bull associations, when questioned regarding the value of these societies, estimated that the use of bulls belonging to the organization increased the value of the offspring in the first generation from 30 to 80 per cent, with an average of 65 per cent.

A good bull's influence on the herd will be noticeable for many generations. Likewise the damage done by an inferior bull will be equally great. No other argument should be necessary to convince every owner of dairy cows that he should join a bull association.

BE BUSINESSLIKE

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Business that is spasmodic, careless, or otherwise not dependable, is not profitable. Some farmers send their produce to market on consignment without any previous notice to the commission merchant and in such cases the latter has no opportunity to prepare for a satisfying sale. Some farmers take no pains in making shipments regularly so as to enable the merchant to build up a profitable demand for the products.

In justice to himself, as well as the commission man, the farmer should find what the market demands, try as far as possible to meet this demand, always make products appear attractive, and deliver them at regular intervals.

PASTURING CROPS FOR HOGS

Should Be Planted on Well-Drained and Especially Prepared Soil, Well Manured.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Pasturing crops for hogs should be sown on especially well-drained and prepared land that is either rich or has received a liberal application of manure. Good winter pasture is not obtained except on the best-drained lands.

LIVE STOCK NOTES

Mule colts are very hardy and thrifty.

* * *

It will be a difficult matter to make a profit on the animals this year unless you raise plenty of feed.

* * *

See that the live stock are "alive." One way to do this is to produce plenty of feed to enliven them.

Spelts is bulky like oats, and for this reason should not be fed alone to hogs, or in the whole form.

* * *

Watch the sheep when the spring rains come on. A wetting then digs deep into the profits of the year.

Roots to a considerable degree may be supplemented for high-priced concentrates usually fed to live stock.

Some men, men who have fixed for it, are finding that the two-litter a year plan is producing good returns.

For growing pigs on alfalfa pasture and fattening them when having access to alfalfa hay, a grain ration of corn proved more efficient than a grain ration of two parts corn and one part shorts.

WOLVES of the SEA

It was as though my brain snapped back into ascendency. I was no longer a raging fury, mad with the desire to kill, but cool-headed, planning escape. Before a hand could reach me in restraint, I sprang backward and ran. I stumbled up the stairs leading to the companion. The vague glimmer of daylight showing through the glass, revealed the presence of Watkins. I heard him dash the door wide open, call to those on deck, and then saw him wheel about to again confront the devils plunging blindly forward toward us through the dark cabin. We could hold them for a time at least, yet I had the sense to know that this check would prove only temporary. They out-numbered us ten to one, and would arm themselves from the rack. Yet the greater danger lay in the possible disloyalty of my own men. A dozen of us might hold these stairs against assault, but treachery would leave us helpless. If one among them should steal below forward, and force open the door from the forecastle, we would be crushed between two waves of men, and left utterly helpless. I saw the whole situation vividly, and as quickly chose the one hope remaining.

"Watkins," I called sharply back over my shoulder. "Get the boats ready and be lively about it. We'll hold these fellows until you report. The two quarterboats will hold us all. Knock out the plugs in the others. See that Miss Fairfax is placed safely in the afterboat, and then stand by. Send me word the moment all is ready."

I had glimpse of the thick fog without as he pushed through the door, and of a scarcely distinguishable group of men on the deck. Those about me could only be located by their restless movements. I stepped down one stair conscious of increasing movement below, the meat cleaver still gripped in my hands.

"Any of you armed with cutlasses?"

"Oui, m'sieur, Ravel DeLasser."

"Stand here, to right of me, now another at my left. Who are you?"

"Jim Carter, sir."

"Good; now strike hard, lads, and you others be ready. The cabin is full of 'em, and it is your life and mine in the balance. If we can get away in this fog they'll never find us, but we've got to hold them here until the boats are ready. I killed their captain, Sanches. That is where we've still got them, without a leader."

"But they've got arms?"

"Only hand weapons," broke in Carter. "There's ball in the bandoliers, but no powder. I was goin' ter break open a cask, but Estada put me at another job."

"Then that leaves us on even footing, lads, we ought to be equal to them with the cold steel."

CHAPTER XXIV.

In Clasp of the Sea.

The sounds of voices and of moving bodies were plainly discernible, but the darkness was too dense below to permit the eye perceiving what was taking place. The rattle of steel told me some among them had reached the arm rack. There followed the crash of wood as though the butt of a gun had splintered a door panel. Then a voice pierced the babel. My mind gripped the meaning of it all; they had found a leader; they had released Manuel Estevan. Now the real fight was on! I could hear the fellow question those about him, seeking to learn the situation.

"Who have cutlasses? So many! a dozen form with me. Now bullies, they are on the stairs there, and that is the only way to the deck. Now then—to hell with 'em!"

We met them, point to point, our advantage the narrow staircase and the higher position; theirs the faint glimmer of light at our backs. The first rush was reckless and deadly, the infuriated devils not yet realising what they faced, but counting on force of numbers to crush our defense. Manuel led them yelling encouragement, and sweeping his cutlass, gripped with both hands, in desperate effort to break through. DeLasser caught its point with his blade while my cleaver missing him with its sharp edge, nevertheless dealt the fellow a blow which hurled him back into the arms of the man behind. I saw nothing else in detail, the faint light barely revealing indistinct figures and gleam of steel. It was a pandemonium of blows and yells, strange faces appearing and disappearing, as men leaped desperately at us up the steps, and we beat them remorselessly back. I saw nothing more of Manuel in the fray, but his shrill voice urged on his fellows. It was strike and parry, cut and thrust. Twice I kicked my legs free from hands that gripped me and DeLasser fell, a pike thrust through him. Who took his place I never knew, but a stout fighter the lad was, wielding his cutlass viciously, so that we held them, with dead men littering every step to the cabin deck.

But they were of a breed trained to such fighting, and the lash of Manuel's tongue drove them into mad recklessness. And there seemed no end of them, sweeping up out of those black shadows, with bearded or lean brown savage faces, charging over the dead bodies, hacking and gouging in vain effort to break through. I struck until my arms ached, until my head reeled, scarcely conscious of physical action, yet aware of Manuel's shouts.

"Now you hell-hounds—now! once more, and you have them. Santa Maria! you've got to go through, bullies—there is no other way to the deck. Rush 'em! That's the way! Here you—go in outside the rail! Broth of hell! Now you have him, Pedro!"

For an instant I believed it true; I saw Jim Carter seized and hurled sideways, his cutlass clashing as it fell, while a dozen hands dragged him headlong into the ruck beneath. But it was only an instant. Before the charging devils could pass me, a huge figure filled the vacant space, and the butt of a gun crashed into the mass. It was the Dutchman, Schmitt, fighting like a demon, his strength that of an ox. They gave way in terror before him, and we went down battering our way, until the stairs were clear to the deck, except for the dead under foot. When we stopped, not a fighting man was left within the sweep of our arms. They scurried back into the darkness like so many rats, and we could only stare about blindly, cursing them, as we endeavored to recover breath. Schmitt roared like a wild bull, and would have rushed on, but for my grip on his shirt.

"Get back, men!" I ordered sharply. "There may be fifty of them yonder. Our only chance is the stairs."

We flung the bodies on one side, and formed again in from rail to rail. Below us there was noise enough, a babel of angry voices, but no movement of assault. What they would do next was answered by a blaze of light, revealing the silhouette of a man, engaged in touching flame to a torch of hemp. It flung forth a dull yellow flare, and revealed a scene of horror. Our assailants were massed halfway back. Between us, even ten feet from the stairs, the deck was littered with bodies, ghastly faces staring up, with black stains of blood everywhere. It was Manuel's hand which had kindled the light, and the first croak of his voice told his purpose.

The First Rush Was Reckless and Deadly.

"Now you skulking cowards," he yelled pointing forward, "do you see what you are fighting? There are only five men between you and the deck. To hell with 'em! Come on! I'll show you the way!"

He leaped forward; but it was his last step. I sent the cleaver hurtling through the air. I know not how it struck him, but he went down, his last word a shriek, his arms flung out in vain effort to ward off the blow. Schmitt roared out a Dutch oath, and his gun, sent whirling above me, crashed into the uplifted torch. Again it was black night, through which the eye could perceive nothing. Even the noise ceased, but a hand gripped my shoulder.

"Who are you?"

"Watkins! The boats are ready. The one forward has pushed off loaded. The afterboat is alongside. There is such a fog, sir, yer can't see two fathoms from the ship. The girl is in the boat, but LeVere aint. The mate slipped out o' sight in the fog. He's somewhere aboard."

"Never mind him; the fellow can do no harm now. Move back slowly lads, Schmitt and I will be the last ones out."

We closed the companion door as silently as possible and for the moment there was no sound from within to show that our cautious withdrawal had been observed. I stared about, but was able to perceive little beyond the small group awaiting my orders. The fog clung thick and heavy on all sides, and it was impossible for the eye to penetrate to either rail. Fortunately there was no weight of sea running.

"There is nothing more to keep us aboard lads. Stow yourselves away and hang on; I'll wait here until you are all over."

They faded away into the mist, dim spectral figures, and I remained alone, listening anxiously for some hostile sound from below. Satisfied that the lads were safely over the rail and the decks clear, I turned toward the ship's side. As I did so a yell reached my ears from the blackness below—the hounds had found voice.

I ran through the fog in the direction the others had disappeared, and had taken scarcely three steps when I collided against the form of a man, whose presence was not even noticed until we came together. Yet he must have been there expectant and ready, for a quick knife thrust slashed the front of my jacket, bringing a spurt of blood as the blade was jerked back. Even as my fingers gripped the uplifted wrist, ere he could strike the second time, I knew my antagonist. I knew also this was a fight to the death, to be terminated before that unguarded crew below could attain the deck. It was LeVere's life or mine, and in the balance the fate of those others in the waiting boat alongside. The knowledge gave me the strength and the ferocity of a tiger. I ripped the knife from his fingers, and we closed with bare hands, his voice uttering one croaking cry for help as I bore in on his windpipe. He was a snake, a cat, slipping out of my grasp as by some magic. At last I had him against the rail, the weight of us both so hard upon it that the stout wood broke, and we both went over, grappling until we splashed into the water below. The shock loosened my hold; as I fought a way back to the surface I was alone. My strength began to fail, hope left me as I sank deeper and deeper into the remorseless grip of the ocean. I was not afraid; my lips uttered no cry, no prayer—I drifted out into total unconsciousness and went down.

CHAPTER XXV.

The Open Boat.

I came back to a consciousness of pain, unable at once to realize where I was, or feel any true sense of personality. Then slowly I comprehended that I rested in a boat, tossed about by a fairly heavy sea; that it was night and there were stars visible in the sky overhead. I stared at these, vacant of thought, when a figure seemed to lean over me, and I caught the outline of a face, gazing eagerly down into my own. Instantly memory came back in a flash—this was not death, but life; I was in a boat with her. I could not move my hands, and my voice was but a hoarse whisper.

"Mistress Fairfax—Dorothy!"

"Yes—yes," swiftly. "It is all right, but you must lie still. Watkins, Captain Carlyle is conscious. What shall I do?"

He must have been behind us at the steering oar, for his gruff, kindly voice sounded very close.

"Yer might lift him up, miss," he said soberly. "He'll breathe better. How's that, Captain?"

"Much easier," I managed to breathe. "I guess I am all right now. You fished me out?"

"Sam did. He got a boat hook in your collar. We cast off when yer went overboard, and cruised about in the fog hunting for yer. Who was it yer was fightin' with, sir?"

"LeVere."

"That's what I told the lads. He's a gonner, I reckon?"

"I never saw him after we sank. Are all the men here?"

"All but those in the forward boat, sir. They got away furst, an' we ain't had no sight ov 'em since. Maybe we will when it gets daylight. Harwood's in charge. I give him a compass, an' told him ter steer west. Was that right?"

"All I could have told him. I haven't had an observation, and it is all guesswork. I know the American coast lies to that direction, but that is about all. I couldn't tell if it be a hundred, or a hundred and fifty miles away. I must have been in bad shape when you pulled me in?"

"We thought you was gone, sir. You was bleedin' some, too, but only from flesh wounds. The young lady she just wouldn't let yer die. She worked over yer for two or three hours, sir, afore I hed any hope."

Her eyes were downcast and her face turned away, but I reached out my hand and clasped her fingers. The mystery of the night and ocean was in her motionless posture. Only as her hand gently pressed mine did I gain courage, with a knowledge that she recognised and welcomed my presence.

"Watkins says I owe my life to you," I said, so low the words were scarcely audible above the dash of water alongside. "It will make that life more valuable than ever before."

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

LESSON FOR JUNE 22

LOVE.

LESSON TEXT—I Cor. 13.

GOLDEN TEXT—Now abideth faith, hope, love, these three; but the greatest of these is love.—I Cor. 13:13.

ADDITIONAL MATERIAL—Lev. 19:18; Deut. 6:4, 5; John 10:27; 3:16; I John 4:7-21.

PRIMARY TOPIC—How to Show Our Love.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Whom We Should Love and How.

INTERMEDIATE TOPIC—The Greatest Thing in the World.

SENIOR AND ADULT TOPIC—The Strongest Bond Between Men and Women.

The best gift of the Holy Spirit is the love of God shed abroad in our hearts. Not all can teach, preach, work miracles, speak with tongues; but the gift of love is within reach of all. The "more excellent way" of the last verse of chapter 12 is the way of love. Love is not a mere sentiment or emotion, but a mighty dynamic which transforms the life, expressing itself in practical service to men.

I. The Pre-eminence of Love (vv. 1-3).

It transcends:

(1) Speaking with tongues. For men to possess the loftiest eloquence, to be able to speak in other languages, and to be lacking in love is to be as sounding brass and a tinkling cymbal. Pleasing and powerful speaking is desirable, but to love is better.

(2) The gift of prophecy. To disclose the events of the future, to be able to unfold all mysteries—of nature and providence—is good but to love is better.

(3) Faith of the most vigorous kind. Such as would remove mountains.

(4) Philanthropy of the most generous sort, prompting one to surrender all earthly goods for the sake of the poor.

(5) Heroism which leads even to martyrdom without love is profitless.

II. The Attributes of Love (vv. 4-7).

1. It is long-suffering and kind. It means not only to bear long but to be kind all the while. Patience is a remarkable virtue. It is much easier to bear long than to show the spirit of kindness all the while.

2. It is free from envy. Those who love are free from that envy which is engendered because of the good, or the success of others.

3. It is free from empty boasting. Love has as its supreme aim the doing of good to all and does not seek their admiration and applause.

4. It is well behaved. Love is polite and mannerly. It knows how to behave at all times.

5. It is unselfish. Love seeks the good of others and is forgetful of self.

6. Does not give way to passion. It is not quick tempered. It is not easily aroused to resentment.

7. It takes no delight in evil; does not impute evil motives to others; is not suspicious, but forgiving.

8. It rejoices in the truth. It sympathizes with that which is true and has a common joy with it.

9. It beareth all things—that is, it incases itself with its own mantle and shuts all evil out.

10. It is trustful, hopeful and firm.

III. The Permanence of Love (vv. 8-13).

Prophecy, as prediction, will be fulfilled; prophecy, as teaching, will be brought to an end in the day when teaching is not needed. "And they shall not teach every man his neighbor, and every man his brother, saying, Know the Lord: for all shall know me, from the least to the greatest" (Heb. 8:11; cf. Jer. 31:34). Tongues shall cease, for as the languages of earth were caused by God's judgment for sin so shall Christ's redemption bring the nations back to one tongue. Knowledge shall be done away with by a wider and nobler intelligence. The twilight shall be lost in the day. Childhood shall be lost in maturity, for at Christ's coming we shall see him face to face and be like him. Love will always abide, for God is love.

The School of Gentleness.

With what infinite gentleness the Great Physician ministered to bruised reeds and broken hearts! What tender names he gave them! "Son!" "Daughter!" He was never rough, never brusque, never impatient, never in a hurry! His tender approach was part of the cure. His very touch had healing power. He handled the burdens of men in such a way as to immediately make them lighter. Many a broken heart was strangely comforted by his presence even before the life had been made whole. Most surely the hospital work of our Saviour was a school of gentleness!

Do Not Shun the Light.

The man who shuns the light forfeits his own final peace of heart. He who refuses to face his worst forfeits the possibility of finding his best. He does not solve the question of his sinfulness; he shelves it.—Percy C. Ainsworth.

Silence.

If the prudence of reserve and decorum dictates silence in some circumstances, in others prudence of a higher order may justify us in speaking our thoughts.—Burke.

Everything Lovely.

"Howdy, Gap!" saluted an acquaintance, upon meeting the well known Rumpus Ridge citizen on a shopping expedition in Tumlinville. "How's everything going with you?"

"Finer'n frog hair, Jurd!" triumphantly replied Gap Johnson. "Of course, my wife has been sorter puny, yur of late, and several of the children have got the measles and mumps and one thing and another, and the lightning struck the corner of the house tuther night and like to have tore the whole place to pieces, and one of the kids fell out of a tree and broke his arm, and a feller took a shot at me day before yesterday and ventilated my ear, and such as that, but I swapped for a running horse last week, and a couple of my hounds have got six pups apiece. Aw, I tell you, they can't keep a good man down!"—Kansas City Star.

Well Known.

I was hurrying home up the hill when a little boy came rushing down in such haste that he ran headlong into me. He was quite breathless and very flushed.

"Have you seen my pa?" he managed to stammer.

"I don't know your pa, little boy," said I.

He looked at me in round-eyed wonder and his pink cheeks fairly stuck out.

"You don't know my pa?" he said incredulously. "Why, I know pa just as easy!"—Exchange.

KNEW THAT WOULD STOP HIM

Lawyer Evidently Was Well Acquainted With the Weakness of His Long-Winded Friend.

C. H. Murphy relates the story of a Philadelphia lawyer, retired, who, in the days of his active practice, was notorious for his long-windedness.

On one occasion he had been spouting forth his concluding argument for six hours, and the end was nowhere in sight, when the opposing attorney beckoned his associate and whispered:

"Can't you stop him, Jack?"

"I'll stop him in two minutes," Jack replied confidently. And he wrote and passed to the orator the following note:

"My Dear Colonel—As soon as you finish your magnificent argument I would like you to join me at the hotel in a bumper of rare old Bourbon."

The lawyer halted in the midst of an impassioned period, put on his glasses, and read the note that had been handed him, then he removed his glasses again and, taking up his hat and bag, he said:

"And now, may it please the court and gentlemen of the jury, I leave the case with you."

A minute later he was proceeding in stately fashion in the direction of the hotel bar.

Warning!

Possibly not many people know that the children who are coasting on the sidewalks, are violating a state law, and are subject to punishment for a criminal offence. Of course, ignorance of the law excuses no one, but that no one may have reason to complain, we cite you to Section 816, Page 784, of Thornton's laws of Cities and Towns:

Sec. 816—Driving on Sidewalks. It shall be unlawful for any person to ride or drive on the brick, stone or gravel sidewalk of any village, or upon any similar sidewalk for the use of foot passengers by the side of any public highway in this state unless in the necessary act of crossing.

Sec. 817—Any person who shall violate any of the provisions of this act, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding three dollars.

Note 1.—This is a state or criminal prosecution, and an offender may be prosecuted before any Justice of the Peace in the County or the Circuit Court.

The attention of the Town Marshall is called to this notice, and he is hereby instructed to see that the above law is lived up to.

By Order of Town Board.

THE SHALLOT

The shallot is a variety of small onion that is frequently planted in early spring for its small bulbs, or "cloves," which are used in the same manner as onions. The leaves are utilized for flavoring. Another onionlike plant is the chive, the small round, hollow leaves of which are used for flavoring soups. These leaves may be cut freely, as they are soon replaced by others.

FARM BUREAU MAKES WAR ON HOG PLAGUE

Cholera Now Apparently Under Control in Missouri County.

Farmers Get Prompt Co-operation in Any Move for Good of Farming—Practical Value of Farm Bureau Is Demonstrated.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

A well-meant effort in 1917 to give free demonstrations in hog-cholera vaccination in Dunkin county, Mo. failed utterly.

But in 1918 6,700 hogs on 424 farms in that county were vaccinated between April 8 and September 20, and cholera is now apparently under control there.

In 1917 the farmers of Dunkin county had no central organization of their own through which a campaign against hog cholera could be conducted.

Hogs Kept Under Unhealthful Conditions.

In 1918 they had a farm bureau with active committees in every community in the county—which accounts for the difference. Now they can get prompt co-operation in any move for the good of farming. Hog cholera had long been taking toll of the hogs of Dunkin county, and in April, 1917, the county bureau decided to inaugurate a general eradication campaign. Each community committee was notified that the county agent and a veterinarian of the United States department of agriculture would visit the community on a certain date, prepared to vaccinate hogs. Farmers were urged to get their hogs into pens beforehand, a necessary preliminary, as hogs are ordinarily allowed to run at large in that region.

The response to the appeal of the local committeeman was prompt and general. Hogs were offered for vaccination in every community in the county. In a short time 5,500 animals, on 350 farms, had been given the simultaneous treatment, and the disease was apparently checked. A few weeks later, however, other outbreaks occurred and the work was resumed. 1,200 hogs, on 74 farms, being vaccinated. Now, although hog cholera has not been stamped out altogether, it is apparently under control and its virtual eradication seems assured, since the farmers of the region have been convinced by actual demonstration of the value of vaccination.

The campaign has shown, also, the practical value of the farm bureau organization. Without the aid of the farmers' own organization, the county agent and the federal veterinarian would have been almost powerless to accomplish much in meeting the emergency.

MAKE FARMHOUSE CHEERFUL

An Investment That Brings Profitable Returns—Wholesome Relaxation Is Needed.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Apart from the esthetic value to be derived from it, beautifying the farm dwelling, modernizing its equipment, is good business. It is an investment that brings profitable returns. The farmer and his family need wholesome relaxation just as much as any person constantly employed. The home should be the place in which to obtain it.

An attractive dwelling with an inviting approach acts as a magnet on the tired toiler. The sight of flowers and a well-kept lawn is a relief from the drab clods of the plowed field, the brightness of the blossoms a change from the sameness in the color of growing crops. A cheery interior at once dispels care and bright rooms induce rest.

Every dollar judiciously spent on labor-saving devices and for sanitary conveniences is an investment and labor-saving contrivances a necessity in these days of enlightenment. They save wear and tear on the human machine and prolong life.

Many People Poisoned

Scores of people meet death each year by a slow process of poisoning that is going on within our bodies. This poisoning is caused by the liver and kidneys failing to perform their proper function. Poisonous matter accumulates within the body and health declines. The unsightly liver splotches, billiousness, headache and dissiness, bad taste in the mouth, coated tongue, a pain in the back or under the shoulder blade, a tired or achy feeling are some of the most common symptoms of this poisoning. If this poisoning it not expelled and the cause removed the resisting power is finally gone and life pays the penalty. Are you of the heedless class or are you safeguarding your health? If you want health you must keep the liver, kidneys and bowels active. Glando Tonic is what you need to restore this activity and expell the poisons. Keep on the safe side and use a reliable remedy. Glando Tonic is put up in a treatment form and guaranteed to do the work. Ask your druggist for a large $1 treatment. Take it as directed and you will be surprised to know how much poison was stored up within your body. When the liver is inactive a mucus or slime collects within the stomach and bowels which hinders digestion and the assimilation of food. This is called catarrh of the stomach or bowels. Glando Tonic cuts this slime and mucus and removes it. A nauceated feeling is sometimes experienced when this mucus is breaking loose but as soon as it is removed from the bowels, you will feel fine, the complexion clear, the appetite return and you will want to tell others of your wonderful cure.

Glando Tonic is sold by druggists or may be secured by sending direct to the Gland-Aid Co., Fort Wayne, Indiana.

Half Shoes for Women in the Black and the Brown Kid.

Women are wearing half shoes this spring, both because the new oxfords are so attractive in appearance, and because the season has been favorable for the very general wearing of low shoes,

Those who do not buy their shoes by chance, but use discrimination in making a selection, enjoy exercising their choice among the several new styles at Lawrence's. These show distinctive character, assured style, correct fitting quality, fine leathers, high quality shoemaking. They set properly, without gaping at side and heel. Also made to keep their shape in service, and to wear well.

METHODISTS SHOULD GATHER NEW ZEAL

Centenary an Inspiration Says Dr. Fisher.

Dr. Fred Fisher of New York, who has been assistant executive secretary of the Methodist Centenary drive, has turned his entire organization to the job of mobilizing Methodism in Columbus, June 20 to July 13.

In outlining the campaign he has placed before 78,000 committeemen of the Methodist Church, he says: "We must stress four things. First, this will be a big Victory Celebration. The Methodists of the United States have lived more in the past year than in any 10 previous years of their existence. Now is the time for them to get together and celebrate their victory.

"In the second place, this is an opportunity for Methodists to have visualized the scenes and activities of which they have been talking for the past year, but of which they have no personal knowledge. Of these 78,000 men, only a negligible per cent has ever had the opportunity of going abroad. At the celebration they can get the trip around the world at their convenience.

"Third, this is the time to 'finish the job,' to gather inspiration and information to enable the organized workers in the church to carry out the program which has been mapped out for the next four years.

"Fourth, and most important of all, if the Celebration realizes the ideals which those who are back of it hold, it must be the inspiration for planning work for the next century. As we look upon the marvels that have been accomplished we should gather new faith and new zeal for enterprises that can be measured only in terms of another century. We must, in a word, weld ourselves together in a great spiritual purpose to strike the bull's eye."

Dr. Fisher indicated that 150 trained executives, in addition to the 78,000 volunteer workers, will stimulate interest in the Centenary Celebration during the next six weeks.

JULY 7 NEGRO DAY

Trips Planned For Visitors to Methodist Centenary.

Negro Methodists in Columbus as Centenary Celebration visitors, will make a pilgrimage to Upper Sandusky, birthplace of the Home Missionary movement, to honor the memory of its founder, John Stewart, a man of their own race. The trip is scheduled for Saturday July 5.

Other trips planned include a visit to the grave of Ben Hanby, author of "Nellie Gray," in Otterbein cemetery; to Ohio Wesleyan University, Delaware; perhaps in smaller numbers to Wilberforce, and possible to Oberlin, where so many found, by underground route, safe haven in Civil war days.

Monday, July 7, has been designated officially as "Negro Day," and will be observed at the Centenary Celebration grounds with an elaborate program of pageantry, addresses, special music and parades. For this occasion, Dr. W. E. Dubois, editor of The Crisis, published in New York, has written a pageant, "The Star of Ethiopia," which will be produced in the Coliseum by colored participants. The theme of the pageant is the evolution of the race traced through progressive stages of achievement to the present day. A chorus of 500 voices, all Negroes, will present the pageant music.

THE MAKING OF A FAMOUS MEDICINE

How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Is Prepared For Woman's Use.

A visit to the laboratory where this successful remedy is made impresses even the casual looker-on with the reliability, accuracy, skill and cleanliness which attends the making of this great medicine for woman's ills.

Over 350,000 pounds of various herbs are used anually and all have to be gathered at the season of the year when their natural juices and medicinal substances are at their best.

The most successful solvents are used to extract the medicinal properties from these herbs.

Every utensil and tank that comes in contact with the medicine is sterilized and as a final precaution in cleanliness the medicine is pasteurized and sealed in sterile bottles.

It is the wonderful combination of roots and herbs, together with the skill and care used in its preparation which has made this famous medicine so successful in the treatment of female ills.

The letters from women who have been restored to health by the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound which we are continually publishing attest to its virtue.

General Pershing's War Map.

In installing General Pershing's war map in the old National Museum building in Washington, the commander's room at the front just as it looked when the map was in actual use, is being reproduced as a setting. Here will be the chairs used by the general and his aids while they studied the map, which changed hourly, night and day, as reports came in and were recorded. The table at which the officers looked over documents will stand as it used to at one side, and the walls will be covered with the identical linoleum that was a background for the map. The map was brought over in pieces now joined together, and the conventional design of the linoleum is said to give an odd kitchenlike domesticity to the room in which General Pershing watched history writing itself in a very literal sense on the wall.

Authors' Handwriting.

If readers and admirers of the polished sentences of popular authors could see the original manuscripts from which their works are printed they would be given interesting sidelights on the character and personality of the writers. The handwriting of G. K. Chesterton has been described by an English editor as "shocking." W. W. Jacobs, comedy writer of the sea, has all his literary work typed and makes but few corrections on the finished manuscript. Other English writers whose copy is reputed to be neat and quite acceptable to a printer are H. G. Wells, Rudyard Kipling, Arnold Bennett and Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. Editors say they never know what to expect from that imaginative genius, H. de Vere Stacpoole. Sometimes his work is neatly typed on good paper, but often it is scribbled to sheets torn from a copybook.

Heard on the Train.

"Is this Mr. Riley?"

"Eh—what?" said the deaf old chap.

"Is this Mr. Riley?"

"Riley! Oh, yes!"

"I knew your father."

"No bother."

"I say I knew your father."

"What?"

"I—knew—your—father."

"Oh, did ye? So did I."—Boston Transcript.

There's a Reason why so many people make the regular part of at least one meal each day. It's because of the delightful flavor, and wonderful values of Grape-Nuts as a health builder.

Grape-Nuts

FOR BETTER ROADS

MILLIONS GOING INTO ROADS

Western States to Spend Much Money in Highway Construction and Needed Maintenance.

Millions of dollars will be expended in highway construction and bridge work and maintenance by the states of the central West during the present year, according to data recently compiled by highway authorities.

Colorado has 51 miles of highways under construction at a cost of $300,000; 91 miles ready for contract to cost $380,000, and 30 miles and three bridges contemplated, to cost $350,000

The Photograph Shows a Portion of the Pikes Peak Ocean-to-Ocean Highway.

Maintenance on 4,000 miles will amount to about $500,000, while local road and bridge expenditures will amount to about $2,200,000.

Idaho has 87 miles, costing $720,000, under contract; 45 bridges, costing $425,000, ready for contract, and about $1,800,000 worth of additional work is contemplated during the season.

Iowa will expend $15,000,000 on the road system of the state, of which about $11,000,000 will be for road and bridge construction.

Missouri has 666 miles under contract, costing $1,785,000; 888 miles, costing $3,104,000, ready for contract, and about $3,000,000 additional construction contemplated. Local road and bridge expenditures in the state will amount to about $7,000,000.

Nebraska has 173 miles, costing $481,000, under contract; 145 miles, costing $550,000, ready for contract, and about 610 miles, estimated at $1,310,000, contemplated. Local road and bridge expenditures will amount to about $8,000,000.

Nevada has four miles, costing $54,666, under contract; 102 miles costing $657,412, ready for contract; 128 miles, costing $523,000, contemplated. Local expenditures on maintenance will amount to $600,000.

Oklahoma has 128 miles, including 80 bridges, costing $1,360,000, under contract. Additional construction of 165 miles, costing $2,500,000, contemplated.

These amounts will be supplemented by increased federal aid appropriations and later, it is hoped, by national construction of main trunk lines under the supervision of a federal highway commission, as provided for in the Townsend bill which will come up for consideration by the next congress.

SAVING OF IMPROVED ROADS

Report of Congressional Committee Shows 8 Cents Per Ton Per Mile Can Be Saved.

The report of the joint congressional committee which investigated highway economics in 1914 shows that a saving of 8 cents per ton mile can be effected in transportation costs when a road is lifted from the dirt to the durable class. This does not take into account increased real estate valuation or social advantages resulting from the improvement.

Build Roads Now.

If roads are a good thing, why not build them immediately, instead of waiting and suffering inconveniences for years to come, because it should be remembered that we are not saving any money by acting in such a manner.

Big Change in Sentiment.

People are apparently ready and willing to spend huge sums for roads where a few years ago it would have been impossible to secure even a small appropriation for this purpose.

MERCHANT NOT ALWAYS TO BLAME WHEN PRODUCTS FAIL TO BRING BIG RETURNS

The Commission Merchant Can Sell the Crate of Strawberries on the Left, but He Should Not Be Held Responsible for Failing to Dispose of the Others.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Many farmers who have consigned products to commission merchants have experienced trouble at one time or another and have accused the middleman with unfair dealings. In some cases, perhaps too often, there have been betrayals of trust on the part of city dealers, but all the shortcomings attributed to the commission business are not the fault of the merchant. In all contracts between producers and their agents, the commission men, each party has certain rights and certain duties and unless one of the parties performs all of his duties he has no right to blame the other party for failure to secure the best results, says the United States department of agriculture.

An example of how the commission merchant is sometimes falsely accused is told by a bureau of markets specialist who, early in his farming experience made frequent use of these merchants as a medium of marketing farm products. Many of his consignment deals were disappointing, he says, and it was easy to drop to the ranks of those who condemn before they investigate. Among the berries he produced were a few of such attractive appearance and appetizing flavor that it was natural to believe that shipment of such fruit to the city market ought to be profitable. Imagine his surprise and indignation when his first shipment of these superior berries was reported as "undesirable," and "soft" and "leaking." He determined to investigate, made another shipment, and arranged to be present, though unknown, when the sale was made. He was able to identify his berries in the city market by a stencil number on each crate. He was astonished to learn that, however fine the berries might have been when eaten fresh from the field, they were so soft and tender that they could not reach the market in attractive condition. The commission man could not be blamed for the unfavorable sales which resulted; and this experience taught the grower to raise varieties that were not only good but which would carry well.

Avoid Competing With Yourself.

One grower who gave great care to his pack had created a sharp demand for his products, and his brand was sought by discriminating buyers. Since he feared that one commission merchant would not be able to dispose of his entire crop to advantage, he divided his daily shipment among four commission men in the same town. Not being satisfied with the returns, he visited the city and discovered that the four dealers to whom he was shipping were located not only on the same street, but in the same storeroom. The shipper's fancy-packed products were on sale at four places, and buyers were forcing the four dealers to compete, with a resultant cut in prices. The farmer changed his method, shipped all of this product to one agent who could set a fancy price for this fancy pack, and there was no competition to destroy his market.

Suggestions to Shippers.

For those who contemplate the use of commission men as marketing agents, the bureau of markets offers the following suggestions:

1. Know your agent. Select one who has a reputation backed by experience, an advantageous location, and competent help. A personal visit will help the farmer in deciding these points. Have a clear understanding as to charges to be made for services—selling, cartage, storage, repacking, etc. Avoid unknown firms that make unreasonable promises as to what they will do with shipments. Among so many dealers it is not surprising that some get business through fraudulent representation and drop out of sight as soon as a "clean-up" has been effected.

2. Know your market. From your carefully selected agent learn the needs of the market, the most desirable varieties to raise, proper containers in which to pack and ship, style of pack most desired, the use of labels or brands, proper amounts and time of shipment, and local preferences, such as that for white eggs in Chicago and for brown eggs in Boston. Try to cater to existing market demands rather than to force your own ideas as to what the trade ought to consume.

3. Make regular shipments. Instead of making the city commission district the dumping ground for what your local dealers will not buy, keep your city agent regularly supplied with what his trade will take, thereby helping him stabilize the business in which you are both concerned.

4. Keep each other informed. Early in the shipping season the farmer should give his agent a careful estimate of what may be expected, and no material changes in the quantity of the regular shipment should be made, unless prompt notice is given the agent in order that he may secure purchasers in case of increase or arrange to care for his regular customers if shipments will not meet requirements. Successful shippers make frequent use of the telegraph or long-distance telephone to keep agents posted as to changes in shipments. The agent should also be expected to keep the shipper informed as to any changes in the requirements of the market.

5. Avoid frequent changes in agents. Some shippers prefer to divide their shipments each day among numerous commission merchants in the same market. While it may be wise under certain conditions to check one agent by the sales of another the most successful consignor seems to be the one who selects an agent with great care and then sticks to him, co-operating with him in every possible way and carefully scrutinizing all settlements. The honest agent is glad to do his part in such "teamwork" and welcomes the most exacting examination of his methods.

CULLING THE FLOCK

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

In some sections of the country culling the youngsters can be commenced very shortly now. It is as essential that this be done as culling the flock next summer. All chicks when broiler-size that do not come up to the standard in vigor should be disposed of or eaten. They never have paid and never will.

STERILIZATION OF UTENSILS

Necessary for Production of Dairy Products of High Quality, Particularly Milk.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Sterilization of dairy utensils is necessary for the production of dairy products of high quality, particularly milk and cream, because the washing of dairy utensils, at least by the process ordinarily used, is not sufficient to insure freedom from infection and contamination.

GENERAL FARM NOTES

Soy beans make first-rate hay, and about as much per acre as clover.

* * *

The tractor is releasing more and more feed for milk and meat animals.

The growing of sweet clover is very little different from the growing of red clover.

Peas require a cool climate and plenty of moisture for their best development.

Sweet corn is very susceptible to weather conditions, particularly the early plantings.

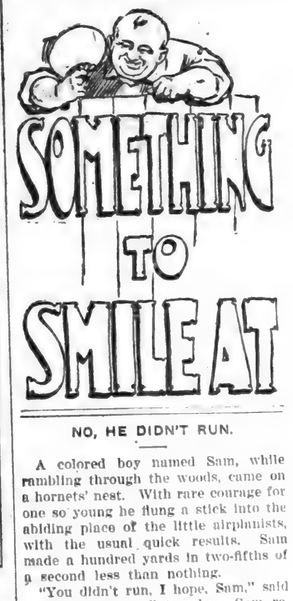
The extra labor required to keep weeds under control is probably the greatest economic loss which they cause.

* * *

To be sure, some farmers do use poor, out-of-date farm implements, but instead of saving them money it costs them money.



SOMETHING TO SMILE AT

NO, HE DIDN'T RUN.

A colored boy named Sam, while rambling through the woods, came on a hornets' nest. With rare courage for one so young he flung a stick into the abiding place of the little airpinnists, with the usual quick results. Sam made a hundred yards in two-fifths of a second less than nothing.

"You didn't run, I hope, Sam," said a white "gemmen" to whom Sam related the episode.

"Well, mistah, I wouldn't say 'zactly that I run, but a man in a field 'cross the road said he couldn't see nothin' of me fum nah wuls' down."

Sure Enough.

"What's the most difficult part of learning to drive an automobile?"

"Learning to drive it to suit your wife."

What He Got.

"He married just to get a home."

"Well?"

"His wife has so many relatives he thinks now he got a hotel."

Catty Remark.

"There is nothing mean about Miss Prettyface's make-up."

"Of course, there isn't. She always gets the most expensive kind."

DEPENDING.

"How about the running expenses of motorcars?"

"They all depend on the people you run over."

The Fleeting Show.

The world is but a fleeting show,
With beauties never ended.
The tax collector lets you know
The free list is suspended.

The Discovery.

"Why is it we can't sing that round harmoniously?"

"Don't you see? The accompanist is playing on a square piano."

Poor Policy.

"Everything comes to him who waits."

"Maybe, but that's a mighty poor way of getting things."

THEIR CLASS.

"Some theorists say everything in life is attuned to one key. What keys are the slippery places in life tuned to?"

"Why, naturally to see sharp or be flat."

History Makers.

When men make history they find
Strange episodes so blended
They never really make the kind
That they at first intended.

The Power of Suggestion.

"I wish that garage man hadn't told me to leave the carburetor adjustment alone."

"Why?"

"Until he mentioned it I had no idea there was such a device and now I find I can't resist the temptation to tamper with it."

The wool comprised more than 20,000 pounds from this county and the remainder from Bartholomew county. There are 188 Decatur county farmers in the pool.

Indianapolis.—Governor Goodrich has issued a call for a conference in his office, June 24, of the state executives of the agencies which came into existence since the war began. The purpose of the conference is to consider how those agencies, which propose to continue their work, can do so without overlapping in their fields of endeavor.

Columbus.—The amount of taxable property in Columbus township, Bartholomew county this year is $5,461,160, which is more than 100 per cent gain over the assessment last year. Indianapolis.—Resolutions denouncing the acts of "a public official" of Michigan City, who it is declared, recently sought to cast reflections upon the loyalty and patriotism of his city, were adopted at the state convention of the Indiana branch of the American legion meeting here. The public official against whom criticism was directed is Fred C. Miller, mayor of Michigan City, who until recently was recorded as an alien enemy, according to members of the resolutions committee of the legion.

Princeton.—Indianapolis operators have brought in one of the biggest oil wells in the Union oil field, north of this city, at a depth of 1,850 feet, in the Hoover sand. The well is located near a 200-barrel well. The company has refused to give out just now the output of the well. The Bruner Oil company has drilled in No. 5, just west of the above well, and it is making 30 barrels. A well just west of this one has come in dry. A well is going down in the town being under lease.

Columbus.—The Bartholomew County Farmers' association will make a thorough wheat survey and, by beginning a year ahead of the ripening of the next crop, improve the condition of wheat by obtaining better seed. The plan to be followed is to appoint a committee which will make a survey of the county and mark fields which are free from weeds and disease, and which are in good condition generally. The owners of such fields will be asked to thrash them separately and to keep the grain for seed for farmers throughout the county.

Muncie.—An examination of the apple orchards of Delaware county by J. F. Treasure, county agent, resulted in finding that the orchards threatened with serious damage by webworms, probably will not be injured. Rains have destroyed the worms, he says. They had attacked the leaves but had not harmed the fruit. Late frosts nearly destroyed the peach and cherry crops, and there will be few plums. Strawberries are now coming into market. There will be an average crop of raspberries, but few blackberries. Corn, wheat and oats prospects never have been better. There will be a bumper crop of peas.

Noblesville.—The chamber of commerce has signed a contract with the New Process Iron and Steel company of Columbus, O., to remove its plant to this city. The company has been capitalized at $200,000.

Richmond.—Plans for a $60,000 high school building in Cambridge City and improvements on the Economy and Williamsburg High school buildings to cost $18,500 were announced by C. O. Williams, county superintendent of schools. The Cambridge City high school is to be an educational center for the western part of Wayne county.

THE KITCHEN CABINET

A little toil, and a little rest,
And a little more earned than spent,
Is sure to bring to an honest breast
A blessing of glad content.
And so, though skies may frown or smile,
Be diligent day by day;
Rewards will greet you after awhile,
If you just keep working away.

ART OF SALAD MAKING.

Salad making is an art and through the combination of vegetables, fruits and other foods one may express artistic effects. We all have a natural longing to find some new and fetching way to serve the ordinary foods. Almost anything may be combined to make a salad, yet we would avoid the foods that do not harmonize as we avoid inviting to our tables those we know are not congenial to our friends.

Carrots, potatoes, turnips and such vegetables are usually cooked before using in a salad, yet a most appetizing dish is one with fresh grated carrots mixed in an ordinary vegetable salad and served with French dressing. If our stomachs are able to dispose of the cellulose in vegetables which is uncooked, we need not worry about uncooked starch, for that is taken care of without trouble, our dietitians tell us.

Where a salad is to provide the main dish, food value should be the first consideration.

The arrangement of a salad is a most important feature as well as garniture. Who has not refused a good and wholesome salad because of its unattractive appearance? The perfection of combination and flavor amount to little if the salad has been carelessly prepared.

When such firm vegetables as potatoes are used in a salad the dish is much better seasoned when marinated for an hour or two with some simple salad dressing which will penetrate the food.

Green plants such as lettuce, cress and parsley whose charm lies in its crispness should be kept well chilled and served at once after the dressing has been added.

The small red radish is one of the most charming of garnishes to use, thinly sliced or in the form of a tulip by cutting through the skin to form the petals.

The pity of it is, that so far as we are concerned, most of the beauty of this world goes to waste. We have no time to look at it and enjoy it.

"We measure success by accumulation. The measure is false. The true measure is appreciation. He who loves most has most."—Vandyke.

SALAD DRESSINGS AND GARNISHES.

For those who will not learn to like the delicious oil dressings there are others which will prove satisfactory.

Cream Dressing—Put two tablespoonfuls of butter into a saucepan, and when melted add three tablespoonfuls of flour, when smooth add a cup of sweet cream, let boil, stirring all the while. After cooking five minutes, remove from the fire, add a half cup of sour cream, the juice of half a lemon, salt and sugar to taste. Serve this on fruit of various kinds; apples and bananas are good with this dressing. When serving it with vegetables or with fish or meat add a bit of mustard, onion juice and any seasoning.

Mayonnaise Dressing—Mix together half a teaspoonful of salt, and a teaspoonful of sugar, a dash of cayenne and add to a beaten egg yolk, beating all well. Then add a few drops of olive oil, keeping the bowl standing in ice; add a tablespoonful of each of lemon juice and vinegar, alternating with the oil until half a cup of oil has been used, then add the oil faster until a cupful has been beaten in. Just before using the mayonnaise a generous amount of whipped cream may be added and more seasoning.

Tartare Sauce—This is mayonnaise dressing with the addition of chopped pickles, olives, parsley, capers and onion. Use a fourth of a cup to one cup of the dressing. Never mix mayonnaise with meat or fish until ready to serve. All salads that need marinating before serving should be marinated with French dressing and the thicker mayonnaise used just as it is served. Mayonnaise may be colored with pounded spinach or lobster coral.

Garnishes—Edible garnishes are the only ones which should be used except perhaps at weddings. The custom of tying up food with ribbons is most undesirable. Millinery is not in place as a rule on the dining table.

Brains and ingenuity are the best recipes for attractive garnishes.

A mixture of greens or of other colors cannot be artistic. The red of beets and the red of tomato does not harmonize. There is as much opportunity to exercise ones artistic sense in the arrangement and garnishing of food as in dress. The garnishment of a dish should not detract from the main substance.

put them in muffin pans and they will not lose their shape.

A small egg beater and a rotary cream whip that will fit into a cup is a great convenience for beating one egg or a small amount of cream.

Aluminum dishes which have been roughly scratched will need to be rebuffed, for the dish will always trouble by burning easily.

There is no economy in using old, worn-out, clumsy tools. A leaky pail which leaves its trail wherever it is carried is the worst kind of economy.

A soap shaker which uses up all the thin and small bits of soap is a useful kitchen convenience.

If we are commonplace and indifferent, we will find other people so. Mind finds its level, just as water does. A really original and sympathetic person will find others interesting and agreeable. To complain of those we meet is really to limit ourselves dull.

MARKETING FOR THE HOME.

One of the first and hardest things perhaps for the average woman to do is to regulate her purchases to the size of her purse, for "our wants are many and money is only a score." It takes real self denial to pass by the attractive delicacies for the table, and confine oneself to the urgent needs of the family; even shopping and marketing develop self control.

The marketing problem is frequently left to haphazard buying or the last minute order and often means in many homes either feast or famine.

Experience is indeed a dear teacher and she is the thrifty housewife who learns early how to use the household money wisely.

When we learn that marketing is a household science which needs study and observation and that extravagant and wasteful buying, however full the purse, is never to be indulged, we are in a fair way to improve in our household management. We have passed the time when it is considered parsimonious and miserly to be called economical and to take pride in being unpractical.

Most housewives have a certain amount to spend for food. If it is small, all the more need that she know how to buy, that her family gets to the limit every cent invested for the most satisfying food.

In the average home with milk from ten to fifteen cents a quart, the housewife, even where there are children, will cut down on the milk supply, when it is by far the most important food for growing children.

Milk at fifteen cents a quart is cheaper food than meat and eggs at the market price, while milk at ten cents a quart, the price in most small towns, is very cheap food.

For a well-fed family, we are told, "before a pound of meat is bought, buy a quart of milk daily for each child." This may be used as a drink, as puddings with eggs or in various sauces with vegetables as well as on cereals for breakfast or supper.

Judging from the countless preparations and treatments which are continually being advertised for the purpose of making thin people fleshy, developing arms, neck and bust, and replacing ugly hollows and angles by the soft curved lines of health and beauty, there are evidently thousands of men and women who keenly feel their excessive thinness.

Thinness and weakness are often due to starved nerves. Our bodies need more phosphate than is contained in modern foods. Physicians claim there is nothing that will supply this deficiency so well as the organic phosphate known among druggists as nitro-phosphate, which is inexpensive and is sold by most all druggists under a guarantee of satisfaction or money back. By feeding the nerves directly and by supplying the body cells with the necessary phosphoric food elements, nitro-phosphate should produce a welcome transformation in the appearance; the increase in weight frequently being astonishing.

Increase in weight also carries with it a general improvement in the health. Nervousness, sleeplessness and lack of energy, which nearly always accompany excessive thinness, should disappear, dull eyes become bright, and pale cheeks glow with the bloom of perfect health.

CAUTION:—Although nitro-phosphate is unsurpassed for relieving nervousness, sleeplessness and general weakness, it should not, owing to its tendency to increase weight, be used by anyone who does not desire to put on flesh.
to Increase Strength, Vigor and Nerve Force.

As a rule we have only words of praise for the dead. Our stock of censure is exhausted on them while alive.

EFFECT OF COLOR UPON DURABILITY OF P.

Property owners who may have under consideration the painting of dwellings and other structures should remember that more durable results are obtained when tinted paints are used. Permanent coloring materials which have been ground by machine into a high grade white paint base have the effect of preventing "chalking" and "checking," two defects which are often observed when white paints are used.

WHY HESITATE?

Saving money is very much like getting married, easier after you have made the start than you thought it would be. Many men hesitate to marry because they fear their ability to live up to the expectations of some good woman, and in many cases their fears are well grounded. So, too, many men and women earning fair incomes delay starting a savings account, fearing they may not be able to keep it up regularly, when the very truth is, that the start is the very strongest possible incentive to continue and once the account is opened it is surprising how it grows, and how much joy there is in going without many things you formerly thought you really must have in order to see that bank account grow.

The Jacob Grill farm house, located south of the Horn school house, was burned to the ground about 2 o'clok Wednesday morning resulting in a total loss, with no insurance whatever.

The fire started from a brooder on the back porch and before the family was awakened the house was enveloped in flames. Help could not be summonsed at such an early hour and only a few pieces was removed from the house.

The family was unable to get to their clothing and were only partly clad, making the situation a serious one. They live on 39 acres and are in meager circumstances.

ALLIE GOLDSMITH KILLED

By B. & O. Engine, at St. Joe on Thursday Evening, June 19th., at 7:30 o'clock. Failed to hear Approaching Engine from the West. Death Instantaneous. Body Mangled Beyond Recognition.

The worst of all accidents at St. Joe in many a day, was that of last Thursday evening, when Allie Goldsmith of the north side of the B. & O. tracks, was instantly killed, at 7:30.

Miss Goldsmith had just left her home and gone over to the post-office for the evening mail. Upon her returning home, she was held up at the depot crossing by a train that was doing some switching on the mill track. Rather than to wait for the crew to finish their switching, she started east on the south track, to go around the caboose, which was located near her home.

She had gone about 50 feet east of the crossing when Engine No. 1426, Engineer Rafferty, was going east, struck her. The crew saw her and began to whistle frightfully about 250 feet west of where the accident occurred.

When struck by the pilot of the engine she was thrown to the ground and rolled for a distance of about 100 feet down the track, breaking every bone in her body, she was mutilated to such an extent that it was almost impossible to recognize her. Her head was mashed, body nearly cut in two, legs badly broken and one foot cut off. The clothing was almost torn from her body.

Because of the harsh whistle many of the people hurried to the track to see what had happened, and Dr. Shook and son Hubert, took charge of the body and removed it to the Kinsey undertaking parlors, and there awaited the arrival of Mr. Kinsey, who had gone to Warsaw, arriving home about 8 o'clock.

The solution to the accident is that she undoubtedly heard the whistle, but thought it to be of the train that was holding the crossing. She wore a sunbonnet and this perhaps hindered her from looking up the track or hearing distinctly.

Connected with this accident is one thing that still remains a great mystery. She had on her arm a chain purse with considerable cash and to this date no trace has been fonnd of it.

Miss Goldsmith was 62 years of age, and was known among those who were musically inclined, all over the county, having been a teacher for many years, and was at time of her death teaching classes here and at Auburn. For years she lived with her mother and sister on the farm north of town, but after the death of the mother, she and her sister Marie, moved to St. Joe, where they were comfortable located.

The funeral was held from the Christian Church at Newville, Saturday afternoon.

MIGHT GET IT RIGHT SOON

Youthful Sunday School Teacher by No Means Disconcerted by First Rather Wild Statement.

She is fifteen and teaches a Sunday school class of ten little girls. That they might "learn to keep and do them," she bade them commit the twelve commandments. The day for the utterance of the "twelve" statutes arrived.

The little girl on the end seat was called on first. Glibly she repeated the ten. There was a pause. She was waiting for the approval of her teacher.

"Give the other two," firmly commanded the teacher. "My mother said there were only ten, and that was more than anyone could keep, and she knows," retorted the assured little end-seat girl.

Nonchalantly the teacher began turning the pages of Revelation. She was working to Deuteronomy.

"Certainly there are but ten commandments. How stupid. I was thinking of Proverbs. You know, my dears, there are twelve of those."

Matter of Jurisdiction.

At the master painters and decorators' banquet the other evening one of the guests said to a companion:

"I notice a couple of doctors in the gathering."

"Yes, I saw them, too," the other replied.

"How do you account for their presence here?"

Jokingly the painter answered:

"Oh, we are obliged to be very strict on account of the union."

"How does that affect the doctors?"

"Every doctor must have a working card, you know, so he will be able to paint with iodine."—Youngstown Telegram.

That Might Help.

Gwendoline de Vere gazed out of the window at the drizzling rain and the sloppy streets and sighed dismally, as she pondered on the misery of things in general.

"Aye, I am heart hungry," she murmured in thrilling accents to herself. "What, I wonder, can alleviate these terrible pangs of heart hunger?"

Just then a voice came from the kitchen:

"Come on, Gwen! Dinner's ready. Got liver and bacon today!"

Not for Charlotte.

Charlotte is the three-year-old daughter of a College avenue resident. One of the recent warm evenings she removed her shoes and stockings and went over to the front porch of a neighbor to show her that she was barefooted. The neighbor said: "You had better get on your shoes or you will catch your death of dampness." Charlotte immediately replied, "Oh, no, I have had it."—Indianapolis News.

Preparedness.

Mr. Homestopper—Trifler! If you don't love me, why did you throw yourself on my breast and put your arms around my neck and kiss me?

Miss Penchblow—Oh, that was only a training stunt. The best ever is on his way home from France and I want to give him the right kind of welcome.

The Occasion.

"They have begun to work on the new ship's sleeping quarters."

"Oh, then, it is the ship's berth day."

Good Recommendation.

"Who was that man who taught you not to forget anything?" "Why, it was—ah—er—it—was—"—Farm Life.

Sometimes It Would Seem So.

Uncle Timothy used to say:

"Lots o' people gits divorced so's they kin git married."

Just So.

"The fellow across the street looks like a wooden image." "Maybe that is why he is lumbering along."

WHY SO MOODY?

To feel "blue," cross and nervous all the time is not natural for anyone. Often it is due merely to faulty kidney action. Housework and the many family cares wear the nerves and so weaken the kidneys. Then comes that tired, fretful, half-sick state. If you have backache, headache, dizziness and kidney irregularities, and sharp, shooting pains, try Doan's Kidney Pills. They have brought health and happiness to thousands of women.

An Ohio Case

Mrs. N. Kurst, 507 S. Court St., Wapakoneta, Ohio, says: "I was all crippled up with rheumatic pains. I was helpless and had to be lifted around. I had a heavy bearing down pain across my kidneys and severe pains in the back of my head. My kidneys didn't act properly and caused me much distress. My feet swelled badly and I had dizzy spells. After different remedies failed to help me I used Doan's Kidney Pills. They cured me."

DADDY'S EVENING FAIRY TALE

By Mary Graham Bonner

THE BLUE FAIRIES.

"Hello, Blue Fairies," said the Silver Fairies.

"Hello, Silver Fairies," they called.

"What are you doing this fine summer day?" called the Silver Fairies.

"Going to give the Shadows a dance," they said. "Do you want to come?"

"Indeed we do," said the Silver Fairies. "Where is the dance to be?"

"It's to be at the top of yonder blue mountain where we live," said the Blue Fairies. "The Sky Blue Fairies are coming to it. Do you see them all putting on their best blue frocks?"

The Silver Fairies looked and they saw the sky was becoming bluer every single moment.

They looked again and they saw that the top of the mountain was as blue as they had ever seen it, such a beautiful shade of blue.

"Who are going to be the guests?" they asked.

"Well," said the Blue Fairies, "we've asked the Fairy Queen and her followers and Fairy Princess Joy, and Fairy Ybab, and Fairy Twilight-Ball, and quite a number of others."

"Oh," said the Silver Fairies, "what a lovely party it will be."

"Come then at three o'clock sharp this afternoon," said the Blue Fairies.

So at the top of the mountain at three o'clock all the fairies kept arriving from this direction and that, from behind trees and stumps, from under blades of grass, and from behind great trees.

The Fairy Queen came dressed up as a daisy, and then came old Witty Witch, dressed as a buttercup. Mr. Giant was dressed like an ox-eyed daisy, or Black-Eyed Susan. But the great fun was when all the Fairy Queen's followers came after the Fairy Queen, Witty Witch and old Mr. Giant. They were dressed in turn in the costume of the buttercup or the daisy or the Black-Eyed Susan.

"A real summer party, a real, early summer party," shouted the Blue Fairies.

Then the shadows came dancing in. First they danced in one direction and then in the other, and Mr. Sun, who had been invited for some time, laughed as he danced with all of them.

"I love to be the dancing partner for the shadows," he said, "for we know how to dance so many fine dances together."

The butterflies came as they thought the daisies and buttercups were real at first. They laughed when they saw what a joke it was on them, but it was the sort of party they liked, anyway, with so much beauty and with old Mr. Sun as one of the guests.

Later on, a shower came up, a very little shower. It was invited, too!

It came so the raindrops could dance with the sun and look like diamonds and glistening stones.

Oh, how everything gleamed and danced and shone. The shower left after a short dance or two, and the sky looked bluer and bluer and so did the top of the mountain with all the glorious fairies.

Down among the earth people they said:

"Oh, what a wonderful day, with such a blue sky and such a blue hill, and such gorgeous colors."

But it was the Blue Fairies' party.

Later on the humming-birds came, as they, too, had been invited.

"We've asked some guests to meet you, most especially," the Blue Fairies told them.

And as the humming-birds looked they saw some of their good friends, the honey-suckles, smiling and waving to them.

After they had all danced the Blue Fairies said:

"Now we will have supper." And at once appeared little toadstool tables of many different colors, upon which were delicious dishes for the Fairyland guests. So they sang and ate most luscious food at the Blue Fairies' beautiful party.

A Costly Luxury.

Some girls who will do without new shoes because they cannot afford them will indulge themselves in incivility and sullenness which may prove any amount more costly. Bad manners are the most expensive of the luxuries, and give the least satisfaction for what they cost. A single disagreeable speech may cost you a friend. A failure to tre appreciative may be paid for by the loss of many pleasures.—Girl's Companion.

Good Cheer a Magnet.

Cheerfulness is a magnet. Sunny, happy-hearted people draw friends as a clover field draws bees. When you grumble because you are not as popular as another girl, you are taking the surest way to make yourself unpopular. Make up your mind that you will radiate good cheer and you will not long have reason to complain of being friendless.—Girl's Companion.

Story of Esau.

"What can you tell me about Esau?" asked the Sunday-school teacher of her most promising pupil in the beginners' class.

"Esau," replied the young hopeful, with the glib alacrity of one who feels himself for once on safe ground, "Esau was the feller that wrote a book of fables and sold the copyright for a bottle of potash."

USE TIN TO WEIGHT SILK

Manufacturers Have to Employ Material Which Would Seem Hardly Suitable for Human Apparel.

We have adopted many foreign ideas of comfort or utility, but no one has sought to introduce the wooden shoe from Holland. The tin stocking is even less suggestive of luxury, and yet many of us wear them. Of course a person could not wear a sock of "eighteen-carat" tin and be unconscious of it, but if the tin is alloyed and disguised with silk he can wear a considerable amount of it without suspecting it.

In cutting round tops and bottoms out of tin sheets in the manufacture of tin cans there remains a certain amount of scrap. Men have sat up nights figuring the maximum number of such pieces of various sizes that can be cut from a sheet of the tin, and still there is the waste left over that cannot be worked into sheets again. Relief is found in the demand of the manufacturer of silk, who needs some substance to weight his goods. A silk garment hangs and fits and holds its shape better if weighted. Everybody knows how soft and light are the unweighted pongee silks. So the manufacturers of tin cans and of silks co-operate. One disposes of his tin waste, and the other converts the metal into tin chloride and works it into the woven silk. Virtually all the waste of tin can factories is put to that use. Some silk stockings contain as much as 30 per cent of tin. The use is entirely legitimate, since the trade demands a silk that is firm and heavy for certain garments for which the purchaser desires a perfect fit.

Silk waste, such as worn-out and cast-off garments, becomes in turn a source of tin worth attention. Rag pickers give little heed to silk remnants, but carefully collect linen and wool. The rag-pickers' union, if there is such a body, might well take notice of this information. The tin chloride in the silk is easily converted into tin oxide by burning the material, and from the oxide the metal can be resolved.—Youth's Companion.

PARK A PLACE OF WONDERS

Yellowstone Has Many Marvels Which Will for All Time Furnish Attraction for Tourists.

In writing of the Yellowstone park, John Muir has said: "In some of the spring basins the waters though still warm, are perfectly calm, and shine blandly in a sod of overleaning grass and flowers, as if they were thoroughly cooked at last, and set aside to settle and cool. Others are wildly boiling over as if running to waste, thousands of tons of the precious liquids being thrown into the air, to fall in scalding floods on the clean coral floor of the establishment, keeping onlookers at a distance. Instead of holding limpid pale green or azure water, other pots and craters are filled with scalding mud, which is tossed up from three to four feet to thirty feet, in sticky, rank-smelling masses, with gasping, belching, thudding sounds, plastering the branches of neighboring trees; every flask, retort, hot spring and geyser has something special in it, no two being the same in temperature, color, or composition."

The Mangrove.

The mangrove tree, specimens of which are in the Arnold Arboretum, the tree museum of Harvard university, has a very interesting method of sending its seeds or fruits into the world. Growing as it usually does in shallow water, it is necessary for the young fruits actually to begin growing before they leave the parent plant. The fruit, which resembles a large inverted berry, sends out large leaves at its upper end and a long root, sometimes 18 inches in length, from the lower end, while yet attached to the parent plant. Then as if by magic, the parent plant drops it into the mud where the plant already growing begins to develop into a larger plant and soon is firmly established. If it were not prepared immediately to begin to grow in the mud it would probably be washed away. A single mangrove is oftimes able to start a small island by its manifold roots and arms.

Some Nomenclature.

A Baltimorean recently received a letter from a Pennsylvania town telling of the christening in that town of a baby in whom patriotism triumphantly, if vicariously yelled when the name was announced as "Victory Uncle Sam." In this same family were two other children dowered with the names of "Italy" and "Liberty." A friend to whom this story was told made a counter attack of wondering ears by telling of two unfortunate children in West Virginia, who, antedating the war and its triumphs, were given the names from adjacent localities of "McAfee's Knob" and "Jubal Boon." And yet even omniscient Shakespeare wanted to know what was in a name.

Historic Geneva.

Any one at all familiar with the great names and associations of Geneva will constantly trace them in the streets, the Rue Calvin, the Rue Beckar, the Rue Voltaire, the Rue Farel, and, above all, the Rue Jean Jacques-Rousseau, where Rousseau's father lived; the Grand Rue, where Rousseau himself was born, the house being marked with a memorial tablet, and the Promenade de la Treille, where, as he relates, his father and mother, in their courtship days, used to walk up and down of an evening.

KIDNEYS WEAKENING? BETTER LOOK OUT!

Kidney and bladder troubles don't disappear of themselves. They grow upon you, slowly but steadily, undermining your health with deadly certainty, until you fall a victim to incurable disease.

Stop your troubles while there is time. Don't wait until little pains become big aches. Don't trifle with disease. To avoid future suffering begin treatment with GOLD MEDAL Haarlem Oil Capsules now. Take three or four every day until you feel that you are entirely free from pain.

This well-known preparation has been one of the national remedies of Holland for centuries. In 1696 the government of the Netherlands granted a special charter authorizing its sale.

The good housewife of Holland would almost as soon be without food as without her "Real Dutch Drops," as she quaintly calls GOLD MEDAL Haarlem Oil Capsules. Their use restores strength and is responsible in a great measure for the sturdy, robust health of the Hollanders.

Do not delay. Go to your druggist and insist on his supplying you with a box of GOLD MEDAL Haarlem Oil Capsules. Take them as directed, and if you are not satisfied with results your druggist will gladly refund your money. Look for the name GOLD MEDAL on the box and accept no other. In sealed boxes, three sizes.

Are Here Told the Best Remedy for Their Troubles.

Fremont, O.—"I was passing through the critical period of life, being forty-six years of age and had all the symptoms incident to that change—heat flashes, nervousness, and was in a general run down condition, so it was hard for me to do my work. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was recommended to me as the best remedy for my troubles, which it surely proved to be. I feel better and stronger in every way since taking it, and the annoying symptoms have disappeared."—Mrs. M. GOMMEN, 925 Napoleon St., Fremont, Ohio.

London Doctors Eager to Examine Brain of Man Known as Human Encyclopedia.

Of course you have heard of Datas, the human encyclopedia—the man who can memorize and reel off dates quicker than the fire of a machine gun; the man on whose head the doctors have placed a price of £2,000?

"But I am not anxious to sell it yet for dissection," Datas told a writer for London Tit-Bits the other day. "It is worth more to me than £2,000."

Datas has lately been devouring war facts and had just added a couple of thousand in two and a half hours to his repertoire when we met.

"For an outlay of twopence," he said, "I bought a little book on a bookstall, called 'Two Thousand Facts About the War.' I bought it and read the list through in two and a half hours and then knew it by heart."

There is no doubt about it. I tested Datas with the book in my hand, and no matter what question I asked him—dates of battles, air raids, names of ships sunk, famous generals' careers—he answered them without hesitation, says the writer.

Datas has had many amusing and curious experiences, but the most extraordinary was the friendly dinner he shared with John Lee, the Babbacombe murderer, and the late James Barry, the executioner who tried to Hang Lee three times but failed. "Berry, after ceasing to be an executioner, set up at Bradford as a phrenologist and character reader," said Datas. His card bore the words: "Heads examined." He examined a good many heads in his time."

Dressed to Kill in "Shell-Cloth."

Shell-cloth is the name of a new fabric being manufactured in England. The stuff is a fine serge and an essential part of projectiles.

And now that the war is over the stuff is going into the making of clothes instead of shells, says the Philadelphia North American. It ought to make "staggeringly" good-looking clothes, don't you think? One woman might say quite truly to another: "Oh, my dear, she was dressed to kill, all in shellcloth."

Or, on the other hand, what clever opportunity for the feminine cat to say that her dear enemy has "shocking taste in the matter of clothes!"

Boy's Bill of Fare.

George Bailey, answering the inquiry, "What is good for a boy to eat?" says:

"At this time of the year, according to the theories extant in North Carolina in 1870, a boy should have daily plenty of green fruit, pine rosin, young cucumbers, raw new potatoes, green blackberries, doughnuts, branch water and two hours in the swimming hole."—Atlanta Constitution.

INDIGESTION Caused by Acid-Stomach

Millions of people—in fact about 9 out of 10—suffer more or less from indigestion, acute or chronic. Nearly every case is caused by Acid-Stomach.

There are other stomach disorders which also are sure signs of Acid-Stomach—belching, heartburn, bloat after eating, food repeating, sour, gassy stomach. There are many ailments which, while they do not cause much distress in the stomach itself, are, nevertheless, traceable to an acid-stomach. Among these are nervousness, biliousness, cirrhosis of the liver, rheumatism, impoverished blood, weakness, insomnia, melancholia and a long train of physical and mental miseries that keep the victims in miserable health year after year.

The right thing to do is to attack these ailments at their source—get rid of the acid-stomach. A wonderful modern remedy called EATONIC now makes it easy to do this.

One of hundreds of thousands of grateful users of EATONIC writes: "I have been troubled with intestinal indigestion for about nine years and have spent quite a sum for medicine, but without relief. After using EATONIC for a few days the gas and pains in my bowels disappeared. EATONIC is just the remedy I needed."

We have thousands of letters telling of these marvelous benefits. Try EATONIC and you, too, will be just as enthusiastic in its praise.

Your druggist has EATONIC. Get a big 50c box from him today. He will refund your money if you are not satisfied.

THE KITCHEN CABINET

This world which clouds thy soul with doubt,
Is but a carpet inside out.
It's when we view those shreds and ends,
We know not what the whole intends;
So when on earth things look but odd,
They're working out some scheme of God.
What now seem random strokes, will there
In order and design appear.
Then shall we praise what here we spurned;
For then the carpet shall be turned.

CHOICE LEFTOVER DISHES.

Often the dish which makes its second appearance will be more appetizing than when it first appeared. Most tasty dishes may be prepared from leftovers that are of little value when used alone.

This is the season when mushrooms may be had for the gathering and a handful of this delicious flavor added to any leftover meat or escalloped vegetable makes an extraordinary out of an ordinary dish.

Leftover sponge cake may be treated in the same way, using cooked fruits or fruit juices of various kinds. Cut in rounds and served with the fruit topped with whipped cream, this makes a most fancy dish.

Ragout of Veal.—Reheat two cupfuls of cold roast veal, cut in cubes, in one and one-half cupfuls of brown sauce, seasoned with a teaspoonful of Worcestershire sauce, a tablespoonful of onion juice and a dash of cayenne.

Roast pork or veal may be used in salads and a cupful or two of veal makes a small pot pie when covered with a good rich crust and baked.

Small quantities of corn or asparagus or other vegetables with potatoes and a bit of onion for seasoning make a most appetizing salad.

Minced Mutton.—Mash the yolks of six hard cooked eggs and season with cayenne and a fourth of a teaspoonful of mustard and salt. Add a cupful of cream and two cupfuls of chopped cooked mutton. When thoroughly hot add a quarter of a glass of currant jelly.

Ham With Jelly Sauce.—Put a half tablespoonful of butter in a saucepan, and when melted add a small glass of sour apple jelly, season with cayenne, and add a cupful of cooked ham cut in neat strips, add a fourth of a cupful of orange juice and simmer five minutes, then serve.

It is good to do battle, to suffer, to be thrown overboard and left to save ourselves. What we lose in comfort we gain in energy, and energy is the most precious of man's weapons.—Charles Wagner.

INVITING DISHES.

When making gravy without browned flour add the flour to the fat and stir until well blended, then add milk or water and a teaspoonful of kitchen bouquet to give the rich brown color.

Raisin and Celery Salad.—Cut into small pieces two cupfuls of celery, two oranges broken in bits, two-thirds of a cupful of raisins, seeded and plumped over steam, a cupful of grated apple and a cupful of mayonnaise. Cover with this mixture the apple and mayonnaise, making an especially delicious mixture.

Green Corn and Green Pepper.—Cut the corn from four ears, put into a frying pan with a tablespoonful of hot fat, add a chopped green pepper, season with salt and pepper and add more fat if needed and cook twenty minutes, stirring to keep from burning.

Cassolet.—This is a famous French dish which is both historical and appetizing. Soak over night one quart of lima beans; in the morning bring to the boiling point, add salt, fresh water and cook until tender, or nearly so. Place in a casserole two cupfuls of cold cooked chicken or duck, add the beans, an onion, half a cupful of strained tomato, a quart of hot broth and a teaspoonful of kitchen bouquet. Bake one hour, uncover, sprinkle with a little minced parsley, brown and serve.

Filling.—Boil two cupfuls of sugar with four tablespoonfuls of water until it threads; pour over three well-beaten egg whites, add a half cupful of citron, shredded fine, half a cupful of shredded figs, one cupful of chopped raisins, and one cupful of chopped, blanched raisins. Spread between the layers and on top of the cake.

Pressed Corned Beef.—Cover a piece of corned beef with cold water, let heat gradually to the boiling point, then simmer slowly until very tender, about six hours. Remove to a brick-shaped bread pan and cover with a board and weight. Let stand several hours. Serve cut in slices, garnishing the platter with parsley. The liquor saved from the meat may be used to cook cabbage, giving it a very nice flavor.

Frozen Coffee Custard.—Scald a pint of milk. Beat four eggs until light, add them to the hot milk with a cupful of sugar, remove from the fire and cool, add half a pint of cold coffee and half a pint of whipped cream, then freeze. Serve in sherbet cups, garnished with whipped cream.

CORAL NOW A CRAZE

Quaint Ornaments Include Necklaces and Beads.

Red Is Preferred to All Other Shades; Jade and Amber Well Up in the Lead.

In all the large shops nowadays there is a certain counter which is so crowded that it is difficult to get near it. This is the one where the necklaces and beads, the gorgeous pendants and strings of quaint ornaments are displayed.

This is the day of the necklace, beyond a doubt the rebound from the quiet days of the war, notes a fashion writer, when we hid our jewels and little trifles so precious to the feminine heart. Joy has brought about a perfect riot of colorful things to be hung about our necks and tell by their brilliant glow and striking tones the victory note within our hearts. Red seems to be preferred to all other shades, though one finds jade and amber close up in the lead, too.

Coral is the thing this summer—it is even being made up into a sort of fringe with which to edge hems of skirts, the little teethlike coral bits being threaded along in a vivid line. Not until one has considered this vogue for coral do we realize how many different colors there are, for when one speaks of coral there comes at once into the mind's eye that deep red which for so many years seemed to be the only shade known. Nowadays, however, we have learned of the exquisite pale shades as delicate as a wild rose, the coral bits being polished into perfect round beads and threaded into exquisite strings of any desired length. Tiny gold clasps are used to fasten the short necklaces, while the longer strings are mounted in unending circles.

By the same turn of the wheel which seems to bring back into favor so many things discarded years ago coral earrings are in favor. I am sure many of us have inherited those long pendant earrings with a hoop of gold, supporting a small coral rose richly carved. From this depended strands of gold fringe.

In the summer time there are so many little things brought out to give an added touch of gayety to our appearance that one can go on forever talking about the new little things which one sees in favor for a moment. As to the matter of shoes, for instance, what woman can resist a pair of swaggering Spanish-looking brown suede pumps with colonial tongue and cut steel buckles?

One of the curious color combinations which as yet has not been overdone is brown and pink—for illustration one often sees a rose pink georgette gown tied with a generous sash of brown satin ribbon or tulle or, the other way around, a brown frock is just as apt to be encircled with a pink sash. It is for just such a combination of unusual colors that the lovely brown suede pumps are surely intended, though there is the satisfaction about brown that it can be worn with almost anything.

White buckskin and brown kid are combined in some very smart low shoes for country wear, and brown stockings of a very fine soft quality of wool are flecked all over with white and designed to be worn with these same good shoes.

NAVY SERGE WITH GEORGETTE

There is a dignity and grace about this outfit. It is of a lovely soft navy serge with georgette. A braided design of exquisite pattern and simplicity enriches the whole, while tassels are long, silky things.

STYLISH WRAPS FOR SUMMER

Garments for Evening Wear Frequently as Gorgeous as Gowns Which They Often Match.

Evening wraps are often as gorgeous as the gowns which they not infrequently match or are combined with. They are rarely, however, made of exactly the same material, although the fabric in the gown is occasionally used as lining for the wrap. Hence has conceived an idea of bands of contrasting color which form kimono sleeves. For instance, a plain black satin has these bands in black and gold braid, of which latter material the lining and the big collar are made.

Bernard, in a coral velvet worked with gold and lined with taffeta, to match, shows a big collar formed of a ruffle of the silk. This is quite new.

At Worth's, evening as well as day wraps invariably take the form of capes. One of black velvet, with three capes, depends for its novelty upon its lining of pink satin worked all over its surface in criss-cross black streaks looking like lightning.

Deullet uses a beige wrap heavily worked with golden brown silk, the effect being luxurious and at the same time quite summery. Bands of the embroidery finish the kimono sleeves, form the collar, and constitute a wide sash belt.

FROCK FOR A LITTLE MISS

This is a frock of imported checked gingham. It had fancy stitching on collar and cuffs. A black satin ribbon is drawn through the belt of white pique which is also adorned with many colored French knots.

Blue Gabardine for Young Girls.

On very young girls Joffre blue gabardine with trimmings of silver buttons is a charmingly youthful color. Navy and midnight blue are always a safe choice for any age. Developed in charmeuse or meteor, blue is made up in combination with sheer vests of white organdie, with ecru or butter-colored lace trimming in the shape of closely set ruffles.

OF COLORED BLUE ORGANDIE

Charm of the Favorite Afternoon Frock Due to the Material of Which It Is Made.

Much of the charm of the afternoon frock is due to the cloud-blue organdie of which it is made. The skirt and over tunic hang in deep tucks, while the bodice is trimmed with narrow bands of picot-edged organdie in white. Wide three-quarter length sleeves are used, and a short shawl collar, that is always becoming accentuates the summery effect. Organdie ball buttons on linen loops trim the front of the skirt. Handwork adds to the usual value of this dainty frock.

Pale pink organdie is used for a dress especially designed for the young girl or youthful matron. The way that the lace is used on the skirt gives it particular distinction. Rows of narrow valenciennes are stitched to the under side of the organdie skirt. A long-waisted bodice is marked over the hips by a cording of the organdie. A rosette of the organdie finishes one side, and a sash of deep rose and white striped ribbon marks the natural waist. The short sleeves and the neck are finished in the flesh organdie bound in pink.

DESIGNER MUST ALTER PLANS

Lingerie Should Be in Keeping With the Clothes Under Which It Is Worn.

The pencil silhouette that still prevails is not merely a matter of the frocks one wears or the stays beneath them, but the lingerie worn with them has had its share in producing this hipless appearance. So as skirts shorten or widen, lengthen or grow narrow, the lingerie designer must alter her plans.

The complete change in skirt proportions that has taken place has called for a right-about in petticoat construction and recently the lingerie makers have been confronted with the problem of making a suitable slip to be worn with the chemise frocks that still are worn.

FROM BROTH TO PASTRY

Indianapolis Woman Who Lived on Liquid Foods Now Eats Pie and Pastry as Result of Taking Pepgen.

Mrs. R. C. Scott.

Mrs. Thomas Scott, 551 S. Delaware street, Indianapolis, says: "When I started to take Pepgen I was on the verge of a general breakdown. My stomach was often so bloated that it felt twice its natural size. I couldn't sleep soundly and felt tired and worn out. My digestion was so poor that I was compelled to live on soups, broths and other liquid foods. In a short time after I started taking Pepgen I could eat meat, vegetables, pie and pastry and not suffer afterward. I'm hungry all the time and every meal that I eat seems to taste better than the one before it. I sleep like a tired schoolgirl. Hundreds of people in this city are taking Pepgen and one has but to glance at the Indianapolis newspapers to learn of the results that Pepgen is accomplishing."

"As soon as he was asleep his wife took and tied him fast by the four corners, spread out like a capital letter 'X,' and beat and mauled him with a wagon spoke till she mighty nigh smashed him flat. A passel of us fellers going by heerd the hooraw, and, 'lowing a varmint was killing somebody, went in, and sorter persuaded Mizzus Sogback to turn Gabe loose. She said she had whipped him b'cuz she loved him. I reckon that was all right, but I'm sorter curious to know what she'd a-did to him if she'd—p'tu!—hated him."—Kansas City Star.

Peace Epigrams.

At a dinner the other night to Edward Price Bell, the well-known American journalist, several epigrams were related about the peace terms. The Americans described it as "a peace with a punch." An English speaker said he had heard it described as "a peace with a vengeance."

I may add as the expression of the feelings of the ordinary man who has had to work through the 10,000 words, that it is a peace that passeth understanding.—Manchester Guardian.

Real Guilt.

"Well," said a society woman in the company. "I can't understand how that could have killed him."

THIN PEOPLE SHOULD TAKE PHOSPHATE

Nothing Like Plain Bitro-Phosphate to Put on Firm, Healthy Flesh and to Increase Strength, Vigor and Nerve Force.

Judging from the countless preparations and treatments which are continually being advertised for the purpose of making thin people fleshy, developing arms, neck and bust, and replacing ugly hollows and angles by the soft curved lines of health and beauty, there are evidently thousands of men and women who keenly feel their excessive thinness.

Thinness and weakness are often due to starved nerves. Our bodies need more phosphate than is contained in modern foods. Physicians claim there is nothing that will supply this deficiency so well as the organic phosphate known among druggists as bitro-phosphate, which is inexpensive and is sold by most all druggists under a guarantee of satisfaction or money back. By feeding the nerves directly and by supplying the body cells with the necessary phosphoric food elements, bitro-phosphate should produce a welcome transformation in the appearance; the increase in weight frequently being astonishing.

Increase in weight also carries with it a general improvement in the health. Nervousness, sleeplessness and lack of energy, which nearly always accompany excessive thinness, should disappear, dull eyes become bright, and pale cheeks glow with the bloom of perfect health.

CAUTION: — Although bitro-phosphate is unsurpassed for relieving nervousness, sleeplessness and general weakness, it should not, owing to its tendency to increase weight, be used by anyone who does not desire to put on flesh.

Care and Responsibility.

THE responsibility attached to the preparing of a remedy for infants and children is undoubtedly greater than that imposed upon the manufacturer of remedies for adults whose system is sufficiently strong to counteract, for a time at least, any injurious drug. It is well to observe that Castoria is prepared today, as it has been for the past 40 years, under the personal supervision of Mr. Chas. H. Fletcher.

What have makers of imitations and substitutes at stake? What are their responsibilities? To whom are they answerable? They spring up today, scatter their nefarious wares broadcast, and disappear tomorrow.

Could each mother see the painstaking care with which the prescription for Fletcher's Castoria is prepared: could they read the innumerable testimonials from grateful mothers, they would never listen to the subtle pleadings and false arguments of those who would offer an imitation of, or substitute for, the tried and true Fletcher's Castoria.

CASTORIA

A Word About Truth.

"Great is Truth, and mighty above all things." So says the Old Testament, yet it is equally true to-day. Truth shows no favors, fears no enemies.

From the inception of Fletcher's Castoria, Truth has been the watchword, and to the conscientious adherence to this motto in the preparation of Fletcher's Castoria as well as in its advertising is due the secret of its popular demand.

All imitations, all substitutes, all just-as-good preparations lack the element of Truth, lack the righteousness of being, lack all semblance even in the words of those who would deceive.

And you! Mothers, mothers with the fate of the World in your hands, can you be deceived? Certainly not.

Fletcher's Castoria is prepared for Infants and Children. It is distinctly a remedy for the little ones. The BABY'S need for a medicine to take the place of Castor Oil, Paregoric and Soothing Syrups was the sole thought that led to its discovery. Never try to correct BABY'S troubles with a medicine that you would use for yourself.

Local Papers.

The local weekly or daily papers deserve better support than they receive in many communities. Some have not succeeded because of the policy or lack of policy of their management, but our experience convinces us that the great majority of the paper devoted to the interests of the home community deserve hearty support. The metropolitan daily will bring to one's doorstep the news of the world seen thru the spectacles of the city editor, but it is the editor who lives in the heart of the community who is able to reflect the sentiment of the local group. He alone is the true interpreter of events as they affect the small home town and the country immediately surrounding it. He alone is able to put real sparkle into the account of the wedding of the boys and girls whom he has seen grow up. He alone is able to put the throb of real feeling into the obituaries of the men and women among whom he has spent his life and with whom he has worked for the improvement and advancement of the old home town. These local papers deserve better than they generally get. During the war they have had hard sledding—many of them—and now they have a perfect right to come to the citizens of their locality asking real business support. Give it to them. If the local paper has the proper kind of encouragement it can do more for the welfare of the town and the countryside than any other factor. Support means more than merely subscribing. Send in the news. Patronise the advertising columns. Pretty soon you will find yourself becoming more and more interested in the community than you ever were before and you will find that it is a good place to stay rather than something to try to get away from. Help the local paper and it will help you.—Ohio Farmer, June 14.

With the advanced rates being paid to workers we doubt if the owners are very anxious about having the roads?

Morals are greatly overworked. Reformers seldom tackle the root of evil because they start too far away from their own faults.

We have heard of an old printer, who worked like a dog for forty-five years, and saved enough to buy a Ford. Truly, the Fourth Estate is becoming plutocratic.

Lietchtenstein, five miles wide and sixteen long, has served its ultimatum to the peace conference. It will sever communications unless it is heard on the League of Nations.

W. R. Hearst has assailed the administration because it has deserted the principle of government ownership. He predicts a third party. Will Willie refuse the crown?

The allied leaders have agreed on their answer to the German counter-proposals, and within the next few weeks the final decision will be made. We bet it will be for peace.

Another aeroplane is scheduled to attempt the Atlantic crossing this week if weather doesn't fail him. But he'll never get the front page mention that Hawker and our naval trio did.

A large percentage of public men think they must denounce somebody or something to gain the public favor. Two grains of sense are worth a ton of denunciation in bettering affairs.

It is now said that the Kaiser will not be tried as long as he lives the simple life in Holland. We suppose everybody was convinced the crown prince would have to lead a simple life.

Coupled with the Navy's department that it doesn't favor additional building of warships, comes the news that Japan will continue her program. We don't like such a combination.

The British labor party has adopted an emphatic protest against the United States retaining the German and Austrian ships interned in American ports. Wonder if British labor party will stage a strike against the United States in this matter.

One day we hear Admiral Kolchak is about the win, the next that he is suffering for want of supplies, the next that Moscow is about to fall then that the Bolsheviki have inflicted a local reverse, etc, etc. Sooner or later one will emerge.

The first concrete steamer to leave a port had to return from her first journey because of trouble with engines. Another start is expected. A French aviator has gone to the height of 31,000 feet, which is consilierably higher than the highest mountain in the world.

British ladies are reported "shocked" at some of the dresses worn by the average female in Great Britain. We have little basis to judge the British females by, but we stack our pile upon the average American exhibition.

Aeroplane travel will be familiar to the eyes in ten years—who'll be the first man in this county to buy a plane?

Charles M. Schwab strikes a popular note with great majority when he urges that the cellars of the rich be relieved of their alcoholic contents when prohibition goes into effect. He says many wealthy men have stocked their cellars with enough to last their lifetime.

The prove that free speech is dead, Victor Berger, the congressman-convict, recently spoke in New York. No one interrupted him while he declared that Americanism and capitalism are the same thing, that unless we adopt Socialism we must accept anarchism, and that before long every rebellious workman will take the law in his own hands.

Many People Poisoned

Scores of people meet death each year by a slow process of poisoning that is going on within our bodies. This poisoning is caused by the liver and kidneys failing to perform their proper function. Poisonous matter accumulates within the body and health declines. The unsightly liver splotches, billiousness, headache and dizziness, bad taste in the mouth, coated tongue, a pain in the back or under the shoulder blade, a tired or achy feeling are some of the most common symptoms of this poisoning. If this poisoning it not expelled and the cause removed the resisting power is finally gone and life pays the penalty. Are you of the heedless class or are you safeguarding your health? If you want health you must keep the liver, kidneys and bowels active. Glando Tonic is what you need to restore this activity and expell the poisons. Keep on the safe side and use a reliable remedy. Glando Tonic is put up in a treatment form and guaranteed to do the work. Ask your druggist for a large $1 treatment. Take it as directed and you will be surprised to know how much poison was stored up within your body. When the liver is inactive a mucus or slime collects within the stomach and bowels which hinders digestion and the assimilation of food. This is called catarrh of the stomach or bowels. Glando Tonic cuts this slime and mucus and removes it. A nauceated feeling is sometimes experienced when this mucus is breaking loose but as soon as it is removed from the bowels, you will feel fine, the complexion clear, the appetite return and you will want to tell others of your wonderful cure.

Glando Tonic is sold by druggists or may be secured by sending direct to the Gland-Aid Co., Fort Wayne, Indiana.

HAVE YOU A GROUCH? HERE'S A LIST OF THE GENERAL EFFECTS!

What a Grouch Will Do.

If you ever have a grouch, get rid of it—shake it off in a hurry—for it is about your worst enemy.

A grouch will turn the sweetest disposition to vinegar.

It will set you against your fellow man.

It will make you a nuisance to other men.

It will impair your intelligence, interfere with your appetite, cripple your digestion, and make you an object of of ridicule in the eyes of other people.

It will retard your work, drive your friends from you, cause your children to fear you, and your relatives to shun you.

It will turn the brighest day into a murky fog, obscure the sun which God gave you to enjoy, and transform the sparkling waters of purity into the bitterness of gall.

It will strip you of ambition, pull you down to the depths, and write "finis" to an otherwise brilliant career.

It will chill the whinny of your horse, kill the affections of your faithful dog, and send your cat scampering to cover.

It will rival the bellow of a bull; put your fowls to flight, and make music of the grunt of a pig.

It will make you a byword in the community, an all around nuisance to humanity, and an object of disgust to yourself.

It is full of peril and without a single grace, for it is the hand of the devil beckoning you down to hell.

Get rid of your grouch.

Half Shoes for Women in the Black and the Brown Kid.

Women are wearing half shoes this spring, both because the new oxfords are so attractive in appearance, and because the season has been favorable for the very general wearing of low shoes.

Those who do not buy their shoes by chance, but use discrimination in making a selection, enjoy exercising their choice among the several new styles at Lawrence's. These show distinctive character, assured style, correct fitting quality, fine leathers, high quality shoemaking. They set properly, without gaping at side and heel. Also made to keep their shape in service, and to wear well.

OLD POLITICAL CRY PROVES TO BE BUNK

Some years ago during the Rose county option campaign, Defiance was particularly a headquarters for threat making of dire disasters that would happen if the county went dry.

Factories were to shut down and hundreds of men be turned adrift without work, as they told it.

The argument was made effective in the election, but now, like many another political cry, made to suit a given purpose, we can see it was bunk of the rankest kind.

Defiance now is dry and instead of all the disasters foretold occurring, industries are asking for six hundred more men and two hundred new homes.

In fact Defiance seems to have broken her old chains and bonds, and to be entering upon the greatest era of prosperity and advancement ever known in her history.

In underhandedly securing a copy of the treaty documents from Europe and using same, no doubt, to make financial gains, the J. P. Feminine students of the Chicago University who propose to smoke in public and anywhere else they please, are presenting a splendid argument to keep our daughters away from that institution. The great war is probably over, but we as a people have many tasks yet to perform, resulting from the struggle. We have our men to bring home, and our wounded and broken down to restore to usefulness. The money to do this is to be supplied through the sale of War Saving Stamps. Practically everybody can buy some of these, some lesser amounts, but all who can should buy as many as they can.

The recent drowning of a boy in the creek in Scipio township near the North Scipio M. E. church, brings to mind of some of the very early settlers of that township the fact that another boy was drowned in the same little creek some sixty-eight years ago. The lad was Murry Palmer, aged about seven years, and was a son of Mr. and Mrs. William Palmer, Sr., uncle and aunt to our citizen L. C. Palmer. With the boy, playing at the time was a girl cousin, Irene Palmer, sister to L. C. Palmer, she being but slightly older than the lad who drowned. She ran and told her folks that he had fallen in a stump, whereas it was a deep hole washed around a stump by water.

By an inspection of your garden you will discover that there is hardly an article in it that is not perforated with many tiny holes on the leaves and tops. Further examination will show this to be caused by the little green plant lice or hoppers, the same enemy of roses, sweet peas and vines of about all kinds. The thing to do is to use black leaf, nicotine, in your spray and go after them. A small amount of arsenate of lead should also be used, then be careful and not get it on lettuce or other articles that the tops are to be used as food. Use enough arsenate to make the water slightly milky white, and about two teaspoons full of the nicotine to the gallon of water, or that proportion, putting the two together to be used at one time.

The Irish Resolution.

Senator Sharp Williams was the only senator to vote against sticking the American nose in British and Irish affairs. It is eminently proper for the American people to give all their sympathy to the Irish, and to endorse the demand for an Irish government, but when the United States senate, acting for the government, passes a resolution like the Borah resolution, it simply invites retaliation in kind from Great Britain, and any other foreign country that may have views upon American problems which are dissimilar to ours.

Close behind the wine and beer movement, and carefully pulling the strings, is the same old booze movement and gang that has run things so long.

If you have places in your garden that the early crops have been used and the beds or patches now vacant, put late cabbage plants in them as now is the time for the next couple of weeks.

In many potato patches that which is called blight will be found to be nothing but green plant lice. A dose of black draught put right in with the regular bug spray, will control the matter. In the same spray can be put a part of Bordeaux mixture, and if it is genuine blight that is after your potatoes, you thus also have the remedy for that, all in the regular spraying and without extra work.

Ford

THE UNIVERSAL CAR

World-wide distribution and the continually growing demand for Ford cars are the best proofs of Ford value. Ford cars are utilities—they are positive necessities—for they have revolutionized modern business, brought country and city together, and opened up new life to the family. The Ford car has become a necessary part of everyday life.

Ford cars are not an experiment. Years of concentration on a single model have produced a motor car of proved value. It is as important in modern life as the mail service or telephone. Behind the Ford car is genuine Ford scervice, by competent mechanics using genuine Ford parts—with regular standard Ford prices. That is the service given by this agency.

Late reports from Clarence Wyatt, who lives up near Angola, are that he cannot live. His death is expected to occur most any day or hour. His trouble is said to be cancer of the stomach, in an advanced stage.

Porta Rican children, members of the Junior Red Cross, have gathered "huano," a vegetable material, for pillows, to be used locally for the benefit of their soldiers. The Red Cross has discovered many useful materials hitherto unused.

The old fashioned woman who thought she was doing well when she had persuaded her husband to buy her a sewing machine, has a daughter who wouldn't be satisfied with anything less than a fellow who sports a twin six that can unwind the road at 80 miles an hour.

The death rate among horses this spring has been great, the cause being the cool spring and rains that prevented field work. This followed by unusual heat, just as the fields could be worked, and before the horses were hardened up, and the great rush to get crops in the ground. The death of not less than twenty-five horses in the Defiance neighborhood alone is reported from that part of the county.

WHO IS WHO NOW

YORK: RED-HEADED PEACEMAKER

Sergt. Alvin C. York, Pall Mall, Fentress county, Tenn., Three Hundred and Twenty-eighth infantry, Eighty-second division (All-America), has been proclaimed as "the soldier who has distinguished himself above all men in the war in the achievement of the greatest individual deed in history." This deed is really a little battle in itself, but told as briefly as possible it is this:

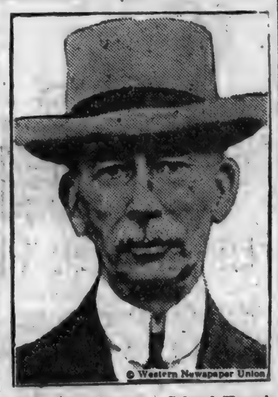
York, then corporal, October 8, 1918, killed 20 Germans with his rifle and pistol; captured 182 prisoners, including a major and three lieutenants; put 35 machine guns out of business, and thereby broke up an entire battalion which was about to counter-attack against the Americans on Hill 223 in the Argonne sector, near Chatel-Chehery.

Pall Mall is a mountain crossroads with possibly 20 houses scattered about. York was born there December 13, 1887, one of 11 children. He is a farmer and blacksmith. He provides for his mother, one brother and three little sisters. He is 6 feet and weighs 205 pounds. He is red headed. He is sure death with both rifle and pistol. As a fighter, he is the rare kind that gets cooler as the danger grows.

He used to drink a little, gamble a little and swear. He quit in 1915 and joined the Church of Christ and Christian Union, of which he is second elder and singing leader. He was a conscientious objector. His captain convinced him in camp that it was his duty to act as the peacemaker in Europe.

His "girl," Grace Williams, says: "It wasn't Alvin; it was the hand of God."

HOUSE'S INFLUENCE ON WILSON



Statesmen and laymen have speculated much upon the qualities possessed by Col. Edward M. House which give him an influence over President Wilson not possessed by any other individual—not even by any member of his cabinet.

Every now and then something comes from Paris that tends to throw light on this mystery. For example, it is now said that the American body of experts at the peace conference is probably the most notable in attendance and that Colonel House is to be thanked for its organization.

It is also said that Colonel House's great influence with the president is unquestionably due, primarily, to the fact that the president has found in the colonel a complement for his own mind.

The president's mind runs to principles—is inclined to shirk details. Relying greatly upon the power of his eloquence, he is inclined to be content with generalization. Colonel House's line of attack on difficult problems is exactly the opposite of that employed by the president.

Colonel House never made a speech in his life. He is unsentimental. He is influenced only by facts. He wants all the facts.

MISS ALICE PAUL: "JOAN OF ARC"

Alice Paul, national chairman of the National Woman's party, is called by her friends "Joan of Arc." In three years she has raised more than $300,000 and has formed a national organization of 50,000 members.

This militant leader of woman's suffrage forces is a Quaker. At first sight, in repose, she looks that part more than the militant suffragist who, for picketing the president, received a sentence of seven months' imprisonment. Her manners are quiet, her voice low. She is apt to keep her hands crossed on her lap. It is only on close scrutiny that one perceives her underlying firmness and ability to fight to a finish.

Miss Paul is a graduate of Swarthmore college and, after a course in the New York School of Philanthropy, went to England to study labor problems in the Universities of London and Birmingham. Her followers at the Washington headquarters say it was while working among the women in the slums of London that she decided to return to America and devote herself to suffrage. Before she founded the National Woman's party in 1913 she was associated with the older suffrage association. But from the first, her admirers recall, she was for downright fighting.

She resolved to take politics as she found it.

GARFIELD AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Harry A. Garfield, though retiring from the directorship of the United States fuel administration, remains in the public eye by reason of his connection with a possible program of governmental activities in connection with natural resources.

President Wilson is expected to present to congress a program which will provide for government association in the development of coal, oil and gas resources. His plan is not one of outright government ownership, it is said, but one which contemplates a supervision and direction which will make impossible privately owned monopolies of these natural resources.

For some time Doctor Garfield has been working out a plan for the president. The purpose, it is understood, would be to obtain a more equitable distribution of these necessities of industrial life and eliminate the capitalistic dictatorship which has heretofore been in effect. Practically the greater part of the oil and anthracite coal output of this country is in the hands of powerful interests, and new gas wells are likely to be gobbled up as fast as they are discovered.

The total assessments of real estate and improvements were less than last year, but the big gain in personal property more than offset the loss.

ASSOCIATION PRODUCES EARLY CHICKS FOR ITS MEMBERS FROM BIG INCUBATOR

Motortrucks Get Eggs to Market in Time.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

A community egg circle is really a modern revision of the old-fashioned knitting bee or spelling school, with the exception that it aims toward financial profit rather than social benefit for its members. The annual egg crop of Uncle Sam amounts to approximately $700,000,000 in value. Largely because of improper handling and inferior methods of marketing there is an annual loss of approximately 8 per cent of the eggs marketed.

Many farmers look upon eggs as a by-product, and the returns as so much clear gain. Their hens forage for a living, eggs are gathered when convenient and stored almost anywhere. With such carelessness and a combination of mongrel stock, dirty nests, stolen nests of broody hens, unconfined males, late maturing pullets, and other undesirable conditions, is it any wonder that the ultimate product includes a high percentage of small, cracked, dirty, stale, heated, and even rotten eggs?

Occasionally the accumulations of country eggs are taken to the crossroads merchant and exchanged for merchandise. The merchant usually buys these eggs "case count," paying the same price for all kinds and sizes, provided they have unbroken shells. Small production results in small or infrequent shipments.

How to Prevent Losses.

How can these losses be prevented? By selecting pure breeds that lay more or larger eggs, such as the White Leghorn, the Wyandottes, Plymouth Rocks, Rhode Island Reds, or Orpingtons; by giving better care, food, and shelter to the flock and providing dry, clean, vermin-proof nests; by confining males except during the breeding season; by collecting eggs frequently, especially during hot or muggy weather; by storing eggs in a dry, clean, cool place; by using the small and otherwise unmarketable eggs on the home table; by marketing frequently, with protection at all times from heat; by selling for cash on a basis of size and quality, "loss off" instead of "case count;" by using an attractive package, and by combining shipments as a measure of economy. By uniting several egg producers in an association or egg circle more can be accomplished in these essentials.

One successful egg association has a large incubator house of 12,000 eggs capacity, where early chicks are produced for the members at low cost. This is done in order to obtain early maturing pullets, thus securing eggs during the fall, when the supply is usually scant. The association also has a receiving room for eggs where they are candled, sorted to weight (about 24 ounces to the dozen), packed in cartons and shipped on contract orders. All eggs are guaranteed to be according to grade. The association advertises the fancy grades on their cartons and cases and market prices are paid to the members. Twice a year dividends are paid each member in proportion to the amount of eggs marketed through the association and the time of year the eggs were brought in, a larger dividend being paid a dozen for eggs marketed in the fall and winter than for those delivered in the spring and summer. A regular trade is established with discriminating customers, with city clubs, with the best class of hotels and restaurants and with fancy grocers for a supply each day or week. The reputation thus established enabled this association to obtain a price several cents a dozen above the regular market quotations, as fancy trade is willing to pay a premium for a guaranteed article. Most egg circles also cooperate in buying their chicken feed and other poultry supplies.

Fancy Package Attracts Public.

All food products should be delivered in clean, attractive packages. Some of the most successful egg shippers have discarded the dirty wooden case and are using a heavy fiber-board case, which will hold from 15 to 30 pasteboard cartons. Each carton has compartments for 12 eggs. Upon both the cartons and the case can be printed such advertising as may be wished. This style of package is especially desirable for the fancy retail grocer who can have his firm name included in the advertising. The fiber-board case is not expensive, forms a good protection for the eggs in shipping, and is worthy of trial. With a firm container, parcel post can be used for small shipments to private homes within the first and second postal zones; that is, 150 miles. Each egg should be wrapped in paper to hold it snugly on end and in its own individual compartment of the container; and after the container is closed it should be securely wrapped in strong wrapping paper and tied with coarse, strong cord. When there is a successful creamery established in the country neighborhood, eggs can be delivered to it with the cream or milk. Creamery officials can often work up a fancy trade among their butter customers.

Farmers desiring to organize a community egg circle should correspond with the United States bureau of markets, which will supply them with detailed information regarding its organization, operation, and management.

CHICKENS MAY EAT SHAVINGS

Not Advisable to Use Excelsior or Sawdust as Litter in Brood House—Hay Is Best.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The use of such litter as shavings, cut excelsior and sawdust in the brooder house is not advised, if cut hay or straw is available, because the young chicks often eat some of their bedding. Eating litter of this nature develops crop trouble which often kills the young chicks. The best cure is to prevent by using short cut hay or straw for bedding. It is soft and easy for the chicks to scratch in and is a good absorbent, while the hay, especially if clover or alfalfa hay is used, is a good, bulky food for chicks, in addition to being readily digestible. Sand may also be used in the brooder scratch pens where cut hay is not available, although the latter material is preferable.

TEAM WORK ESSENTIAL

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Marketing farm products through the commission house is a partnership affair, and no partnership can be a complete success unless each partner does his best and is willing to make it possible for the other to work to the best advantage.

Teamwork always counts, and never more than in the relation of producer and agent, as it exists between the farmer and his commission man.

UNIFORMITY IS DESIRABLE

Means Increased Profits If Fowls Are Properly Marketed—Purebreds Make Best Profit.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Purebred poultry means uniformity of products. Uniformity of products means increased profits if they are properly marketed. Given the same care and feed, purebred fowls will make a better profit than mongrels.

POULTRY NOTES

The first patent on an incubator was taken out in 1847.

• • •

Milk or water should be kept before the chicks at all times from the first.

• • •

It is important to have a market for the broilers as soon as they are finished.

• • •

Pure-bred fowls are the kind every farmer should have; any breed that you like best.

• • •

Keep the early chick dry, warm and growing vigorously. That's the whole story of success.

The orchard is a good place for poultry to range. They help keep down injurious insects.

• • •

The use of mature hens for breeding purposes helps to insure the vigorous chicks which can fight disease.

She turned her head, and I felt her eyes searching the dim outline of my face questioningly.

"Of course I did everything I knew," she replied. "Why should I not? You are here, Captain Carlyle, for my sake; I owe you service."

"And must I be content merely with that thought?" I urged, far from pleased. "This would mean that your only interest in me arises from gratitude."

"And friendship," her voice as confidential as my own. "There is no reason why you should doubt that surely."

"It would be easier for me to understand, but for the memory of what I am—a bond slave."

"Your meaning is that true friendship has as a basis equality?"

"Does it not? Can real friendship exist otherwise?"

"No," she acknowledged gravely. "And the fact that such friendship does exist between us evidences my faith in you. I have never felt this social distinction, Captain Carlyle, have given it no thought. This may seem strange to you, yet is most natural. You bear an honorable name, and belong to a family of gentlemen. You held a position of command, won by your own efforts. You bore the part of a man in a revolution; if guilty of any crime, it was a political one, in no way sullying your honor. I have every reason to believe you were falsely accused and convicted. Consequently that conviction does not exist between us; you are not my uncle's servant, but my friend—you understand me now?"

"And you would actually have me speak with you as of your own class—a free man, worthy to claim your friendship in life?"

"Yes," frankly, her face uplifted. "Why should it be otherwise? No man could have done more, or proved himself more stanch and true. We are in danger yet, but such peril is nothing compared with what I have escaped. I feel that your skill and courage will bring us safely to land. I am no longer afraid, for I have learned to trust you. You possess my entire confidence."

"But do you understand fully?" I questioned anxiously. "All I have done for you would have been done for any other woman under the same conditions of danger. Such service to another would have been a duty, and no more. But to be with you, aiding and protecting, has been a delight, a joy. I have served Dorothy Fairfax for her own sake—not as I would any other."

"Did you not suppose I knew?"

Her glance flashed into mine through the star-gleam, with a sudden message of revealment.

"You knew—that—that it was you personally I served?"

"Of course I knew. A woman is never unaware of such things. Now, if ever, I must tell you the truth. I know you care for me, and have cared since first we met. An interest no less fateful has led me to seek your acquaintance, and give you my aid. Surely it is not unmaidenly for me to confess this when we face the chance of death together?"

"But," I stammered, "I can scarcely believe you realise your words. I—I love you Dorothy."

"And is it not also possible for me to love?"

"You—you mean, you love me?"

"I love you—are you sorry?"

"Sorry! I am mad with the joy of it; yet stricken dumb. Dorothy Fairfax, I have never even dared dream of such a message from your lips. Dear, dear girl, do you forget who I am? What my future?"

"I forget nothing," she said, proudly. "It is because I know what you are that my heart responds. Nor is your future so clouded. You are today a free man if we escape these perils, for whether Roger Fairfax be alive, or dead, he will never seek you again to hold in servitude. If alive he will join his efforts with mine to obtain a pardon because of these services, and we have influence in England. Yet, should such effort fail, you are a sailor, and the seas of the world are free. It is not necessary that your vessel fly the English flag."

"You give me hope—a wonderful hope."

"And courage," her hands firmly clasping mine. "Courage to fight on in faith. I would have that my gift to you, Geoffry. We are in peril still, great peril, but you will face it beside me, knowing that whether we live or die we are together. I am not afraid anymore."

CHAPTER XXVI.

A Floating Coffin.

The laboring boat rested so low in the water it was only as we were thrown upward on the crest of a wave that I could gain any view about through the pallid light of the dawn. It was all a desolate, restless waste in the midst of which we tossed, while above hung masses of dark clouds obscuring the sky. We were but a hurtling speck between the gray above and the gray below.

The first thing needing my attention was the food and water. I crept forward cautiously and soon had Sam busily engaged in passing out the various articles for inspection. Only essentials had been chosen, yet the supply seemed ample for the distance I believed we would have to cover before attaining land. But the nature of that unknown coast was so doubtful I determined to deal out the provisions sparingly, saving every crumb possible. The men grumbled at the smallness of the ration, yet munched away contentedly enough, once convinced that we all shared alike.

"All right, lads," I said cheerfully. "Now we understand each other and can get at work. We'll divide into watches first of all—two men aft here and one at the bow. Watkins and I will take it watch and watch, but there is enough right now for all hands to turn to and make the craft shipshape. Two of you bail out that water till she's dry, and the others get out that extra sail forward and rig up a jib. She'll ride easier and make better progress with more canvas showing."

The men gradually knocked off work and lay down, and finally I yielded to Dorothy's pleadings and fell into a sound sleep. It seemed as though I scarcely lost consciousness, yet I must have slept for an hour or more, my head pillowed on her lap. When I awoke Schmitt was again at the steering paddle, and both he and Dorothy were staring across me out over the port quarter.

"What is it?" I asked eagerly, but before the words were entirely uttered a hoarse voice forward bawled out excitedly:

"There you see it; straight out agin that cloud edge. It's a full-rigged schooner."

"Ay," boomed another, "an' headin' straight cross our course astern."

I reached my feet, clinging to the mast to keep erect and, as the boat was again flung upward, gained clearly the glimpse I sought.

"Ay, you're right, lads!" I exclaimed. "It's a schooner, headed to clear us by a hundred fathoms. Port your helm, Schmitt—hard down, man. Now, Sam, off with that red shirt; tie it on the boat hook and let fly. They can't help seeing us if there is any watch on deck."

We swept about in a wide circle, headed straight across the bows of the on-coming vessel. All eyes stared out watchfully, Sam's shirt flapping above us, and both Watkins and Schmitt straining their muscles to hold the plunging quarter-boat against the force of the wind. A man forward on his knees growled out a curse.

"What's the matter aboard there?" he yelled. "Did yer ever see a boat yaw like that, afore? Damn me, if I believe they got a hand at the wheel."

The same thought had leaped into my mind. The schooner was headed to pass us on the port quarter, yet yawing so crazily at times as to make me fearful of being run down. I could perceive no sign of life aboard, no signal that we had been seen. The sight angered me.

"Stand by, all hands," I cried desperately. "We'll board whether they want us or not. Slip across, Miss Fairfax, out of the way. Now, Watkins, run us in under those fore-chains; easy man, don't let her strike us. Lay hold quick, lads, and hang on for your lives. Give me that end of rope—ready now, all of you; I'll make the leap. Now then—hold hard!"

It was five feet, and up, my purchase the tossing boat, but I made it, one hand desperately gripping a shroud, until I gained balance and was flung inboard by a sharp plunge of the vessel. My head was at a level with the rail, yet I saw nothing, my whole effort being to make fast before the grip of the men should be torn loose. This done, I glanced back into the upturned faces below.

"Hand in slowly, lads; yes, let go, the rope will hold, and the boat ride safely through. Let a couple of men come up till we see what's wrong with the hooker—the rest of you trail on. Let Schmitt and Sam come with me."

I helped them clamber up and then lifted my body onto the rail, from which position I had a clear view of the forward deck. It was inexpressibly dirty, yet otherwise shipshape enough. Nothing human greeted me, and conscious of a strange feeling of horror, I slipped over onto the deck. The next moment the negro and Dutchman joined me, the former staring about wildly, the whites of his eyes revealing his terror.

"My Gawd, sah," he ejaculated. "Ah done know dis boat—it's shore de Santa Marie. Ah's cooked in dat galley. She was a slaver, sah." He sniffed the air. "A kin smell dem niggers right now, sah. Ah suah reckon dars a bunch o' ded ones under dem hatches right dis minute."

Schmitt's hand fell heavily on my sleeve and I glanced into his stolid face.

"I just bet I know vat was der trouble."

"What, man?"

"Cholera," he whispered; "ve haf boarded a death ship."

CHAPTER XXVII.

On Board the Slaver.

The terror of the two men as this thought dawned upon them in all its horror was apparent enough. Nothing, not even fire, was more to be dreaded than a visitation of this awful nature on shipboard. Charnel ship though this might be, it was safer by far than the cockleshell towing alongside.

"Let's find out the truth first, men," I said quietly. "Hold your tongues. There is no use giving up until we know what the danger is. Will you come with me?"

The terror in Sam's eyes caused me to laugh and my own courage came back with a rush.

"Afraid of dead men, are you? Then we'll face them together, my lads, and have it over with. Come on, now, both of you. Buckle up; there is nothing to fear, if you do what I tell you—this isn't the first cholera ship I've been aboard."

It was no pleasant job confronting us, although we had less dead men to handle than I anticipated. Indeed, we found only five bodies on board. There were only two on deck, a giant, coal-black negro, and a gray-bearded white man, his face pitted with smallpox. Determined on what was to be done, I wasted no time with either body. The two sailors hung back, terrorized at the mere thought of touching these victims of plague. I steeled myself to the job and handled them alone, dragging the bodies across the deck and launching them over the low rail into the sea. I ordered Schmitt to cut the lashings and take charge of the wheel.

"See here, Sam, and you too, Schmitt, I am in love with that girl in the boat. Do you suppose I would ever have her come on this deck if I believed she might contract cholera? You do as I say and you are perfectly safe. Now, Schmitt, remain at the wheel, and you, Sam, come with me. There will be a dead nigger aboard unless you jump when I speak."

He trotted close at my heels as I flung open the door leading into the cabin. The air seemed fresh enough and I noted two of the ports wide open. A tall, smooth-shaven man, with an ugly scar down one cheek, lay outstretched on a divan at the foot of the after mast, his very posture proclaiming him dead. His face was the color of parchment, wrinkled with age.

The negro crept up behind me and stared at the upturned face.

"My Gaud, sah, he wus de ol' captain. Paradilla, sah; damn his soul!"

In what was evidently the captain's room I discovered a pricked chart and log-book, with no entry in it for three days. Without waiting to examine these I stowed them away in my pocket. Between us we forced the stiffened form of the captain through the open after port and heard it splash into the sea astern. There were two dead seamen in the forecastle, both swarthy fellows, with long Indian hair. I never saw a dirtier hole, the filth overpowering, and once satisfied that both men were beyond help, I was content to lower the scuttle and leave them there. God! it was a relief to return once more to the open deck and breathe in the fresh air. I hailed the boat towing below.

"Come aboard, Watkins," I called sharply. "Pass the lady up first, and turn the boat adrift."

I caught Dorothy's hands and aided her over the rail.

"Why was the vessel abandoned?" she asked. "What has happened? Do you know?"

Quietly I told her the truth and assured her that if we staid on deck and used our own bedding and provisions we were in no danger.

"How can I help you?"

"Tell the men just what I have told you," I said gravely. "They will be ashamed to show less courage than you."

We turned and faced them together as they formed a little group against the rail. Hallin was first to speak.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

Soul That Is Truly Great.

Emerson, that greatest of modern philosophers, has told us that it is easy when in a crowd to allow ourselves to be swayed by the opinions about us and comparatively easy to keep our individuality and sweetness when alone, but that the great soul is he who in the midst of a mass of other individuals can still keep the poise and sweetness of solitude.

Work and Workers.

There is not so much difference in the world's work as in the world's workers. It is not so much difference what we are doing—so long as it is useful—that counts as the way in which we are doing it. The work of which we are ashamed we either have no right to do, or we are not doing it as we should.

NO, HE DIDN'T RUN.

A colored boy named Sam, while rambling through the woods, came on a hornets' nest. With rare courage for one so young he flung a stick into the abiding place of the little airplanists, with the usual quick results. Sam made a hundred yards in two-fifths of a second less than nothing.

"You didn't run, I hope, Sam," said a white "gemmen" to whom Sam related the episode.

"Well, mistah, I wouldn't say 'xactly that I run, but a man in a field 'cross the road said he couldn't see nothin' of me fum mah wais' down."

Sure Enough.

"What's the most difficult part of learning to drive an automobile?"

"Learning to drive it to suit your wife."

What He Got.

"He married just to get a home."

"Well?"

"His wife has so many relatives he thinks now he got a hotel."

Catty Remark.

"There is nothing mean about Miss Prettyface's make-up."

"Of course, there isn't. She always gets the most expensive kind."

DEPENDING.

"How about the running expenses of motorcars?"

"They all depend on the people you run over."

The Fleeting Show.

The world is but a fleeting show,
With beauties never ended.
The tax collector lets you know
The free list is suspended.

The Discovery.

"Why is it we can't sing that round harmoniously?"

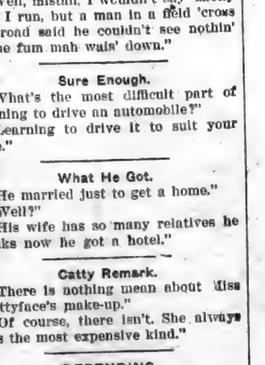
"Don't you see? The accompanist is playing on a square piano."

Poor Policy.

"Everything comes to him who waits."

"Maybe, but that's a mighty poor way of getting things."

THEIR CLASS.



"Some theorists say everything in life is attuned to one key. What keys are the slippery places in life tuned to?"

"Why, naturally to see sharp or be flat."

History Makers.

When men make history they find
Strange episodes so blended
They never really make the kind
That they at first intended.

The Power of Suggestion.

"I wish that garage man hadn't told me to leave the carburetor adjustment alone."

"Why?"

"Until he mentioned it I had no idea there was such a device and now I find I can't resist the temptation to tamper with it."

Mother had taken Joe and John to the doctor's for an examination as the teacher had suggested. At the supper table that night she reported the verdict to father. "The doctor says they have adenoids and bad tonsils," she told him.

FORT WAYNE—Stealing cars seems to be on the increase here, taking them from Robison park being added to the usual volume. —‡—‡—‡—

FORT WAYNE—Linemen for the traction company, city electric service and local telephone company all quit work Tuesday, demanding an increase of pay to sixty cents an hour. —‡—‡—‡—

FORT WAYNE—Charles C. Cox has brought suit for divorce from his wife, Elma Cox, setting forth that she is a cigarette victim to such an extent that she is unfitted to keep a home and attend to her duties. He further says she represented to him that she had been married but once before, and now he finds she has had several husbands, all of them quitting her by reason of the cigarette habit. He says she throws matches and stubs about until he fears she will burn up the home, and perhaps the family with it.

PAULDING—A man, wife and two children, crazed with religious fanaticism, stating they were Holy Rollers, caused a big commotion near the little hamlet of Arthur, Saturday afternoon. When the sheriff arrived to take them in the man broke away and ran into a barbed wire fence and seriously injured himself. They were all taken to the state hospital for insane, at Toledo for treatment.

Saving money is very much like getting married, easier after you have made the start than you thought it would be. Many men hesitate to marry because they fear their ability to live up to the expectations of some good woman, and in many cases their fears are well grounded. So, too, many men and women earning fair incomes delay starting a savings account, fearing they may not be able to keep it up regularly, when the very truth is, that the start is the very strongest possible incentive to continue and once the account is opened it is surprising how it grows, and how much joy there is in going without many things you formerly thought you really must have in order to see that bank account grow.

FRANKLIN'S KITE EXPERIMENT

How the Patriot's Thrift and Savings Habits Gave All the Value to His Study of Lightning.

BESIDES being a good printer, a great statesman and an immortal economist Benjamin Franklin was a scientist of the highest rank.

His famous kite experiment, by which he first proved the identity of atmospheric electricity and the static kind generated by rubbing amber with silk, would have been futile and valueless but for one little "kink" that Ben Franklin thought of simply because he had made a fixed habit of saving. He felt sure that the lightning was only an electric manifestation; but in order to prove it, he knew that he must save some of the current he caught on his kite string.

To save some of it he attached a common Leyden jar—or tinfoil "condenser"—to the kit string. That enabled him to save enough of the current snatched from the clouds for a decisive test. If he had not thought of saving a little, his experiment would have been only a dangerous and addlepated caper. Saving made it great and famous.

The money you earn is soon lost—just like the electricity in the clouds—unless you follow Ben Franklin's example and provide a sort of Leyden jar or "condenser" to save part of it.

WAR SAVINGS CERTIFICATES and THRIFT STAMPS will serve for your earnings the same useful purpose that Ben Franklin's bottle and tinfoil served in his kite experiment.

If science demands saving how much more does living require it.

Remember Ben Franklin's kite and buy WAR SAVINGS STAMPS.

WHAT REAL THRIFT MEANS.

Some interesting ideas on thrift are set forth in the South Bend News-Times, which says:

"The government, through its campaign to encourage popular savings in Thrift and War Savings stamps, has brought the word 'thrift' into commoner usage than ever. One hears it on every hand. Yet how many people who use it realize that thrift is a preliminary process and entirely distinct from saving?

"The thrifty person is not the one who puts 25 cents into a Thrift stamp which should be put into a new pair of shoe laces, or $5 into a W. S. S. which should be set aside that week for meat.

"Thrift only paves the way for saving. It considers carefully present needs and future possibilities, and decides what are necessary expenses, setting aside such a partion of the income as will provide for them. It also determines what are unnecessary expenses, and stops the outgo of money for them.

"That is not thrift which neglects either process, nor can there be any security in savings when either is neglected. The essential item of expenditure, temporarily ignored, will have to be met finally, probably by taking from the savings what should never have been put there. The unnecessary expenditure oft repeated means no savings at all.

"Thrift holds the scale between the two, and upon the nicety with which a balance is maintained between legitimate expenditure and waste will depend present comfort and future prosperity."

Receivers are the closet skelotons of habitual spendthrifts. Government War Savings stamps will lead the way to financial stability.

HOW WOULD IT DO FOR U. S. TO HAVE AN INDUSTRIAL JUDICIARY?

An Industrial Judiciary.

As inevitable to save mankind from industrial terrorism and misery as to prevent the horrors and sufferings of war is the necessity for compulsory arbitration. The need for this peaceable method of settling international disputes is admitted without argument by a world grown sick of carnage, disaster, and death and ideas of aggrandisement, profit and glory from the bloodshed of nations are at last being realized as unholy and devilish.

There is no excuse for international warfare than for strikes and explosions in the industrial world. These bring unemployment, the stagnation of industry, and the suffering of those dependent thereon for their daily bread. But, like wars, they will continue as long as there exists no pacific tribunal and agency by which just and amicable settlements can be safely relied upon by both parties. There is a woeful absence of constructive statemanship employed to providing such a method.

The ower of concerted laborers in hundreds of trades is as absolute in a way as that exercised by a medieval king. The past history shows the necessity of some curbing authority upon the rapacious greed for profits of selfish corporations and men, but the resulting social and industrial chaos which comes with such labor disturbances show just as conclusively that it is the duty of the state to thoughtfully construct the maeninery of adjustment which shall be obligatory upon both parties to any industrial strikes. A commercial court and jurisprudence is the crying need of the day.

Nobody in this country is able to forsee the misery, the confusion, the anarchy, which would result from a complete tie-up of all railroads, all means of communication, and all established manufactures. Yet, the combined laboring unions of the nation have that immense power, enough to overthrow a president as readily as Warwick of old was supposed to dethrone an English king. The laboring unions came into being to obtain fit living conditions for human beings, when the government neglected to ensure those essentials of a good life, but in the organized state of society which is at present existing these powerful bodies of men, controlling votes as well as labor, extend their influence into every political question they see fit.

Obviously, the only safe and sane thing for a country to do is twofold: first, educate and make intelligent the rank and file that they will realise the value of conservatism and caution: and, second, provide an industrial judiciary which will settle peaceable such problems as hours, wages, conditions, strikes and the Dilly-dallying in the old way is inviting disaster; let's strike out boldly for an effective and pacific metod of avoiding industrial cataclysm.

WALSH AND THE PEACE CONFERENCE

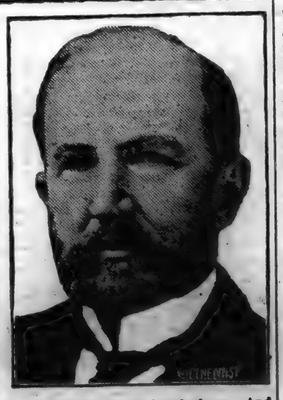
Frank P. Walsh of Kansas City, whose portrait is here presented, and former Gov. Edward F. Dunne of Illinois, bulk large just now in the public eye because of their efforts to get the Irish question before the peace conference. Mr. Walsh was formerly chairman of the federal industrial relations commission and later prominently identified with organized labor. Mr. Walsh and Mr. Dunne had a conference with President Wilson in Paris and gave out the following statement:

"We had a conference with the president today in which he stated that the American commissioners could not take up the case of Ireland officially with the peace conference, but that he himself and others had done, and would continue to do, unofficially, what they could do in the interest of Ireland; that the American commission had not yet taken up the senate resolution requesting them to use their efforts to secure a hearing for De Valera, Griffith and Plunkett.

"Of course we will take no further steps until the American commission passes on the senate resolution. If a hearing is granted De Valera and his associates, and international recognition is obtained for the Irish republic, then our work is at an end. If the request of the senate is denied we will proceed with our efforts to present the case of Ireland to the whole peace conference."

Mr. Walsh and Mr. Dunne are acting as the representatives of Irish societies in the United States.

GILLETT AND THE MEXICAN PROTEST



This is a particularly good late portrait of Frederick H. Gillett of Massachusetts, speaker of the house in the Sixty-sixth congress. He has a difficult position to fill—a Republican speaker in a Democratic administration—and his handling of the office is being watched with much interest.

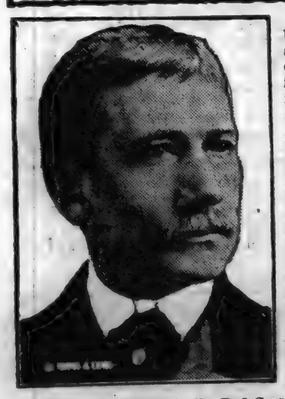
Just now Speaker Gillett is also in the public eye because of certain things he recently said about Mexico before the Pan-American commercial congress. His address brought forth a protest to the state department from the Mexican embassy. In a formal statement Mr. Gillett says:

"I thought it would be preposterous in a discussion of the commercial conditions on this continent to have no allusion made to Mexico, whose persistent failure to observe her international obligations and protect foreigners engaged in commerce has been notorious and is the most flagrant obstacle to commercial intercourse and growth in our hemisphere. And yet I endeavored to make clear that my attitude was entirely free from hostility or jingoism; that I was eager that the United States should earn the permanent confidence and friendship of the republic south of us.

"It is for their interest as well as ours that Mexico should become a safe region for foreign sojourn and investment.

"The greatest beneficiary of such a salutary change would be Mexico."

ELIHU ROOT AND THE PEACE TREATY



Elihu Root of New York, former United States senator from New York and former secretary of state, frequently occupies the public attention inasmuch as he is probably the leading lawyer of the country, and many Americans consider his intellect second to none. Just now he is under the limelight in connection with the peace treaty. Mr. Root came voluntarily before the senate committee on foreign relations when it began its investigation of the "leak" following the statement by Senator Lodge that he himself had seen an official copy in New York of the peace treaty which the senate was unable to secure from the peace conference. Mr. Root's statement contains these points:

"I have a copy and have had it for several weeks. It was sent to me by Henry P. Davison. I assert the entire propriety of my having it and of his giving it to me. He had it because of his legitimate interest in the Red Cross, which is involved in the treaty. He brought it away with him when he came, there being at that time no injunction. It was not a secret document in the sense of the word. The German government having full right to make this paper public made it public, and it is public. I should be inclined to resent the suggestion of anybody that I am not entitled to have it and to use it as I see fit, as I propose to do."

CROWN PRINCE CHARLES OF ROUMANIA

Crown Prince Charles of Roumania is suffering from a bullet wound in the leg, self-inflicted, according to reports reaching this country. The wound is not regarded as serious.

The crown prince's act, which has caused a sensation in Bucharest, is said to have been prompted by the king's insistence that the prince make a six month's trip to Japan to forget Mlle. Cecille Lambrino, the girl from whom he was forced by his royal parents to obtain a divorce because she was neither titled nor wealthy.

The crown prince created consternation in Roumanian royal circles last year by marrying Mlle. Lambrino, who is the daughter of a retired major in the Roumanian army.

For this "escapade" King Ferdinand ordered that he be given 75 days' solitary confinement "for absenting himself without leave from his garrison." The queen has done her utmost to divert Prince Charles' mind from Mlle. Cecille by trying to interest him actively in her charitable works, but Charles is still deeply attached to his former wife and has frequently been seen in her company.

She lives in Bucharest and recently gave birth to a child—which started gossip about the succession to the throne—the heir to which some say is Prince Nicholas, who is studying in England. The crown prince has, according to report, renounced his succession.

WILSON SAILS FOR AMERICA

President Bids Good-By to French Soil; Has Big Convoy.

IS GREETED BY OFFICIALS

Departure of the Party Causes Little Excitement at Brest—"This Is America," President Said When He Reached the Deck.

Brest, June 30.—President Wilson, the treaty with Germany signed, sailed from Brest on his return to the United States. The U. S. S. George Washington, carrying the presidential party, steamed from the harbor at 2:20 o'clock Sunday afternoon.

The departure of the president caused little excitement. There was little cheering and applause from the several thousands who had gathered at the embarkation pier. A procession of socialists, singing the "Internationale," debouched from the Rue Siam as the president walked across the pier. The president waved his silk hat to the paraders.

Officials Greet Wilson.

Gathered on the wharf were French and American officials. The first to greet the president were Admiral H. Salaun and Admiral E. N. Benoit of the French navy. Rear Admiral A. S. Halstead of the American navy and Maj. Gen. E. A. Helmick and Brig. Gen. Smedley Butler greeted the president in turn.

Mrs. Wilson was presented with a bouquet of Brittany roses by Mrs. Josephine Lewis of Cincinnati, O., representing the American Red Cross in France.

Mrs. Wilson wore a navy blue tailored dress and a handsome but simple little hat, apparently the latest creation from the Rue de la Paix. She smiled and thanked Mrs. Lewis and then chatted briefly with her. Mrs. Wilson appeared tired and fatigued and apparently was in a hurry to reach the launch.

National Anthems by Band.

The band of the Tenth Chasseurs played "The Star-Spangled Banner" and "The Marseillaise" as the president descended the steps in the launch. As the launch went into stream a company of marines and veterans of the Yser presented arms, while cries of "Vive Wilson!" "Vive Amerique!" "Vive La Paix!" arose.

The president stood aft on the launch waving his hat at the crowd on the national bridge. The launch was lost to view down the harbor just as the socialists' parade reached the cliffs overlooking the harbor.

"This is America" were the president's words as he shook hands with Capt. Edward McCauley aboard the George Washington. The president and Mrs. Wilson retired to their staterooms as the engine and machinery began to roar and final orders were given.

Big Boat Under Convoy.

Luncheon was served at one o'clock and the meal had just been completed when the George Washington began to make headway out of the harbor. The battleship Oklahoma led the way. The destroyers Woolsey and Tarbell were on the port and starboard sides, while the Wickes and Yarnell brought up the rear.

As the transport moved out the president appeared on the bridge wearing a cap. Rear Admiral Grayson, his physician, stood near by. The president was silent as he gazed at the disappearing shores of France.

Good Weather at Start.

The weather was perfect and there was scarcely a ripple on the ocean as the Washington emerged from the Brest roads into the Atlantic. The French destroyers Fanion and Carquois escorted the presidential squadron to the Ushant light. After saluting with their sirens and guns, the French warships returned to Brest.

As the George Washington disappeared in the summer haze the president stood on the bridge waving a farewell answer to the salute from the French warships.

U. S. BUYS CAMP GRANT SITE

Price Is Highest Paid in Purchase of Any of the Fourteen Army Camps.

Chicago, June 30.—The 4,000 acres of land on which Camp Grant is situated have become the property of the United States government for a sum approximating $800,000. The land was originally leased from its owners, but when the war department decided to make Camp Grant a permanent cantonment it became necessary to buy it. The price paid per acre, ranging from $150 to $350, is the highest paid in the purchase of any of the 14 army camps which the government is to retain.

WOULD DIE FOR KAISER

Bethmann-Hollweg Asks Trial in Place of War Lord.

"Scrap of Paper" Man Assumes Blame for German Acts—Was Chancellor in 1914.

Berlin, June 30.—Dr. Theobald von Bethmann-Hollweg, former German chancellor, has formally asked the allied and associated powers to place him on trial instead of the former emperor. The former chancellor says that he assumes responsibility for the acts of Germany during his period of office and places himself at the disposal of the allies.

The request of the former chancellor was made on June 25 in a communication to Premier Clemenceau, president of the conference. Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg, it is said, desired to take this step on May 20, but refrained at that time on the expressed wish of the German government.

Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg was German chancellor from 1909 to July 14, 1917. He succeeded Prince van Buelow.

The definition of the treaty guaranteeing the neutrality of Belgium as a "scrap of paper" was made by von Bethmann-Hollweg in an address to the reichstag shortly after the beginning of the war. The former chancellor has blamed the militarists for starting the war, while he, in turn, has been blamed.

COLD ON EMPLOY SERVICE

Proposal by United States Bureau Indorsed by Only 34 Out of 405 Employers.

New York, June 30.—United States employment service was indorsed by only 34 out of 405 employers of labor to whom a questionnaire was sent by the national employment managers, according to a statement issued by the board of directors. The statement said that the questionnaire was submitted to men representing the biggest employers of labor in the United States. Ninety-five of those questioned declared themselves in favor of a state system of employment service. The question of creating a new cabinet minister to be known as a "secretary of employment" was disapproved by 219 votes to 59.

German Government Troops Recapture City—Noske Threatens Martial Law Because of Strikes.

Berlin, June 30.—It is officially announced that government troops are in complete control at Hamburg. No fighting is reported in the city, and it is said that sufficient troops are arriving to insure a restoration of normal conditions.

In view of the situation at Hamburg and the strikes and unrest in Berlin, Gustav Noske, minister of national defense, has issued a proclamation declaring that the government will ruthlessly suppress disorders by all means at its disposal and that it reserves the right of instituting martial law wherever necessary.

All bandits were wounded slightly and only surrendered after they had run out of ammunition.

GERMANS SIGN PEACE TREATY AT VERSAILLES

Wilson, Clemenceau and Lloyd George Also Affix Signatures to Document.

HALL OF MIRRORS SCENE

Signing of Document Formally Brings to Close the World's Greatest War—Ceremony, Although Simple, Was the Most Impressive of Its Kind in History.

Versailles, June 30.—President Wilson and the American delegation completed signing the peace treaty at 3:14 o'clock Saturday afternoon, Paris time. It also was signed by Dr. Hermann Mueller at 3:12 and Johannes Bell at 3:13 p. m. for the Germans.

The American delegation signed in this order: Secretary Lansing, Henry White, Colonel House and General Bliss.

The other delegations headed by the British signed after the American plenipotentiaries in the order set forth in the treaty.

Puts Question to Foe.

Premier Clemenceau put the direct question to the Germans whether they were willing to sign and execute loyally all the terms. The other delegates did not arise when the Germans came into the hall.

At 3:44 cannon began to boom, announcing the completion of the ceremony of signing. The proceedings were formally closed at 3:49 o'clock.

The protocol was signed by all those who signed the treaty. The Rhine arrangement was signed by the German, American, Belgian, British and French plenipotentiaries. All of the plenipotentiaries having signed the treaty, M. Clemenceau declared the session closed.

The peace treaty was deposited on the table in the Hall of Mirrors at 2:10 o'clock by William Martin of the French foreign office. It was inclosed in a stamped leather case.

Premier Clemenceau entered the palace at 2:20 o'clock.

General Smuts Signs Under Protest.

Gen. Jan Christian Smuts, one of the delegates representing the Union of South Africa, signed the peace treaty under protest. He objected to certain territorial settlements and made a lengthy statement. General Smuts said that the indemnities stipulated could not be accepted without grave injuries to the industrial revival of Europe. He declared it would be to the interests of the allied powers to render the stipulations more tolerable and moderate.

Chinese Refuse to Sign.

The Chinese delegation shortly before the hour set for the signing of the treaty, reiterated their intention not to sign.

President Wilson entered the Hall of Mirrors at 2:50 o'clock. All the delegates there were seated except the Chinese.

The Germans entered the hall at exactly three o'clock.

A few minutes before three o'clock the 15 enlisted men from the American, British and French armies entered the hall amid decorous silence.

The credentials of Dr. Herman Mueller and Dr. Johannes Bell, German plenipotentiaries sent here to sign the treaty of peace, were approved in the morning.

The treaty of peace with Germany was signed in the historic Hall of Mirrors under the watchful eyes of forty-five stalwart American doughboys, French poilus and British Tommies the real "artisans of the peace" which has been slowly taking definite form during the long months of the Paris conference.

A second change in the program was introduced as a result of the attitude taken by the German government, press and public toward the execution and binding validity of the treaty. The German plenipotentiaries, instead of being regarded from the moment of signature as representatives of a formally friendly power with which diplomatic relations had been renewed, left the hall after the signature separately by the door through which they entered, not joining the general procession of delegates to the terrace of the chateau to watch the playing of the great fountain of Versailles.

End of World's Greatest War.

Washington, June 30.—Signing at Versailles of the peace treaty with Germany, arranged for today, formally brings to a close the world's greatest war.

Although technical termination of the war will come to each nation only when the treaty is approved by the ratifying power of that nation, to all intents and purposes the conflict that began in August, 1914, will end when in the historic Hall of Mirrors the accredited peace commissioners of the allied and associated powers and of Germany affix their signatures to the treaty. Likewise will be brought to an end the armistice granted Germany last November 11, and also the period of uncertainty and doubt as to the final outcome of the peace negotiations.

With the departure from Paris of President Wilson preparatory to sailing from Brest on the George Washington the center of interest as regards the treaty shifts to the senate.

HAPPY DREAM COMES TRUE

Her Hope of Six Months Realized in a Few Weeks After She Started Taking Pepgen.

This is the delightful experience of Miss Myrtle Johnson, 1216 Seventh street, Muncie, Ind.: "For six months," says Miss Johnson, "I suffered with nervous dyspepsia. I took all manner of remedies without avail. Even dieting did not help me. Food in any form was absolutely repellent at most times, and worst of all was the constant nerve strain. And then came the joyful surprise. It seemed as if a happy dream came true. After the first few doses of Pepgen I was relieved and my hope of six months was realized. I could almost feel new strength running through my body. My appetite returned and I could eat a hearty meal with relish. I did not have any fear, as bedtime approached, of a sleepless night, and when morning came I awoke refreshed. I have gained five pounds."

INCREASE WEIGHT AND VITALITY WITH PHOSPHATE

Nothing Like Plain Bitro-Phosphate to Put on Firm, Healthy Flesh and to Increase Strength, Vigor and Nerve Force.

The average person is beginning to realize more and more that the lack of physical strength and nerve exhaustion (frequently evidenced by excessive thinness) are the direct cause not only of the failure to succeed in life's struggle for the necessities of existence, but also for the handicap in one's social aspirations. Compare the thin, sickly, angular frame with the well rounded form which is usually accompanied by the bloom of health and attractiveness.

At the seaside too, the plump well-rounded figure is most admired.

That millions of people are conscious of this handicap is evident from the continued appearance in newspapers and magazines of many suggestions proposing various remedies in food or medicine or exercises, either of which might or might not be appropriate for a given case.

Authorities, however, agree that healthy nerve tissue is absolutely essential to a strong, robust body and mind. Weak nerves, while indicated by a multitude of different symptoms, more immediately and generally result in lack of energy, sleeplessness, irritability, depression, etc., which conditions gradually consume the healthy flesh, leaving ugly hollows, a flat chest, bony neck and scrawny arms and legs.

Our bodies need more phosphate than most of them are able to extract from the foods we eat nowadays, and many opinions affirm that there is nothing which may be taken into the human system that so effectively supplies this deficiency as the pure organic phosphate known as bitro-phosphate and sold by good druggists everywhere.

The essential phosphoric food elements in bitro-phosphate assimilated by the nerve cells should soon produce a pleasing change in nerve energy and hence increased vitality and strength. With the burdens of nervousness, sleeplessness, lack of energy, etc., lifted, normal weight with its attractive fullness and ruddy glow of health replaces the former picture of skin and bones.

CAUTION:—Although Bitro-Phosphate is unexcelled for the relief of nervousness and attendant disorders, owing to its tendency to increase weight, one should watch the scales while taking it unless it is the desire to put on flesh.

WOLVES OF THE SEA

By RANDALL PARRISH

Copyright, by A. C. McClurg & Co.

—18—

"Vot vas eet you say 'bout dis sheep? Eet haf cholera—hey?"

Dorothy took a step forward, and confronted them, her cheeks flushed.

"You are sailors," she said, speaking swiftly, "and ought not to be afraid if a girl isn't. It is true this vessel was ravaged by cholera, and the crew died; but the bodies have been flung overboard—Captain Carlyle risked his life to do that before he asked us aboard. Now there is no danger so long as we remain on [illegible]. I have no fear."

The Swede shook his head, grumbling something, but before the revolt could spread Watkins broke in.

"An' that's right, miss. I wus on the Bombay Castle when she took cholera, an' we hed twenty-one days of it beatin' agin head winds off the Cape. We lost sixteen o' the crew, but not a man among us who stayed on deck got sick. Anyhow, these blokes are goin' ter try their luck aboard yere, er else swim fer it."

He grinned cheerfully, letting slip the end of the painter, the released quarter-boat gliding gently away astern, the width of water constantly increasing.

"Now, bullies, jump fer it if yer want ter go. All right then, my hearties, let's hunt up something to work with and scrub this deck. That's the way ter clean out cholera."

He led the way and they followed him, grumbling and cursing, but obedient. I added a word of encouragement, and in a few minutes the whole gang was busily engaged in cleaning up the mess forward, their first fears evidently forgotten in action. Watkins kept after them like a slave driver.

It was not difficult finding plenty for the lads to do, making the neglected schooner shipshape, and adjusting the spread of canvas aloft to the new course I decided upon. Sam started a fire in the galley and prepared a hot meal, singing as he worked, and before noon I had as cheerful a ship's crew forward as any man could possibly ask for. Dorothy and I glanced over the log, but gained little information. As the sun reached the meridian I ventured again into the cabin and returned with the necessary instruments to determine our position. With these and the pricked chart, I managed fairly well in determining our location, and choosing the most direct course toward the coast.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

A New Plan of Escape.

Nothing occurred during the afternoon to disturb the routine work aboard or to cause me any uneasiness. Sunset brought clouds, and by the time it was really dark the entire sky was overcast, but the sea remained comparatively calm and the wind steady.

It was a pleasant night in spite of the darkness, the air soft and refreshing. The locker was filled with flags, representing almost every nation on earth. I dragged these out and spread them on the deck abaft the cabin, thus forming a very comfortable bed, and at last induced the girl to lie down, wrapping her in a blanket. Finally I found a seat beside her on a coil of rope, and we fell into conversation.

This was the first opportunity we had enjoyed to actually talk with each other alone.

"Dorothy," I said humbly, "you were frightened last night. I cannot hold you to what you said to me then."

"You mean you do not wish to? But I was not frightened."

"And you still repeat what you said then? You said, 'I love you.'"

"Yes, I can repeat that—I love you."

"Those are dear, dear words; but I ought not to listen to them, or believe. I am not free to ask a pledge of you, or to beg you to trust me in marriage."

"Is not that rather for me to decide?" she questioned archly. "I make a confession now. You remember the night I met you on deck, when you were a prisoner, and told you that you had become the property of Roger Fairfax? I loved you then, although I scarcely acknowledged the truth even to myself. We are all alike, we Fairfaxes; we choose for ourselves, and laugh at the world. That is my answer, Geoffry Carlyle; I give you love for love."

"I would ask an opportunity denied me—to stand once more in honor among men. I would not be ashamed before Dorothy Fairfax."

"Nor need you be," she exclaimed impetuously, her hands pressing mine. "You wrong yourself, even as you have been wronged. You have already done that which shall win you freedom, if it be properly presented to those in power. I mean that it shall be, once I am safely back in Virginia. Tell me, what are your plans with—with this schooner?"

"To beach it somewhere along shore, and leave it there a wreck, while we escape. The men insist on it with good reason. They have been pirated, and might be hung if caught."

"And yet to my mind," she insisted earnestly, "that choice is most dangerous. I am a girl, but if I commanded here, do you know what I would do? I would sail this vessel straight to the Chesapeake and surrender it to the authorities. The men have nothing to fear with me aboard and ready to testify in their behalf. The governor will accept my word without a question. These men are not pirates, but honest seamen compelled to serve in order to save their lives; they mutinied and captured the bark, but were later overcome, and compelled to take the boats. The same plea can be made for you, Geoffry, only you were there in an effort to save me. It is a service which ought to win you freedom. If the governor fail me, I will bear my story to the feet of the king. I am a Fairfax, and we have friends in England, strong, powerful friends."

"I am convinced," I admitted, after a pause, "that this course is the wiser one, but fear the opposition of the men. They will never go willingly."

"There is an argument which will overcome their fear. I mean cupidity. Each sailor aboard has an interest in the salvage of this vessel under the English law. Also there must be gold aboard—perhaps treasure also. Let the crew dream that dream and you will need no whip to drive them into an English port."

"Full pardon, and possibly wealth with it," I laughed. "A beautiful scheme, Dorothy, yet it might work. Still, if I know sailormen, they would doubt the truth, if it came direct from me, for I am not really one of them."

"But Watkins is. Explain it all to him; tell him who I am, the influence I can wield in the colony, and then let him whisper the news to the others. Will you not do this—for my sake?"

"Yes," I answered; "I believe you have found the right course. If you will promise to lie down and sleep I will talk with Watkins now. I may catch some catnaps before morning, but most of the time shall be prowling about deck. Good night, dear girl."

She extended her arms, and drew me down until our lips met.

"You are actually afraid of me still," she said. "Why should you be?"

"Somehow, Dorothy, you have always seemed so far away from me I have never been able to forget. But now the touch of your lips has—"

I Dared Not Let Go.

"Broken down the last barrier?"

"Yes, forever."

"Are you sure? Would you not feel still less doubt if you kissed me again?"

I held her closely, gazing down into the dimly revealed outline of her face, and this time felt myself the master.

I left her there and groped my own way forward. I found Watkins awake. He listened gravely to what I had to say, with little comment, and was evidently weighing every argument in his mind.

"I've bin in Virginia and Maryland, sir," he said at last seriously, "and if the young woman is a Fairfax, she'll likely have influence enough ter do just whut she says. I'll talk it over with the lads. If they wus only sure thar wus treasure aboard I guess most of 'em would face hell ter git their hands on a share of it."

"Then why not search and see?"

He shook his head obstinately.

"Not me, sir! I don't prowl around in no cholera ship, loaded with dead men—not if I never git rich."

"Then I will," and I got to my feet in sudden determination. "You keep the deck while I go below. Light the lantern and bring it here. If there is any specie hidden aboard this hooker it will be either in the cabin or lazaret. And, whether there is or not, my man, the Santa Marie turns north tomorrow if I have to fight every sea wolf on board single-handed."

CHAPTER XXIX.

A Struggle in the Dark.

He came back with the lantern in his hand, a mere tin box containing a candle, the dim flame visible through numerous punctures. Neither of us spoke until my hand was on the companion door ready to slide it open.

"I'll not be long below," I said soberly. "Better go forward and see that your lookout men are awake, and then come back here."

The port stateroom I had not previously entered because of a locked door. I determined on breaking in here. There was no key in the lock, and the stout door resisted by efforts. Placing the lantern on the deck I succeeded finally in inserting the blade of a hatchet so as to gain a purchase sufficient to release the latch. As the door yielded a sharp cry assailed me from within. It came forth so suddenly and with so wild an accent I stepped blindly backward in fright, my foot overturning the lantern, which, with a single flicker of the candle, went out. In that last gleam I saw a dim, grotesque outline fronting me. Then, in the darkness, gleamed two green, menacing eyes, growing steadily larger, nearer, as I stared at them in horror. Was it man or beast? Devil from hell, or some crazed human against whom I must battle for life? The green eyes glared into my face. I lifted my hand toward him, and touched—hair! My antagonist was a giant African ape.

Even as the big ape's grip caught me, ripping through jacket sleeve to the flesh, I realised my great peril, but I was no longer paralyzed with fear, helpless before the unknown. I drove my hatchet straight between those two gleaming eyes. The brute staggered back, dragging me with him. His humanlike cry of pain ended in a snarl, but, brief as the respite proved, it gave me grip on his under jaw and an opportunity to drive my weapon twice more against the hairy face. The pain served only to madden the beast, and before I could wrench free he had me clutched in an iron grip, my jacket torn into shreds. His jaws snapped at my face, but I had such purchase as to prevent their touching me, and mindless of the claws tearing at my flesh I forced the animal's head back until the neck cracked and the lips gave vent to a wild scream of agony. I dared not let go; dared not relax for an instant the exercise of every ounce of strength. I felt as though the life was being squeezed out of me by the grasp of those hairy arms; yet the very vise in which I was held yielded me leverage. The hatchet dropped to the deck and both my hands found lodgment under the jaw, the muscles of my arms strained to the utmost, as I forced back that horrid head. Little by little it gave way, the suffering brute whining in agony, until, the pain becoming unendurable, the clinging arms suddenly released their hold letting me drop heavily to the deck.

By some good fortune I fell upon the discarded hatchet, and stumbled to my feet once more, gripping the weapon again in my fingers. I sprang straight toward him, sending the sharp blade of the hatchet crashing against the skull. The aim was good, the stroke a death blow, yet the monster got me with one paw, and we fell to the deck together, he savagely clawing me in his death agony. Then the hairy figure quivered and lay motionless. I released the stiffening grip, rising to my knees, only to immediately pitch forward unconscious.

When I came back once more to life I was upon the schooner's deck breathing the fresh night air, Dorothy and Watkins bending over me.

CHAPTER XXX.

Opening of the Treasure Chest.

The dawn came slowly, and with but little increase of light. The breeze had almost entirely died away, leaving the canvas aloft motionless, the schooner barely moving through a slightly heaving sea, in the midst of a dull-gray mist. When Watkins emerged from the mist I proposed to him that we go below and continue the search for gold. He was not anxious to go and Dorothy persuaded me to let her go with me. In the room where the ape had been hidden we found a big chest and I set to work to open it.

It proved harder than I had believed, the staple of the lock clinging to the hard teak wood of which the chest was made. The lid was heavy, but as I finally forced it backward a hinge snapped and permitted it to drop crashing to the deck. For an instant I could see nothing within.

"Lift up the lantern, Dorothy, please. No, higher than that. What in God's name? Why, it is the corpse of a woman!"

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

A Good Fight.

A good fight is never for its day alone. It is for many days. And it is not alone for him who bears its utmost stress. No man can live his own life bravely and not be an energy of social good, virtue proceeding forth from him to heal some brother's wounded heart. There is a riddle here for us to guess.—John White Chadwick.

An Advantage.

Another advantage of tortoise shell glasses is that they cover up a good deal of face.—Kansas Industrialist.

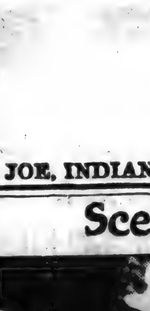
Scene of Battle of Concord

"By the rude bridge that arched the flood, their flag to April's breeze unfurled, here once the embattled farmers stood and fired the shot heard round the world."

FREEDOM OVER ALL THE EARTH

Due Recognition of Human Rights Now the Aim of Mankind.

Independence hall is holy ground at the entrance to which, like Moses at the bush of fire, one should remove his shoes; but it pales into insignificance beside Interdependence hall which someday we must build across the street from the "birthplace of American liberty." One hundred, two score and three years ago, the federation of the thirteen colonies into a federal union was a political event of prime import; today it is overshadowed by the thing of which Tennyson dreamed. "The Federation of the World." The Declaration of Independence is a state paper of such significance as to stand in a class by itself. It immortalized every man who signed it. "These united colonies are and of right ought to be free and independent states; absolved from all allegiance to the British crown; and all connection between them and Great Britain, is and ought to be totally dissolved." So run the words of fire the idealism of which was to be made real if need be, by the lives, as well as the property and sacred honor of the signatories. But the Declaration of Interdependence of all free peoples will overtop that of July 4, 1776, as the oak overtops the daisy.



Great Patriotic Aim.

But at that time independence was the biggest and best thing the fathers could purchase in a war of seven years. They could not enjoy the unalienable rights of "life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness" while ruled by Great Britain, for to be subject to England meant to be robbed and exploited, jailed or hanged at the behest of a half-mad German, George III, who wore the British crown.

And so the patriots proposed to stand alone, to be independent. They proposed an equitable self-rule on lines more liberal than ever had been tried; there were to be neither kings nor kinglets but rather a state of human equality.

Across the water it was a dark day for human rights. In all Europe liberty was eclipsed; there was not one free people. Monarchs were supreme and more or less tyrannical; and so, to stand alone and even aloof, as Washington counseled, was to be prudent. No alliance was possible save with that which they had just renounced—kingcraft.

Old Order Abolished.

But "the old order changeth, giving place to new." Today, in 1919, the proper social desire of the individual is to "live in a house by the side of the road and be a friend to man." And similarly, to live in the crossroads of the nations and show vital interest in all that pertains to humanity is the proper attitude for the nation. The setting for the next act on the world stage must be big enough for interdependence and internationalism. Interdependence is life and opportunity for both. "We must hang together or we will hang separately."

By maintaining independence and aloofness the fathers hoped to succeed; isolation spelled safety, and so they trusted that a deep, wide moat at their front door, the Atlantic ocean, would keep their foes at a distance of 3,000 miles while they should gain numbers and wealth and experience in governing themselves. They minted coins bearing the inscriptions, "Let Me Alone" and "Don't Step on Me," the latter beneath the figure of a coiled rattlesnake, and cutting themselves off from world politics and world interests they became a self-contained, self-sufficient people, enjoying free assembly, free speech, free press and free religion, but making Americanism dangerously near a big provincialism. We helped no other people to gain our glorious liberty. All was well if we were let alone by the political and warring world.

Autocracy in Rout.

But a new world order has come in. The western hemisphere is all free. China has astonished the world by electing a president. "The bear that walks like a man" becomes human for a fortnight and is free—until his liberty, mistaken for license, enslaved him to the bolsheviki. France and Portugal are free; Great Britain, our ancient oppressor, is free and is our friend. The British empire is free, a galaxy of great self-governing peoples—Canada, Australia, New Zealand, South Africa—all free, even though a figurehead king is its nominal head; but Lloyd George, democrat, not George V autocrat, is the real ruler of the British empire!

Now for "Peace on Earth."

Free peoples do not menace the tranquility of the world; they are not bent on conquest; they seek not to impose their will on their neighbors, even though the neighbor be weak and small. They covet nothing which is their neighbor's. They stand for peace on earth and good will among men. The considerations alike of safety and ethics demand the observation of the golden rule among nations.

On July 4, 1776, the old Liberty bell rang out in order to "proclaim liberty throughout all the land, unto all the inhabitants thereof." Suppose that on another July 4 it were permitted to raise its cracked and wheezy voice to do a bigger and far nobler thing: Proclaim liberty to all the oppressed of the world! Where is the man who would not wish to, live in that good world? Surely not one would pray with Simeon, "Lord, lettest thou thy servant now depart in peace."

Let all the free peoples of the world send representatives to meet in Independence hall. Let them create and sign a nobler document than that which the fathers made and signed; nobler and larger for one reason only—the new document will be the Declaration of Interdependence.

That declaration will enable all free peoples to stand against the aggression of autocratic spoilers. It will assert the solidarity of all who stand for freedom and who love their fellow men. It will set forth the growing sense of human brotherhood. It will express in larger measure the high political ideals of our time. It may not ring in a thousand years of peace, but it will herald that dawn—

When light shall spread, and man be liker man,
Through all the circle of the golden year.

Clipped from Our Contemporaries

The worst argument ever made against prohibition is that of increased taxes. If there was any sense in it, it would have stopped warfare.

This old world is in the midst of a crisis, even if going business men do not realize it. Some day, if things go amiss, the lid is going to blow off.

Blarney and taffy oftentimes win when a cuss and a lick wouldn't, but don't make the mistake and believe you can live on it.

A disordered mind is the saddest thing to see; but many minds are wantonly disordered through passion and prejudice.

A British dirigible will soon attempt a flight across the Atlantic with a General in command. Will he make the ship top-heavy?

An army of 6,000 Costa Ricans is massed near Nicaragua, aand that country asks the United States to land troops, to avert the invasion.

Labor is fearful of the "yellow peril" in the United States. That's the first time we knew the American laboring man was afraid of something.

Disappearing in the Air.

About three weeks ago Capt. Mansell James, a British aviator, who had attended the aviation meeting took the air at Lee, Mass. No word of him has come to this date and the supposition is that he fell in the ocean, and was drowned.

This is truly a strange mystery. That a man could be lost in a populous section of the United States while flying overhead, and disappear completely is a revelation, and a warning to flyers. Capt James, it is assumed after getting up, changed his course, and attempted a flight to Atlantic City, N. J. Being unfamiliar with this country, and with only two hours gasoline supply, it is generally believed that he found himself between New Haven and Bridgeport, over the ocean, without power to continue his flight.

How Our Navy Has Grown.

Henry C. Wiltbank, in The Rudder, a maritime publication, calls attention to the remarkable rise of the United States in tonnage holdings. From ninth place, before the war, this country has jumped into second position our tonnage increasing from 1,076,000 to 4,476,00 tons. Of the world's trade fleet we hold eleven per cent.

According to the same authority, Germany fell back only one position in her standing in world trade. At the time of the armistice she was in position to become a menace to all other commercial nations, as she held third position until the armistice stripped her of her maratime strength.

Mr. Wiltbank also declares that 7,000 allied and neutral ships were destroyed during the war by u-boats, and mines, the greater part being sent down by mines. The United States suffered the greatest loss in porportion to her tonnage, our loss being about two-thirds of our pre-war tonnage.

Advertising for Recruits.

The United States government has always been a believer in printer's ink, but like some yokels it has preferred the free specimen. When the question of publicity came before governmental departments the wide spread use of newspaper publicity was enthusiastically appealed for as a donation to the cause of the war. What is to the point the newspapers freely gave the free space. Except when local citizens paid for advertising which they donated to patriotic purposes the government relied upon bill boards, street car cards, etc., in spending its money for advertising.

We see that a new light has burst upon the War Department. It is of the news that deserves passing on. That department plans to spend for newspaper advertising the sum of $185,000 between the 16th and the end of June. For what purpose? To get men in the army. Every daily paper printed in English in the fifty-five states where the department maintains recruiting offices will be utilized. We watch with interests this test. Such squandering of the public money. Such absurdity! Paying for newspaper publicity, when you can slip it from the publisher without a squeal! So far, ye noble taxpayers union has not resorted to injunction proceedings.

The Trouble in Winnipeg.

Little news of the great Canadian labor crisis has permeated this far south. That serious trouble was narrowly missed is evident. The strengthening of the police force by the swearing in of 1,000 returned war veterans as special constables is a sign of the gravity of the situation.

It is pleasing to note the attitude of the soldiers of the Dominion, now returning after four years of victorious and really famous fighting. The veterans are strongly and emphatically against the movement. They loyally uphold constituted authority, even when the constituted authorities themselves failed to act. Threats at a soldiers' meeting were open; if the government did not intend to take action against the strike leaders the soldiers did. Brig. Gen. Ketchen assured three thousand soldiers that action was pending to deal with revolution and Bolshevism.

It is plain that the big strike, as it enters its fourth week, is yet a thing of peril. That it was intended as a move against the government is plain, but its failure is certain.

Many People Poisoned

Scores of people meet death each year by a slow process of poisoning that is going on within our bodies. This poisoning is caused by the liver and kidneys failing to perform their proper function. Poisonous matter accumulates within the body and health declines. The unsightly liver splotches, billiousness, headache and dizziness, bad taste in the mouth, coated tongue, a pain in the back or under the shoulder blade, a tired or achy feeling are some of the most common symptoms of this poisoning. If this poisoning it not expelled and the cause removed the resisting power is finally gone and life pays the penalty. Are you of the heedless class or are you safeguarding your health? If you want health you must keep the liver, kidneys and bowels active. Glando Tonic is what you need to restore this activity and expell the poisons. Keep on the safe side and use a reliable remedy. Glando Tonic is put up in a treatment form and guaranteed to do the work. Ask your druggist for a large $1 treatment. Take it as directed and you will be surprised to know how much poison was stored up within your body. When the liver is inactive a mucus or slime collects within the stomach and bowels which hinders digestion and the assimilation of food. This is called catarrh of the stomach or bowels. Glando Tonic cuts this slime and mucus and removes it. A nauceated feeling is sometimes experienced when this mucus is breaking loose but as soon as it is removed from the bowels, you will feel fine, the complexion clear, the appet te return and you will want to tell others of your wonderful cure.

Glando Tonic is sold by druggists or may be secured by sending direct to the Gland-Aid Co., Fort Wayne, Indiana.

A Well Planned Surprise.

Sunday, 25 of Homer Cook's friends and neighbors gathered at his beautiful country home, just to remind him that he had another birthday and they all brought well-filled baskets. Sunday morning Glenn Shull called and persuaded Homer to take an auto ride, and upon their return, he found his home beautifully decorated, besides two tables heavily laden with good things. A birthday cake, beautifully decorated set in the center of the table on a mound of asparagus and flowers. The surprise was perfect. They all wished him many happy returns of the day.

Women are wearing half shoes this spring, both because the new oxfords are so attractive in appearance, and because the season has been favorable for the very general wearing of low shoes.

Those who do not buy their shoes by chance, but use discrimination in making a selection, enjoy exercising their choice among the several new styles at Lawrence's. These show distinctive character, assured style, correct fitting quality, fine leathers, high quality shoemaking. They set properly, without gaping at side and heel. Also made to keep their shape in service, and to wear well.

SPEND WHAT WE DON'T SAVE

Indiana War Savings Organization Trying to Reverse General Practice.

Most Americans have been living on the theory of "saving what we don't spend." The War Savings organization for Indiana is trying to induce the people of the state to transpose two words in this phrase and make it "spending what we don't save"—to promote wise spending, intelligent saving and safe investmment. On the subject of wise spending the treasury department says:

"This means spending preceded by thought. It implies the balancing of all needs, present and future, and of the means of meeting these needs, and then spending in such a way as to meet the most urgent ones. In essence it is a sort of budget making.

"Wise spending sees to it that all the income is not spent on the first needs or desires, lest other more urgent needs or desires appear.

"The determination of what is wise spending must rest with the individual, but he must be helped to overcome the temptation to satisfy present necessities to the neglect of future needs.

"On the other hand, urgent necessities of today must not be neglected for the petty ones of tomorrow. Provision must me made for a rainy day and unforeseen emergencies, but economic stability implies also some capital with which to turn around, or to take advantage of opportunity."

THRIFT MEANS FREEDOM.

Personal freedom, says the Elkhart Truth, consists of the right of every man to do what he pleases, to go where he pleases, and to be what he pleases so long as he does not interfere with the rights of his neighbors. This is the ideal of individual freedom, but how few of us reach it.

Most of us are weighed down by shackles of circumstance which hamper our every movement. Our progress toward our own ideals of liberty and happiness is painful and slow. Unmet obligations, the worry over what will become of us in our old age, the anxiety of seeing that our children are given a proper start in life, armed with the proper weapons for battling with the world—all these hamper our freedom.

We cannot be free. Free from the fear of want and all these material worries and anxieties which bind us down.

There is a royal road to freedom. It is thrift. Thrift will give us independence of all about us, freedom to go where we please, do what we please and be what we please.

Thrift is not miserliness. Thrift is sane saving, wise buying, the avoidance of waste and safe investment. This is the thrift which our people came to know during the trying days of the war, and which should become a permanent American habit. This is the thrift which the government is trying to foster through the continued sale of Thrift Stamps and War Savings stamps.

This is the thrift that will make millions free if they see and use their opportunity.

FRANKLIN AS W. S. S. SALESMAN.

Harry C. Stutz, the great auto maker, says:

"Ben Franklin, philosopher-statesman, probably gave more sage advice to the people on a multitude of subjects than any other man in our history. But the one he especially sought to impress upon 'Young America' was the virtue of thrift. Were he living now, he would sell more War Savings stamps than any other salesman we could enlist.

"This form of investment appeals to laborer, to youth and to all of moderate means. It is an opportunity for a profitable investment with the best security on the globe, and will be a great demonstrator of the possibilities of saving. Thrift stamps will dig gold for you while you rest and sleep as well as when you work."

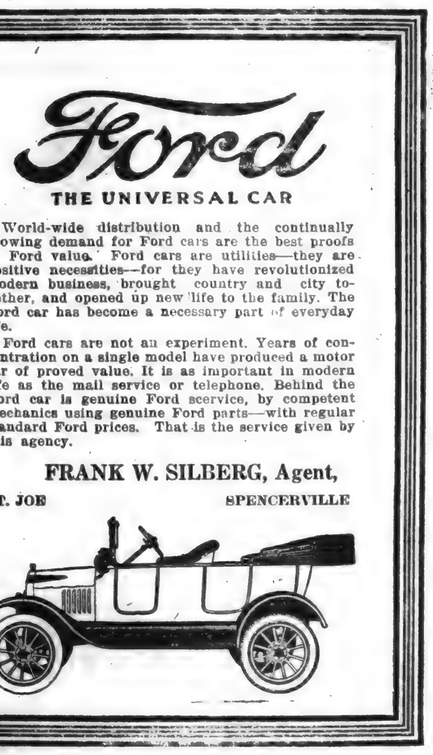
Money Making Money.

One dollar put aside every week for five years will give you over $287; for ten years it will make $638. Of course, $2 a week will give you about double that, or for five years $575.00; and so on. Buy a lead pencil and figure on that. It will be one of the best investments you ever made.—Bolton Hall.

A FIRM FOUNDATION.



World-wide distribution and the continually growing demand for Ford cars are the best proofs of Ford value. Ford cars are utilities—they are positive necessities—for they have revolutionized modern business, brought country and city together, and opened up new life to the family. The Ford car has become a necessary part of everyday life.

Ford cars are not an experiment. Years of concentration on a single model have produced a motor car of proved value. It is as important in modern life as the mail service or telephone. Behind the Ford car is genuine Ford scervice, by competent mechanics using genuine Ford parts—with regular standard Ford prices. That is the service given by this agency.

PICKING UP THAT PIN.

A story told of E. H. Harriman, who died leaving an estate of $75,000,000, credits him with one day picking up a small steel letter clip dropped on the floor by a careless employee.

"I'd like to have as my annual income," said Mr. Harriman, "the value of material thrown away every year by indifferent workers in the offices and factories of America. In a few years I'd be the richest man in the world."

Parishioner's Explanation of Backsliding That Might Be Accounted More or Less Convincing.

Charles B. Ford, the leader of the Chicago butter and egg board, was defending the high price of eggs.

"It is the egg export to the soldiers overseas," he said, "that makes prices high. The egg market, you see, is governed by a purely business spirit.

"If you try to be idealistic with the egg market you are treated like Doctor Steenthly.

"Doctor Steenthly said to a bellicose parishioner who had given another parishioner a black eye:

"'My friend you should love your neighbor as yourself.'

"'Yes, sir; that's right, sir,' said the parishioner.

"'I'm glad you agree,' said Doctor Steenthly, and he added in a rather stern voice:

"'Do you, though—do you honestly—love your neighbor as yourself?'

"'Yes, sir; oh, yes, sir,' said the parishioner; 'but I'm a modest man, you see, and, to tell the truth, I ain't a bit stuck on myself, sir.'"

ROSE INTO DESERVED FAME

Mystic Painter of Lithuania Accorded His Proper Place in the World of Art.

What Scriabine attempted to do with music in Russia, Curlionis has done with paint in Lithuania. M. K. Curlionis is the great mystic painter of Lithuania, that little nation which is calling out to the world its right to national independence.

Curlionis made painting depict music, Scriabine attempted to unite color and sound through the medium of music.

Curlionis studied in Dresden and in Leipzig. With an almost incredible sense of variety, he showed himself to be a remarkable and an original composer. His most conspicuous works were "Rex," "Conte" and the "Sonata of Beethoven."

In the words of the well-known American musical critic, Gilbert W. Gabriel, this painter "succeeds where others have failed, in conveying the nebulousness unlimited in music, the unmindful ecstasy of its imaginings; yet he has made art of it, notable prepossessed art, sternly beautiful. Kinetic art, of course, and madly swift to convey titanic impressions; but such is the modern school, and Paris knows Curlionis as one of its foremost moderns."

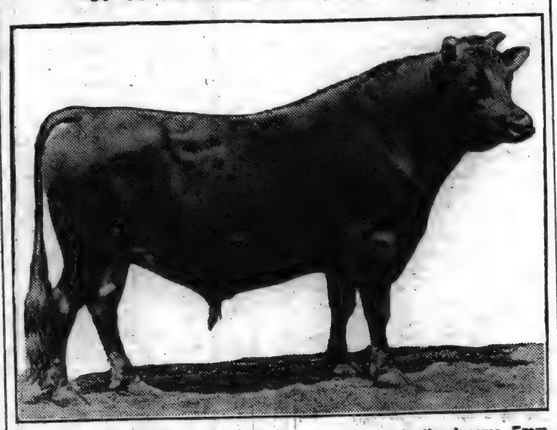
SUGGESTIONS GIVEN FOR ORGANIZATION OF A CO-OPERATIVE BULL ASSOCIATION



If the Best Bulls Were Used in Ordinary Dairy Herds the Income From Dairy Products Could Be Vastly Increased.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Success in the operation of a co-operative bull association depends a great deal on the care that is used in its organization. To begin with, those interested should obtain as much information as possible regarding the plan of operation and should consult with the county agricultural agent. He may be able to give valuable information from experience, or at least will know where such information can be obtained, and he can help greatly in starting the organization. If a county agricultural agent is not available, write to the State Agricultural College or to the Dairy Division of the United States Department of Agriculture at Washington, D. C., either of which will be glad to give advice and assistance. It is advisable, if possible, to visit some near-by bull association in order to study the methods of operating, for the more information that is available the better will be the prospects for a well-organized and successful association.

Write your secretary of state, inclosing a copy of Articles II and IV of the constitution suggested in this bulletin, to indicate the type of incorporation desired, and ask for blanks and all necessary information for incorporating a bull association under the laws of the state. Mention, especially, that the organization permits only one vote for each member. It is usually best to engage a local lawyer to assist in the incorporation.

Sign an Agreement.

The territory should be mapped out into provisional districts where blocks of the association may be formed, to serve as a guide in organizing. The final arrangement of blocks cannot be definitely settled, of course, until after the association is organized and is ready to purchase bulls. In order to bring the bull association plan before the farmers it is best at the outset to explain the subject and ask each to sign an agreement somewhat like the following:

We, the undersigned farmers of _____ and adjoining territory, realizing the need of more profitable dairy cows and the importance of pure-bred dairy bulls of good breeding, hereby agree to enter the number of cows set opposite our respective names, provided that a satisfactory constitution and by-laws can be drawn up and adopted, that a block can be formed within reach of our farms, and that other matters are satisfactorily arranged.

Many people hesitate to sign any paper, but in this case there should be no hesitation, as the agreement is only the expression of a desire to form an association and receive its benefits. The list of signers is convenient in organizing an association and furnishes the names and addresses of those interested when calling a meeting. The preliminary discussion gives the prospective member an opportunity to consider the plan before the first important meeting for organization is held. If possible a sufficient number of bull association bulletins should be obtained, so that each prospective member may have a copy to study before the time for organization.

After the preliminary steps have been taken, the first meeting should be called. Those who have signed the agreement should have a personal notice of the meeting, and in addition the time and place should be generally advertised. It is important to select a convenient time and place for the meeting in order to have the largest possible attendance. More business can be transacted in the forming of an association in one hour at a well-conducted meeting than in a month in traveling from farm to farm. The meeting should be called to order promptly at the hour set, and each one present should remain until the necessary work is completed, for it is much better to prolong the meeting than to call another. In other words, have as few meetings for organization as possible.

Suggested Order of Business for Organization Meeting.

1. Selection of temporary officers.
2. Explanations of the plan and aims of the bull association.
3. Choosing the breed of cattle.
4. Final decision to organize.
5. Selection of committees to report on—
   a. Constitution and by-laws.
   b. Purchase of bulls.
   c. Arrangement of blocks.
6. Reports of committees.
7. Adoption of constitution and by-laws.
8. Election of directors (permanent officers).
9. Permanent arrangement of blocks.
10. Selection of bulls.
11. Arrangement of finances.

The first order of business is the selection of a temporary chairman and secretary to hold office until a permanent organization is effected. The chairman will preside and see that there is a full and free explanation and discussion of the ideas of each member, so that all will have a comprehensive idea of the aims of the organization. This is fundamental in a co-operative organization. One thing should be discussed at a time, and after everyone has had an opportunity to express an opinion the chairman should call for a vote on that point. Those present should consider all questions in a broad way and be prepared to abide by the will of the majority. An expeditious and well-conducted meeting creates solidarity.

The temporary secretary, of course, will record the proceedings of the meeting, keep a record of the questions discussed and of the final decision as shown by the vote. This record will be turned over eventually to the permanent secretary.

A careful explanation of the bull association plan should be given for the benefit of those who are not familiar with the subject. It is a great advantage to have a specialist from the state college of agriculture or from the United States department of agriculture to explain the plan and answer questions.

As soon as the plan is thoroughly understood the question of the breed to be used should be definitely settled. The tendency of many farmers to change from one breed to another from year to year must not be carried into the association. It takes careful study to make progress with a breed, and when a change is made the study must be begun again for the new breed. Once selected, therefore, the breed is established permanently for the association. Before joining, each farmer should understand thoroughly that when he joins the association the breed selected is not to be changed.

It is a great advantage for a community to acquire a reputation for a breed of cattle, and it pays an individual to make some sacrifices in order to use the breed selected by the association. Special advertising that is too costly for a small farmer to obtain alone is possible through an association. The large number of animals in the association offers great opportunity locally for the selection of breeding stock. Hundreds of cows are bred along the same family lines in an association, and opportunities are offered for line breeding that are not available to individual small breeders. The selection of the breed must be determined definitely before any further progress is made toward an organization.

It is advisable that prior to organizing the undertaking an attorney should be consulted in order that the organization shall meet all the requirements of the state law. Farmers' Bulletin 993, copies of which may be obtained, so long as the supply lasts, by writing to the United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., contains a constitution and set of by-laws which will be found valuable as a guide for forming a full association.

FOR BETTER ROADS

CHANGE IDEAS ON HIGHWAYS

Non-Motoring Public No Longer Regards Good Roads as Speedways for Fortunate Neighbors.

The public's conception of "good roads" has undergone a radical change in the last two years.

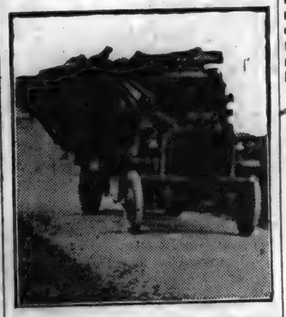
Prior to the entry of the United States into the world war, the non-motoring American public, more often than not, thought good roads were advocated chiefly for the benefit of their more fortunate neighbors who owned and drove their own motor cars writes E. A. Williams, Jr., president of a large motor truck company. They were inclined to regard good roads laws as class legislation and were unwilling for the most part to lend either financial or moral support to the construction and upkeep of something from which they derived no direct benefits so far as they could see.

The war merely hastened what leaders of the industry had foreseen for several years; it furnished the setting and the conditions which enabled the truck to establish itself as a factor in the economic life of the country.

The non-motoring public no longer looks upon good roads as "speedways" for the motoring "aristocracy." It has come to realize that motor trucks are essential as transportation factors, and that good roads are necessary to the efficient operation of trucks. Its vision has been broadened; it sees the advantages and benefits which accrue from a combination of these factors—benefits which have a direct bearing upon the economic conditions of the community.

It sees the farm brought, one might say, to the very table of the consumer; it sees an ultimate decrease in food prices; and, those who pause to consider the matter further, see the ever expanding range of possibilities of the truck and its ally, good roads.

With the universal recognition and adoption of the motor truck the public's conception of how roads should be built also has undergone a change. Heretofore there has been a vast difference between the average man's idea of good roads and that of the experienced engineer. The average man was content to build for the present; the engineer, as a result of past and not altogether satisfactory experience, knows and has known the importance of building for the future as well as the present.



Motor Truck Carrying Big Load Over Improved Road.

The first thing a railroad does after obtaining a right-of-way, as everyone knows, is to build a roadbed and lay tracks. That roadbed is put in to stay. The track, which corresponds to the surface of the highway, is built of the most substantial and practical material to be had.

The railroad officials, however, do not expect this roadbed and track to last forever without attention. Long ago they learned that the only way to assure safety and durability is to anticipate depreciation and make constant repairs.

That is just what we are coming to in road building. For years it has been customary for county engineers to direct such operations but for the most part their work has been hampered by lack of funds, and inadequate force or by limited legislation and more or less red tape. There are some states in which farmers are still working out their road tax by the day, hauling gravel or stone in a more or less haphazard fashion for the construction of roads; upon their efforts and those of a limited force of hired workers depends the maintenance of the community's highways.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

(By REV. P. B. FITZWATER, D. D., Teacher of English Bible in the Moody Bible Institute of Chicago.)

(Copyright, 1919, by Western Newspaper Union.)

LESSON FOR JULY 6

CHURCH: ITS LIFE AND WORK.

LESSON TEXTS—Acts 2:1-4, 37-47; I Thess. 5:11-15.

GOLDEN TEXT—Christ also loved the church, and gave himself for it.—Eph. 5:25.

ADDITIONAL MATERIAL—I Cor. 12: 4-31; Eph. 1:15-23; 4:11-16; 5:25-27; Rev. 1: 10-20.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Our Father's House.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Why We Should Love the Church.

INTERMEDIATE TOPIC—What the Church Does for Us and What We Should Do for the Church.

SENIOR AND ADULT TOPIC—The Spirit and Mission of the Church.

I. The Origin of the Church (Acts 2:1-4).

Fifty days after the passover, while the 120 men and women were "with one accord in one place" the Holy Spirit came upon them and baptised them into one body (I Cor. 12:13). Thus was begun the body called the church. The church had its beginning at Pentecost. The believers were united around the resurrected Christ as head.

II. Conditions of Entrance into the Church (Acts 2:37-41).

After the coming of the Spirit at Pentecost, Peter witnessed to the death and resurrection of Christ. Through this testimony the Spirit convicted these Jews of their sins. In their desperate need they cried out: "What shall we do?" Peter's reply indicated the steps into the church.

(1) Belief in Jesus Christ as Savior. His argument proved that Jesus whom they had crucified was the Messiah.

(2) Repentance. Every one entering the church should repent; should change his mind and attitude toward Jesus Christ.

(3) Be baptized. The divinely appointed method for the public confession of Jesus Christ is baptism. Those who have believed in Jesus Christ should receive this tangible ordinance, which symbolizes our identification with Christ in his death, burial and resurrection.

(4) Receive remission of sins. Those who have been united to Jesus Christ have all their sins removed; there is an entire cancellation of guilt. They have a standing before God which is absolutely perfect.

(5) Receive the Holy Spirit. The gift of the Holy Spirit is the birthright of every regenerated soul who is obedient to Christ.

III. A Portrait of the Primitive Church (Acts 2:42-47).

1. They continued in the apostles' doctrine (v. 42). Instead of being taught by the scribes they are now taught by the apostles. They have turned away from their blind guides and are following new ones.

2. They continued in fellowship around Christ as the head (v. 42). The breaking of bread illustrated the oneness of believers in Christ. As all partook of one loaf, so all believers are one in Christ.

3. They continued in prayer (v. 42). The ideal church is a praying church.

4. They had a community of goods (vv. 43-45). They had all things in common. Those that had possessions sold them and distribution was made to every one as he had need.

5. They were filled with praise (v. 46). All those who have had the experience of the life of God being poured into them are filled with praise, and gratitude must express itself.

IV. The Mutual Duties of Officers and Members of the Church (I Thess. 5:11-15).

1. Mutual intercourse for comfort and edification (v. 11). There is no caste in the church of Jesus Christ; it is a brotherhood.

2. Proper recognition should be given to those who are engaged in spiritual service (v. 12). Only as the grace of God abounds do men and women turn from their secular to spiritual interests. Those who thus respond to the call of God should have popular recognition.

3. Proper respect should be given to church officials (v. 13).

While we should not give worship to those who are leaders in the church of Christ we should give them proper respect. One of the signs of the degeneracy of the age is a lack of respect shown Christian ministers.

4. Live in peace (v. 13). Although there is in the church a diversity of interests and personalities the love of Christ should so fill us that there be no strife in his body.

5. Warn the disorderly (v. 14). As Christ chose twelve and one was a devil, so in the church there will be those who are disorderly. All such should be lovingly warned.

6. Be not retaliative (v. 15). Although others wrong us we should not retaliate.

Growth.

Violent efforts to growth are right in earnestness, but wholly wrong in principle. There is but one principle of growth both for the natural and spiritual, for body and soul. And the principle of growing in grace is once more this, "Consider the lilies how they grow."

Take Second Look.

I am not one of those who do not believe in love at first sight, but I believe in taking a second look.—H. Vincent.

Net Frocks Are Quite in Favor

The warm weather has brought forth a delightful array of the charming dresses of fine white net richly combined with embroidered panels of batiste which are now taking the place of the lingerie gown for the elaborate occasions when such a summer frock is needed.

The fine round thread nets lend themselves beautifully for this sort of dress and are accepted for informal evening affairs as well as for those formal afternoon occasions such as country club teas and bridge parties. Now and then, observes a fashion correspondent, one finds the embroidery on the net usually done in fine white cotton thread in a small trailing emplyed to put the dress together and add further richness, for the idea of this sort of frock seems to be to make it as elaborate as possible. Coarse white net is used for the tight slip underneath, over which is hung the first layer of the outside material.

One elaborate gown shows a very skimpy underskirt with three small ruffles of the net placed one above the other upside down along the bottom. The embroidered net is used in an apron drapery for the front of the skirt and has a very wide sash of ciel blue satin ribbon running under the edge of this apron and draping over the hips to be tied in a very wide bow at the waistline in the back. This sash is so wide indeed that it appears almost like a bustle of the satin placed at the back. The bodice is put together with wide filet lace and is quite as elaborate as the skirt, repeating an embroidered panel in a vestee effect. The sleeves are longer than the French models but do not come quite to the elbow.

An Effective Combination.

One of the effective combinations in the elaborate type of dress is displayed in a gown of white organdie and white net combined. The net, embroidered in a very handsome design, forms the upper part of the gown, while the organdie, tucked from waist to hem, is placed in side panels. The finest of Irish crochet lace is used as a trimming on this frock, edging the collar, which is cut in deep points in the front away from the throat, and edging the two pockets placed on the front net panel in the skirt. The short sleeves are also edged with lace.

No sash is used on this dress, and because of the beauty of the design and the material none indeed is needed. One sees any number of dresses with the finely tucked side panels in all sorts of fine cotton materials. As the tucks are as a rule not more than half an inch wide and are placed so closely together as almost to overlap they do not thicken the figure in spite of the fact that they run round instead of up and down.

While the white dress is the preferred now and again one finds a color combination worthy of note, as, for instance, in a soft little one-piece thing which has the upper part entirely of finest plaited chiffon pale pink in color. The lower part of the skirt is made of an embroidered panel of net appliqued onto the chiffon and finished off at the sides and back with enough of the plain net to give the needed width, and let us note, in passing, that skirts are somewhat wider than the spring first showing predicted. It is well known that thin fabrics are not graceful when skimped and the tight straight effects must be studiously avoided for really good and graceful results.

Solves a Problem.

The use of fine net with other materials this summer solves a problem of what to do with the embroidered panels which come from the Philippines, Switzerland or France and which so often are too much for a shirt waist and yet not enough for the dress. Some of the most pleasing results obtained are shown by cleverly putting these panels together with handsome lace, filet or Irish crochet, and filling out all the required spaces with the fine net.

In speaking of this sort of gown one must not forget that the sash is often its most important part, for one is just as apt to find it forming almost the entire back as not, the narrow inch-wide string belts being left for other dresses. If, however, one prefers the narrower type inch-wide moire ribbon with picot edges is used in two strips.

Contrasting with the elaborately draped and befrilled frock we find the straight one-piece frock, almost perfectly straight from neck to hem, much in favor. The chemise frock it is called and is made of embroidered panels of net and lace or embroidered batiste combined with the net. On this type of dress the sash is very wide and tied its full width about the waist as straight and unrelieved by folds or drawing in as a child's. Of course the dress itself buttons down the back and the long lines thus remain unbroken.

Ruffles as Trimming.

Wee ruffles of plain organdie and very narrow edges of Valenciennes lace are used as trimming. In the place of the braiding the organdie is now and then covered with machine stitching, which has the same effect, always done in white, as for some reason this is to be a white summer, at least as far as our finest frocks go. This stitching was used a great deal during the winter on hats and turbans and on silk dresses, but as yet this is the first season it has appeared in the thinner fabrics, therefore its presence tells of its being the newest thing.

One of the most delightful fabrics for the less elaborate dress than those described is the cross-barred organdie, so sheer and fine that it is a delight to wearer and beholder endlessly. It is found made up into a rather dressy morning frock of almost shirt-waist simplicity, though the addition of tiny ruffles of footing along the wide low collar, along the sleeves and on the tops of the little pockets placed on the front of the skirt relieves the dress of any plainness whatever. A straight round belt holds in the waist and at the back a wide sash of the organdie is edged the full length, with the footing frilled into place. Accompanying this delightful frock is a wide-brimmed hat of the same material with a soft edge and bows of white net standing up at just the right angle in front.

Organdie Still in Favor.

Of course we are not to think for a moment that organdie has lost its favor, though these finer dresses have pushed it somewhat to one side on dressy occasions. Organdie is delightful to see—on the other person. It belongs by right to youth and slim figures, for its rigidity and its extreme thinness are both against it in the average woman's eyes.

The brilliant colors are much in favor for fine frocks and can be made as simple or as fussy as one desires. One of rose pink has a tight underskirt with a deep hem and over this hang four panels of the pink organdie edged with narrow lace frills. A bib of the organdie with the lace extending from the neck to the bottom of the bib appearing below the pink satin sash is introduced in the front of the waist to give the popular vestee effect, which seems to rage with the same favor the early spring gave it. The back of the waist is plain, relieved at the neck only by a deep collar of the lace-edged organdie and the sleeves, short to the elbow, have also the lace frills finishing them.

Fashion Forecast.

Red hats will be featured in summer millinery—red sailors, red garden sport hats and the more elaborate mushroom shape for afternoon wear. This color note in millinery is especially effective with all white or gray gowns.

VACATION SAVINGS AND THRIFT WEEK

Indiana W. S. S. Workers Putting Into Effect a Practical Educational Campaign.

The War Savings campaign is proceeding in Indiana with renewed energy. To get into every household suggestions that will be helpful in wise spending and sane saving the War Savings Organization for Indiana is conducting a vacation savings campaign and making preparations for "Thrift Week," beginning June 23.

"Thrift Week" will not be a spectacular or coercive "drive" such as marked the activities of the War Savings Organization last year when the raising of a certain sum of money was the chief objective. It will be a house-to-house canvass under the direction of the county chairman in each county, with a view to educating the citizens of Indiana in the practice of thrift. The canvass includes:

(a) Obtaining pledges for the regular purchase, if possible, of Thrift and War Savings stamps during the balance of the year.

(b) Putting into every household a small blank record sheet for household expenses, accompanied by an order card through which those desiring to establish the budget system in the home may obtain complete forms and instructions.

(c) Distribution of War Savings literature.

(d) Distribution of new War Savings buttons to all signing pledge cards.

The vacation Savings campaign began with the closing of the schools. It includes:

(a) Taking of pledges for the saving by pupils of 10 per cent or more of their earnings or allowances during the vacation period, for investment in Thrift or War Savings stamps weekly, monthly or upon the pupil's return to school in the fall.

(b) Making it a point to know the opportunities for spare-time employment open to boys and girls, and encouraging them to take advantage of such opportunities. If the pupils can earn money during the vacation period it naturally follows that they will have money for saving and investing.

(c) Obtaining reports on the success of the vacation Savings plan soon after the beginning of the fall term of school.

The Indiana Organization has just finished a drive for the establishment of War Savings and Thrift stamp agencies "wherever money passes over the counter." Secretary of the Treasury Glass believes the only compulsion in the purchase of War Savings Stamps should be self-applied, but it is necessary to facilitate the practice of thrift.

The drive for agencies has made it easier for savers to invest their savings. By shortening the distance between the inclination to save and the actual purchase of a Thrift or War Savings Stamp—through the establishment of many agencies—the War Savings Organization expects to head off many temptations to spend foolishly.

A STITCH IN TIME.

SAVE KEEP DOLLARS GROWING.

Indianapolis, Ind., June —"Keep the Dollars Growing," is the Treasury Department's slogan, according to Robert E. Springsteen, director of the Indiana War Savings Committee. Mr. Springsteen's committee is urging citizens of Indiana to convert the coupons of their Liberty Bonds into War Savings Stamps. In this manner the bond holder is able to keep his dollars growing.

"June 15 is again pay day in the United States," said Mr. Springsteen. "On that day Uncle Sam owes his people $36,000,658.00 in interest on the first Liberty Loan. The interest coupon can be exchanged at the post office or almost any bank for War Savings Stamps, which pay 4 per cent compounded quarterly.

"Everybody who can afford it (and everybody ought to be able to save) should reinvest money in the stamps. They are a good investment and they help float government expenses."

(With Apologies to Kipling.)
It ain't the tens nor fifties
You earn from day to day
Nor yet the fives or two-spots
That you gather on the way;
It Ain't the million billionaire
Nor the nation as a whole,
But the nickles and the pennies
From each patriotic soul.

CALLS THRIFT GOOD FOR ALL BUSINESS

R. E. Springsteen, W. S. S. Director for Indiana Outlines State Campaign for Present Year.

Indianapolis, Ind., June—Thrift is not only good business for business, but is good business for every city and every county in Indiana. This is to be the text of the 1919 campaign for War Savings stamps sales in Indiana, according to State Director Robert E. Springsteen.

"We are able to show, from results obtained here in the state last year," said Mr. Springsteen, "just how the thrift campaigns work out for cities and counties, as well as for individuals. These campaigns help not only individuals, but whole communities.

"Marion county's savings banks and trust companies last year increased their deposits almost two million dollars. These deposits, representing savings in the main, were made despite the fact that Marion county subscribed vast amounts to the Liberty loans and bought large quantities of Thrift stamps. What is true of Marion county is true of the other counties.

"These added deposits increase the business strength of the community. It was the savings habit, embodied in the War Savings stamp idea, that produced the increase, and we expect to hammer this idea home all over the state."

Mr. Springsteen called attention to the record of Jackson county, as described in the Columbus, Ind., Ledger. The Ledger, editorially, said in a recent issue:

"The thrift that enabled the country to buy the stamps and bonds is now going ahead to keep the country on a stable business basis. People of the United States did not content themselves with buying the billions in government securities. They added to their bank deposits as well, with the result that now, after two years of war conditions, the country has more money on deposit in banks than ever before. This is true of the nation, the state and Bartholomew county.

"Jackson county, our neighbor on the south, is a good example. With 125 War Savings societies busy putting over government securities in the amount of some four million dollars, the county increased its savings bank deposits from approximately $1,800,000 at the beginning of the war, to some $3,300,000 at present. These added savings will MAKE BUSINESS for Jackson county."

WISE SPENDING THRIFT PLAN.

Charles F. Coffin, the insurance man, and president of the Indianapolis chamber of commerce says:

"Thrift means wise spending, as contrasted with hoarding. Thrift means the avoidance of waste; it means intelligent savings and safe investment. That is why the business world welcomes the national, state and local campaigns for the promotion of thrift with the W. S. S. used to form object lessons.

"Every alert business man agrees that thrifty communities afford him his best market. Every advertising man asks for no better audience than people who, having money in hand or possessing good credit, spend thoughtfully. Merchants nowadays work with a view not only to today's sales, but to the sales of tomorrow, next week and next year. The day when the merchant was glad to take away from a family its entire pay envelope on pay day is past, because the merchant wants business every day instead of only on pay days.

"Business men expect to find a sound reaction on their sales campaigns, in the government's savings campaign. This reaction should be thoroughly wholesome. They may be counted upon therefore, to do all they can to assist agencies working with the government for the promotion of thrift."

How the Money Grows.

The one who can save $5 a week and invest at 4 per cent can count up $1,432 as his very own in five years, and will have 50 cents over to celebrate on. In 20 years your $5 weekly will make $7,877. This will give you a yearly income of $818.—Bolton Hall.

Sane Spending Is Saving.

The industrious man works hard and saves hard; the miser skimps and hoards; but the man of thrift earns largely, plans carefully, manages economically, saves consistently and invests wisely.—Bolton Hall.

VOL. XXXIII ST. JOE DeKALB COUNTY, INDIANA. THURSDAY JULY 10 1919 NO. 28

Another Citizen Dies

Hilery Shuff, a Well-Known Resident of St. Joe for 45-yrs. Passed Away Suddenly at His Home Thursday Morning—Was In Usual Health.

One of the most sudden deaths in DeKalb County this year was that of Hillary Shuff of St. Joe, who passed away at 1:30 Thursday morning after a short illness from heart trouble. Mr. Shuff seemed in his usual health Wednesday and was down town as late as 9 o'clock Wednesday night.

For several months he had been in poor health, although he was working most of the time. Upon retiring he showed no signs of a serious illness, but in the night Mrs. Shuff awoke by his heavy breathing and calling her son, Harry, in the next room immediately, and he passed away without a struggle and any knowlege whatever that the end was near.

For forty-five years he had lived in St. Joe and was one of our first citizens and was known as "Hillary" among the old and young. Always of a rather jolly mood. His presence will be greatly missed.

Obituary

Hilery Shuff, the son of Abraham and Sarah Shuff, was born August 24, 1848, at Frederick County, Virginia at Paddy.

They moved from place to place until the fall of 1863. To keep from going into the southern army he left Virginia and came to the north and settled in Blair county, Pennsylvania, where he worked for the government until the war ended. He left there and went to Altona, Pennsylvania where he remained until the fall of 1873, the year of the great panic, when he came west. In June 1874, he came to St Joe, Indiana, where he has been employed by the B. & O. railroad for the past forty years. August 4, 1878 he was united in marriage to Miss Mary Hull. To this union were born four children. They are the following, Asa Delbert, John Henry, Elizabeth Alta and Harry Elsworth. The former of Indianapolis, John of Redonda Beach, California, Mrs. Elizabeth Milliman near St. Joe and Harry at home. Beside these are three sisters, Mrs. Lizzie Stratiff and Mrs. Sadie Hughes of Altona, Pa., and Miss Annie Shuff of Denver, Colorado and one brother, Asa Shuff of the Canal Zone, S. A., four grandchildren, Marguerite and Leota Milliman of this vicinity and Harold and Audra Shuff of Redonda Beach. These with the faithful wife are left to mourn his departure which occurred July 3, at the home after a busy day spent at his work.

Brother Shuff joined the M. P. Church in St. Joe, December 10, 1893 under the pastorate of W. W. Lineberry, and has been a faithful member of the church since that date.

The following out-of-town people attended the funeral: Asa Shuff of Indianapolis, John Baker and wife of near Cleveland, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hull, Mrs. Ellen Baker and Charles Jenkins of Auburn, Wayne Scott and Mrs. Will Scott of Hicksville and Reson Chaney and wife of Spencerville.

The funeral services were held from the home, Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock, Rev. C. O. Johnson, officiating. Burial in Riverside.

WEBB

Donald Seymour Webb, son of Ray E. and Ines Webb of Fairview was born in Pulaski Co, Ind., Dec. 27, 1916, and returned to the heavenly father June 22, 1919. Just when the little one had firmly enfolded himself into the affections of his parents, their firstborn, and of grandparents and other relatives.

Donald was an affectionate child and was loved by all who knew him. His sunny disposition and even temper, making him especially dear to his loved ones, who will sorely miss the patter of little feet and the childish prattle. But while he will be missed so sadly in the earthly home he will be gladly welcomed in the heavenly.

Besides the parents he leaves an infant sister, grandparents and other relatives who feel sadly disappointed at the untimely loss of this little one, but all can say "Gods will be done," and in the assurance that "He doeth all things well," look forward to the day when the little arms shall once more twine about their hearts in the home where death never comes.

The funeral services were held from the home on Tuesday afternoon, June 24, with Rev. C. O. Johnson officiating. Burial in the Riverside cemetry.

Mr. and Mrs. Anton Boviski of Wisconsin, came Saturday night to visit her parents Mr. and Mrs. Sherman Rickett, who on Sunday entertained in their honor, Roscoe Rickett and wife of Garrett, Will Alwood and family of Butler, Sam Dailey and family and Mrs. Hannah Uim and granddaughter.

Sol Barney returned home Monday evening from Columbus, O., where he was the guest of his daughter, Mrs. C. S. Johnson and family. He attended the Centenary and it evidently is a great affair, as he was compelled to return home because his money was getting low. Our honest opinion is that he was lonesome for some work to do.

Frequently requests comes to us to withold certain news features from our colums and at the same time they will appear in other papers from our county. We have to the conclusion that it is up to us to give the news as it is and in such a way as to harm no one, because a newspaper man is criticised if does or does not publish certain news features.

Paul Krabill arrived home Sunday evening on B. & O. No. 6, and his parents were exceedingly surprised when he stepped into their home, not knowing him to be in in the states. It took him just 12 days to get his discharge and he had rather expected to get home on the 4th., but was held up on his pay. Paul has many interesting experiences to relate of his activities at the front and has escaped any ill effects of his exposures to to the enemy and the weather. It's really of no use to ask him how he is, just look at him and you will be convinced that he could not feel much better.

Let us furnish the suit case or bag you need and also the fine "Duds" to put in it. Then you can make that trip and have a good time.

We have the stylish summer clothes you want, and summer furnishings that will make you look fresh as a daisy and cool as a cucumber.

Our prices are low. Come in.

In giving mention last week of the school reunion at Spencerville, an error was made in mentioning the author of the history of the old school, as Nancy Rummell and it should have been Mrs. Nancy Chaney. She put considerable work on the production.

Mr. and Mrs. E. D. Hendricks of Auburn, received a telegram Friday telling them of the safe arrival in New York of their son, Simon Hendricks. He has been overseas for nearly eleven months in the D. M. D. of the 51st infantry. He is expected home soon.—Star.

The KITCHEN CABINET

I think that I shall never see
A poem lovely as a tree.
A tree whose hungry mouth is prest
Against the earth's sweet flowing breast.
A tree that looks at God all day
And lifts her leafy arms to pray;
A tree that may in summer wear
A nest of robins in her hair;
Upon whose bosom snow has lain,
Who intimately lives with rain.
Poems are made by fools like me,
But only God can make a tree.

FEEDING THE SICK AND CONVALESCENT

Few families are so fortunate as to escape illness during some time of their history. Good feeding is an important factor in maintaining health, but in spite of good food a sudden chill or strain of overwork or worry will overwhelm even a strong and healthy body.

Since all food must be reduced to fluid form before it can be digested and assimilated, that seems to be the best form to serve it to those who are ill. This diet includes broths and clear soups of various kinds, beef juice and beef tea, cereals, gruels, milk plain or modified to make it more digestible, nutritious or more agreeable to the patient, raw eggs in combination with water, milk, fruit juices or cocoa and cream soups of various kinds.

Broths, clear soups and beef tea have little nourishment, but stimulate the appetite, are refreshing when cold or soothing when hot; they also stimulate the flow of gastric juice. By adding eggs, milk or the thickening of cereal flour like barley or rice, they may be quite nutritive.

Cereal gruels are neither stimulating nor irritating and are most useful when the appetite is poor and digestion weak, as they are quickly digested and absorbed.

Like broths, gruels may be enriched by eggs, cream and milk, for one could not drink enough to keep up the body energy without the addition of some more nutritive food.

Milk is one of the most valuable foods for sick people and fortunately most patients like it. It has been called the perfect food. Its value may be increased by changing its flavor, adding yeast to it making a drink called koumiss and by adding junket or rennin to partly digest it making it more palatable and adding variety.

The world would be more happy and the mass of people in it just as wise, if they would whistle more and argue less.

SOME CHOICE DESSERTS.

A delicious and well-prepared dessert will often help us to forget that the preceding dishes were not all that we desired. At this season of the year frozen desserts and light, easily digested dishes are more suitable. During the hot weather we need refreshing combinations rather than the nourishing; however, one may have both in a dish of ice cream. A most satisfactory sherbet, which is both delicious and economical, is Velvet Sherbet.—Take the juice of three lemons, two cupfuls of sugar and a quart of good milk, the richer the better, though ordinary milk will be satisfactory. Freeze and serve in sherbet cups.

Orange and Lemon Sherbet.—Take the juice of two oranges, two lemons and two cupfuls of sugar and a quart of thin cream; freeze as usual.

Dainty Dessert.—Take a pound of marshmallows and a cup of pecans cut fine; cut the mallows into quarters and add enough whipped cream to blend and hold them together. Into a large-topped sherbet glass put a tablespoonful of any canned fruit juice, fill with the whip and serve with a cherry as a garnish.

Duchess Cream.—Take six tablespoonfuls of tapioca; cook until clear; cool, add a pinch of salt, one cupful of sugar, the juice from a can of pineapple, the juice of two oranges and two lemons; cook until thick. Cool, then add the pineapple, one cupful of nuts and a pint of whipping cream. This makes enough to serve 15, so that the recipe may be cut in half for an ordinary family.

Chocolate Pudding.—Take one egg and when well beaten add one-half cupful of sugar, one cupful of milk, two squares of chocolate melted, one and one-half cupfuls of flour sifted with three teaspoonfuls of baking powder. Steam one and one-half hours and serve with Foamy Sauce.—Beat one egg, add one cupful of powdered sugar mixed with two tablespoonfuls of softened butter, a pinch of salt and a little flavoring; then fold in one cupful of whipped cream.

Grapenuts Pudding.—Prepare one package of lemon jelly as usual, then add one cupful of steamed raisins, one-half cupful of sugar and one cupful of grapenuts, six walnut meats cut fine, all well mixed. Put into a mold and serve with whipped cream.

To hear the call of thrushes some late green plush afternoon,
When broken, fading shafts of light go groping for the one last sight of songsters in the gloom.
To swing along the rugged trail that spruce and hemlocks climb,
'Till on the hill's high top you come to stand exalted in the sun! Ah, this is summer time.
—Beulah Rector.

ORIGINAL DESIGNS IN COOKERY.

To the artist cook who really enjoys mixing ingredients, as a painter does his colors, there is no limit to the tasty, delightful dishes which one may originate or enlarge upon, with the materials at hand. Take for instance a steamed plum pudding. A piece of corn bread, a half a cupful of cooked oatmeal, a few bread crumbs, a cupful of left-over cocoa and a few raisins with two egg yolks left from a frosting or dessert will make a most tasty pudding. After some experience in handling foods one may concoct toothsome dishes of bits of left-overs. It is not always wise to tell all one knows as to a dish, for some conscientious objectors will refuse to even try a made-over or re-arranged food.

Savory salads which have some elusive aroma and seasoning which adds to their charm and is hard to determine, makes such a dish "something different." One must follow a few fundamental principles in cookery, and after that let the imagination soar. The cook who wastes nothing, but at the same time serves her food in a dainty, tasty and appetising manner, is a real genius, and her talents are in constant demand.

Do you throw away the half-cupful, cupful or more of melted ice cream that might make a pudding for the next day or be used in a cake, adding less sugar?

Sandwich filling and salads make a wide field for original designs, as well as flour mixtures.

The woman who discovered that a sponge cake could be made more fetching by adding the yolks unbeaten, one at a time, and not stirring them very freely, had a cake that attracted much comment because of its streaked gold-and-white appearance. Accident often is the mother of new things, but the housewife who is looking for new and pleasing effects will find them all the while.

The art of cooking cannot be learned out of a book any more than the art of swimming or the art of painting. The best teacher is practice; the best guide sentiment (providing you have any).

FOOD COMBINATIONS.

There is no law which governs the foods that go well together, for the kind of food served depends upon whether you are an oriental or a Bostonian. The tastes of a people determine the food combination. It is a study which is both a science and an art. We may seem to thrive on one kind of food, but we find that where two or three are served they digest better and are better able to keep up the body activities. If we treat the body as a well regulated furnace which is fed at intervals, not stuffed with the day's allowance which will choke the fires through imperfect combustion, we will be intelligent in the choice and care of food.

If we overeat we waste good fuel, and overwork the furnace; if we are undernourished the furnace, cannot give off heat or supply energy.

The three food principles which we find supply the body in the best possible manner are proteins, meat, fish, eggs and milk, fats which are obtained from butter, cream and nuts, carbohydrates or sugars and starches represented by potatoes, rice and sugar. To see that these three foods are included in each meal we have what is called a well-balanced meal, if they are served in good proportions.

In each meal we have another responsibility to see that foods containing iron, phosphorus and calcium are given, as well as some which furnish the roughage or ballast necessary to give bulk to the food.

Fruits which excite the appetite are used first, as fresh fruit for breakfast and sweets are used as a finish, or dessert, as sugar dulls the apetite; a good reason for never giving children sweets just before a meal, a practice far too common among mothers.

Some people are sensitive to certain foods or combinations which others enjoy with comfort; this is owing to some peculiarity of the body machine; of course these things should be avoided. Happy the man and woman who is normal and is able to eat, digest, assimilate and enjoy all the good things provided by our allwise Creator.

The menu maker needs to know her family, to recognise the value of variety, and yet not to overdo it, for we all are faithful to the old favorites.

BULL SHOULD ALWAYS BE SUPERIOR TO MOST CAREFULLY SELECTED COW IN HERD

A Well-Bred Cow—The Dam.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

In all bull-association work the influence of heredity is recognized. Since like tends to beget like in production as well as in appearance, there is little danger that the pure-bred bull whose ancestors for several generations have been first-class individuals will inherit or transmit the qualities of some inferior distant ancestor. If he is also well formed, strong and healthy, he will almost certainly increase out of all proportion to his cost the income from the first generation of a scrub or low-grade herd. In fact the time may come when it will be possible to eliminate all bulls except those whose dams are in the advanced registry. If the best bulls were used to their full capacity in pure-bred herds, and if only good pure-bred bulls were used in the ordinary dairy herds, the income from the dairy business could be vastly increased. If possible, all bulls used should be from advanced-registry dams with a butterfat record of not less than 400 pounds. The dams should be from high-producing ancestors. The bull should always be superior to the best cows in the herd, and all cows should be well bred and carefully selected.

Improvements Due to Sire.

Few organizations have been in operation long enough for the producing daughters of an association bull to be compared with their dams. The following figures, however, received from an association at New Windsor, Md., show the improvement due to the sire and the average butterfat production of daughters of association bulls compared with that of their dams:

	Fat average (pounds).
Bull No. 1:
7 daughters	270.8
7 dams	208.3
Increase	62.2
Bull No. 2:
7 daughters	281.6
7 dams	226.4
Increase	55.2
Bull No. 3:
2 daughters	389.6
2 dams	254.0
Increase	135.6

Fourteen out of sixteen daughters excelled their dams, the average increase of the daughters over dams being 80 per cent. The increase of the daughters of the good bulls mentioned above occurred with remarkable regularity. On the other hand, a poor bull decreases the production of his daughters.

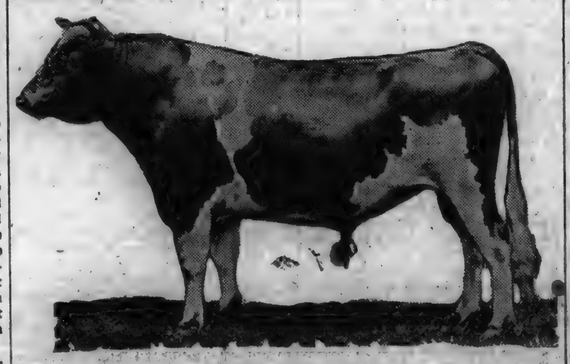
Note the following results of using a scrub bull:

The dam produced.....145 pounds of fat
The daughters of the bull and this dam produced..136 pounds of fat
The granddaughter of the bull produced ..... 99 pounds of fat

It is only when the lifetime-production records of all his daughters are compared with those of their dams that the full value of the bull's services to one generation can be known. In addition his influence on the herd will be noticeable for many generations. This illustrates the great value of a good bull. The damage done by an inferior bull may be equally great. No other argument should be necessary in urging that every association be particular in selecting bulls.

Real Value of Bull.

All pure-bred bulls are not equally valuable. The daughters of some are inferior to their dams, while the daughters of others greatly excel their dams. The only way one may know the real value of the bull is to compare the production records of his daughters with those of their dams. It takes at least three years from the time the bull is put into service to obtain some of this information, and very often the farmer has disposed of the bull a year or more before the end of that time. When he finds that the bull has improved the herd, his search for the bull may end in the stockyard or with the butcher. It is seldom that such a bull is found again. If he still lives and is being used, it may be at a considerable distance from the original owner. Since the two do not meet, the second user has no means of knowing the worth of the bull. Thus many valuable bulls have been lost and inferior ones used instead. In the bull association this cannot happen, for all the bulls are kept in the association until thoroughly tried. The poor ones are then sent to the block and the good ones kept and judiciously used to their full capacity to the end of their usefulness, which may be 12 or 15 years. This advantage alone is enough to repay all the trouble and expense of forming an association.



A Well-Bred Bull—The Sire.

MORE RYE BEING PRODUCED

Greatest Increase Seen in 1917 and 1918—Farmers Becoming More Familiar With Crop.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

More acres and more bushels of rye were harvested in 1918 than in any previous year in the history of the United States.

From 1849 to 1909 rye production in the United States was practically stationary. From 1909 to 1918 the production was almost tripled, the greatest increase coming in 1917 and 1918.

Five years ago there was approximately 1 acre of rye for each 21 acres of wheat in the United States. In 1918 there was approximately 1 acre of rye for each 10 acres of wheat.

The 1918 rye crop was more than 76,000,000 bushels.

The world production of rye amounts to about one and two-thirds billion bushels, somewhat less than half the annual wheat production.

The United States department of agriculture thinks it probable, now that farmers are becoming familiar with the crop and its advantages, that rye will have a permanently larger place in American agriculture, and that from an agricultural point of view there should be a further considerable increase in production.

STUDY UP CHOLERA ERE IT GETS IN YOUR HERD

The United States department of agriculture and the state agricultural colleges have done a vast amount of work in learning how to prevent and control hog cholera. From these two sources you can get information on how to prevent this disease. You can have them for the asking. Your county agent and your local veterinarian can also advise you. Ask the United States department of agriculture for Farmers' Bulletin 834, Prevention and Treatment of Hog Cholera.

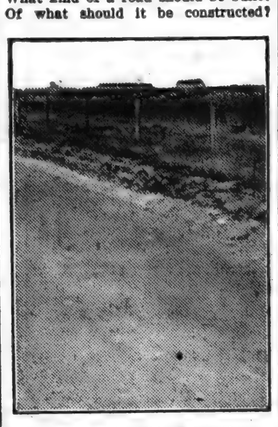
ROAD BUILDING

BENEFITS OF COUNTRY ROADS

Among Other Things They Cheapen Cost of Transportation of Farm Products to Market.

Good roads promote self-respect in a community. They make possible social intercourse. They bring the benefits of churches and schools within the reach of all. They help to keep the boys on the farm. They cheapen the cost of transportation of farm products to the markets and thus add to the farm profits. They add to the value of farm lands much more than they cost. They mark the degree of civilization of the rural community. This, in short, is the value of good roads as seen by the extension service of the University of Missouri College of Agriculture.

The building of good roads is of the greatest importance to a community. What kind of a road should be built? Of what should it be constructed?



Good Roads Like This Bring Farmer Nearer to City Markets.

What are the things to be considered in locating the road? What "grade" should be maintained? How should the road be drained? What are the laws governing highway construction? There are a few questions answered in extension circular 68 dealing with country roads.

Matters of prime consideration in locating a road are: Easy grades, good drainage, exposure to sunshine, elimination of culverts and bridges by avoiding unnecessary creek crossings, directness and the number of farms to be served for a given length of road. Whenever possible to avoid it, a good location should not be rejected merely because a certain roadway has been in use for some time. If the location of a used road is bad it should be changed if possible. In relocating roads avoid railroad crossings at grades.

The grade of the road is important for on this depends the weight of the load which can be hauled economically. By grade is meant the rise or fall in feet for each 100 feet in horizontal length of road, usually expressed in percentage. A 5 per cent grade means that the road rises or falls 5 feet each 100 feet along its center line. It has been calculated that on a smooth country road the load that one horse could pull on a level would require two on a 5 per cent grade, three on a 10 per cent grade and four on a 15 per cent grade. Engineers usually figure a 6 per cent grade as a maximum.

Road work in Missouri has not been as well managed as other public work. Projects have been too narrowly limited to localities, resulting in fragmentary effort. Skilled locating and supervision of construction have been generally lacking. The remedies are: First, a wider co-operation and the adoption of broad schemes of improvement, preferably with units no smaller than counties. Second, the absolute elimination of political considerations in the spending of money. Third, securing good engineering advice in the preparation of plans and requiring careful engineering supervision of construction.

ENGLAND SPENDS 50 MILLION

Grants to That Amount Will Be Distributed for Reconstruction of Roads and Bridges.

Grants amounting to $50,000,000 will be distributed by the British road board for the reconstruction of roads and bridges in England in 1919. Demobilized army units will be used to do the labor. Local highway authorities will be required to match this appropriation by at least as large a program of road work as they carried out in the year before the war. Area taken into consideration, England's program is thus far in excess of that of the United States, including both federal aid and state funds.

POOR ROADS ARE EXPENSIVE

Congressional Report Places Annual Loss at $504,000,000 for Transportation Alone.

The congressional report of 1914 placed the economic loss of the United States through poor roads at an annual figure of $504,000,000 for transportation costs alone. The heavy increase in tonnage since that time probably makes the loss today close to $1,000,000,000.

Terre Haute Contractor Says, "I Was Well Repaid for My Small Investment in Pepgen."

John Phillips.

John W. Phillips, building contractor, 907 N. For more than a year I suffered with my stomach and nerves. I was on the verge of a complete breakdown. I bought a bottle of Pepgen and was well repaid for my small investment because Pepgen relieved me. I am now eating three square meals every day and never have a sign of indigestion. I have gained several pounds. Everybody in Terre Haute is enthusiastic about Pepgen. There is hardly a day that our local newspapers do not contain an account of some person who has been relieved by it. Most of the cases are remarkable."

INCREASE WEIGHT AND VITALITY WITH PHOSPHATE

Nothing Like Plain Bitro-Phosphate to Put on Firm, Healthy Flesh and to Increase Strength, Vigor and Nerve Force.

The average person is beginning to realize more and more that the lack of physical strength and nerve exhaustion (frequently evidenced by excessive thinness) are the direct cause not only of the failure to succeed in life's struggle for the necessities of existence, but also for the handicap in one's social aspirations. Compare the thin, sickly, angular frame with the well rounded form which is usually accompanied by the bloom of health and attractiveness.

At the seaside too, the plump well-rounded figure is most admired.

That millions of people are conscious of this handicap is evident from the continued appearance in newspapers and magazines of many suggestions proposing various remedies in food or medicine or exercises, either of which might or might not be appropriate for a given case.

Authorities, however, agree that healthy nerve tissue is absolutely essential to a strong, robust body and mind. Weak nerves, while indicated by a multitude of different symptoms, more immediately and generally result in lack of energy, sleeplessness, irritability, depression, etc., which conditions gradually consume the healthy flesh, leaving ugly hollows, a flat chest, bony neck and scrawny arms and legs.

Our bodies need more phosphate than most of them are able to extract from the foods we eat nowadays, and many opinions affirm that there is nothing which may be taken into the human system that so effectively supplies this deficiency as the pure organic phosphate known as bitro-phosphate and sold by good druggists everywhere.

The essential phosphoric food elements in bitro-phosphate assimilated by the nerve cells should soon produce a pleasing change in nerve energy and hence increased vitality and strength. With the burdens of nervousness, sleeplessness, lack of energy, etc., lifted, normal weight with its attractive fullness and ruddy glow of health replaces the former picture of skin and bones.

CAUTION:—Although Bitro-Phosphate is unexcelled for the relief of nervousness and attendant disorders, owing to its tendency to increase weight, one should watch the scales while taking it unless it is the desire to put on flesh.

INDIANA NEWS

Bluffton.—The weevil has destroyed at least one-third of the Wells county wheat crop. Small tracts of wheat are being left uncut.

Anderson.—The wheat harvest is in full swing in Madison county. Farmers report that spring wheat, tried for the second time in this country, is far behind the winter wheat. The winter crop promises a yield of thirty-five bushels an acre.

Terre Haute.—The Inland Coal and Mining company has been placed in the hands of a receiver on the petition of 48 former employees, who allege that they are unable to collect payment for services rendered. Fred Friss, a local attorney, was named receiver.

Evansville.—Threshing of wheat is getting under way in southern Indiana. If the weather remains fair, it will be general in this region in a few days. Some already threshed in Vanderburg county tested 58 pounds to the bushel, making it No. 2 in grade. In certain regions the yield is said to be normal, while in others the yield is below normal.

Greenfield.—Wheat harvest is nearly completed in this district, and, although the straw is unusually heavy, it is estimated the yield will be about four bushels an acre smaller than last year. A tour was made by the county agricultural agent, and a government specialist, in an attempt to find fields of wheat which might be certified for seed. Not one field could be found that did not contain less than 8 per cent of disease or foreign grain.

Washington.—The transport Magnolia, which sailed from St. Nazaire for Boston, Mass., June 26, has on board 35 Indiana casual troops. The transport Ancon, which sailed from St. Nazaire for Newport News, Va., the same day, has on board one officer and 98 men from Indiana who are traveling as casuals. The transport General Goethals, which sailed from St. Nazaire for Newport News, June 26, is bringing one officer and 24 men from Indiana who are listed as casuals.

Lafayette.—Lafayette and West Lafayette physicians have adopted a new schedule of fees, which is a decided advance over charges that have prevailed here for the last few years. The increase amounts to 100 per cent in some cases and 50 per cent in others. Office calls which have been $1 are $2 under the new schedule. House calls which are now $2 have been raised to $3, and calls between 7 p. m. and 7 a. m. are raised to $4. Telephone consultation and advice calls for a fee of $1.

Hammond.—At a joint meeting of officials of the various cities of the Calumet region held here to consider sanitation and the pollution of Lake Michigan by sewage, Langdon Pearce, Chicago sanitary expert, said that it will cost the cities of Hammond, Whiting, Gary and East Chicago $2,500,000 to construct an intercepting sewage system. It was pointed out that cities soon will be prohibited from dumping their sewage into the lake. The cities were shown to have a population of 250,000, a growth of 250 per cent since 1910.

Indianapolis.—A few years ago ten, twenty and thirty thousand-dollar investments in Indiana farm lands meant transactions involving large acreages and were unusual. Since 1914 farm lands have been increasing steadily in value and now the $100,000 investment is not uncommon. Two such deals were reported in one day recently. Benjamin Johnson of Richmond sold his farm, known as the Renner stock farm, situated near Hartford City, to F. A. Simpson of Huntingburg, for a price totaling more than $100,000. E. M. Murphy of North Salem purchased for $100,280 the 675-acre farm of Jethro C. Meek, near Greensburg. In addition, Mr. Meek received farm land valued at $16,000.

Washington, D. C.—Pensions of $25 have been granted the following Indianians: Nancy Arnold, Greensburg; Mary A. Mason, Columbus; Urilla J. Gutel, Muncie; Mary Theis, Rising Sun; Cinthy C. Redmon, Denver; Martha E. Imes, Westville; Elsie Dolman, Kokomo; Lola M. Crist, Van Buren; Mary E. Arford, Rising Sun; Harriet J. Applegate, Frankfort; Harietta E. Shrill, Brimfield; Elizabeth B. Henninger, Indianapolis; Josephine E. Sears, Ft. Wayne; Clara M. Gearhart, Ft. Wayne; Mary E. Trout, Frankfort; Della Allen, Cicaro; Clarissa Brechdol, Walton; Amanda S. John, Gary; Clarissa A. Hutton, Greenfield; Mary Groves, Covington; Catharine Brown, Mentone; Mary J. Kelso, Otwell, and Mary E. McConnell, Greensburg. A pension of $12 has been granted Mary E. Conyers of Attica.

Peru.—Wheat harvest is in progress in Miami county and most reports indicate the yield will be small. The heavy rains and hot weather during the early part of June damaged the growing grain severely. The destruction of crops by army worms has not been extensive.

Hartford City.—Three weeks ago prospects for wheat indicated that the largest yield in many years. Today the outlook is for less than half a crop and the yield of poor quality. The damage, the county agent says, is due principally to scab, which is present in nearly all fields.

Rushville.—Four large farms have been sold in Rush county in the last few days at prices averaging $186.56 to $250 an acre.

Evansville.—Indiana day for the centennial exposition, to be held in Evansville, this fall, has been fixed for October 16. Governor Goodrich has promised to be the guest of the city that day, and will bring his staff with him.

Columbus.—The spring wheat crop in Bartholomew county is a failure. Three hundred acres were planted with this variety. About two-thirds of the winter wheat crop has been cut and farmers say the yield is about two-thirds of the estimate, due to damage by smut and scab.

Gary.—Dan Trkpija, Tom and Albert Batchelor and "Red" Parker, four of the five bandits who held up the Tolleston State bank and murdered Cashier Herman Uecker, were sentenced to the electric chair, and the fifth, Lee Spiers, who made the first confession, and B. Bielich, accessory after the fact, will serve life terms.

Rochester.—The Fulton County Wool Growers' association sold more than 20,000 pounds of wool to a New York company at 57 to 61 cents a pound. About 20,000 pounds were shipped from Lucerne and about 19,000 pounds from Kewanna during the last week. Wheat is threatened by scab in all parts of the county and smut is doing some damage.

Terre Haute.—Declaring that coal orders for the first half of the year have kept Indiana mines operating on only 40 per cent of the time, P. S. Penna, secretary-treasurer of the Indiana Bituminous Operators' association, has issued a statement warning consumers of a serious fuel shortage during the coming winter. Transportation of wheat, which gains priority over fuel, will tax transportation to the limit, the warning said.

Vincennes.—Jewelers say that the pearl industry has dwindled to only an occasional find here because small shells are now taken before the pearl has had time to grow. The Wabash river has been depleted of large shells in the last few years. The pearl button industry still flourishes here because shells, which had no market value a few years ago, now sell at $40 a ton, when formerly $12 a ton was considered high for first-class shells.

Fort Wayne.—Election of officers for the coming year by the Indiana Christian Endeavor Union, which held its annual convention in Fort Wayne, resulted as follows: President, O. F. Gilliom, Berne; general secretary, Miss Mary Roy Thomson, Indianapolis; treasurer, Evan Williams, Fort Wayne; first vice president, Rev. A. H. Moore, Tipton; second vice president Rev. J. W. Lake, Warsaw; third vice president, Rev. Hillis L. Avery, Muncie.

Bedford.—The Indiana Quarries company has landed the contract for the stone work on the office building of the General Motors company at Detroit, Mich. The deal is said to involve $1,000,000 and is understood to be the largest single contract ever awarded the local stone belt. It means great activity and the employment of many stonemen here to complete the contract. It is said that the building will be 15 stories high and cover an area of ground a half mile in circumference.

Indianapolis.—The Liberty kitchens, at which housewives have witnessed demonstrations and obtained information on home economics during the war and since in Fort Wayne, South Bend, Terre Haute, Evansville and Indianapolis and the home demonstration agencies in 26 counties in this state have closed. This action was taken by Professor Christie of the agricultural extension department of Purdue university, which carried on the work, because of the little likelihood of congress making an appropriation to carry on the work.

Indianapolis.—Speculation as to the probable length of the special session of the legislature, which Governor Goodrich has announced would be called either the last week in August or the first week in September to ratify the woman suffrage amendment to the federal Constitution, was rife among officials at the state capitol. Although Governor Goodrich has announced his intention of making plans to limit the session to one week and to the consideration of only the suffrage resolution and several emergency matters, it is the belief of a number of officials that it will be impossible to adjourn the session in five or six days.

Columbus.—Records of the Bartholomew County Cow Testing association show that Mazurka's Golden Gem, the three-year-old registered Jersey, again leads in the amount of butterfat produced, her yield for the month being 73.9 pounds, which it is estimated, equals 84½ pounds of butter. The record of this cow also shows unusual richness in milk, the 73.9 pounds of fat coming from 972 pounds of milk given during the month. Of the 327 cows tested, twenty produced more than forty pounds of butterfat, seven more than fifty pounds, four more than sixty pounds and one more than seventy pounds.

Alexandria.—There has been some loss in the wheat fields due to heavy rains, but the yield this year will be exceptionally large. Farmers say where the wheat fields were damaged by the rain the cornfields profited. A number of farmers have started cutting wheat.

Marion.—June, month of brides and roses, broke records for the last 12 months here and a report made by the county clerk here shows 61 marriage licenses were issued. Last June, while the war was on and so many young men were away from home, the number of licenses fell to 31.

Save the Babies

INFANT MORTALITY is something frightful. We can hardly realize that of all the children born in civilized countries, twenty-two per cent., or nearly one-quarter, die before they reach one year; thirty-seven per cent., or more than one-third, before they are five, and one-half before they are fifteen!

We do not hesitate to say that a timely use of Castoria would save many of these precious lives. Neither do we hesitate to say that many of these infantile deaths are occasioned by the use of narcotic preparations. Drops, tinctures and soothing syrups sold for children's complaints contain more or less opium or morphine. They are, in considerable quantities, deadly poisons. In any quantity, they stupefy, retard circulation and lead to congestions, sickness, death. There can be no danger in the use of Castoria if it bears the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher as it contains no opiates or narcotics of any kind.

Genuine Castoria always bears the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher

"Meats in Storage"

Every working day of the year 75,000,000 pounds of meat are required to supply home and export needs—and only 10 per cent of this is exported.

These facts must be kept in mind when considering the U. S. Bureau of Markets report that on June 1, 1919, there were 1,348,000,000 pounds of meats in cold storage. If the meat in storage was placed on the market it would only be 20 days' supply.

This meat is not artificially withheld from trade channels to maintain or advance prices.

Meats in storage consist of—65 per cent (approximate) hams, bacon, etc., in process of curing. It takes 30 to 90 days in pickle or salt to complete the process.

10 per cent is frozen pork that is to be cured later in the year.

6 per cent is lard. This is only four-fifths of a pound per capita, and much of it will have to go to supply European needs.

19 per cent is frozen beef and lamb, part of which is owned by the Government and was intended chiefly for over-seas shipment. If this were all diverted to domestic trade channels, it would be only 1½ lbs. per capita—a 3 days' supply.

100%

From this it will be seen that "meats in storage" represent merely unfinished goods in process of curing and the working supply necessary to assure the consumer a steady flow of finished product.

FERTILIZER MANUFACTURERS HAVE STANDARDIZED THEIR PRODUCT

The "Standards" for Wheat.

The wily and elusive fertilizer analysis has been roped, tied and branded. No more will it be free to bob up in forty different combinations to worry the perplexed farmer, if the plans of the fertilizer manufacturers can be carried out to a full finish.

Instead of a thousand or more analyses, each differing from its nearest relative but little, the manufacturers with the aid of the soil and crop experts of the different states have picked out a score or so analyses which will answer all needs, whether the crop be wheat or onions, and whether the soil be loam or clay.

This is a most important step in advance, and through the elimination of so many needless grades, each requiring its separate mixing, separate bagging, and separate listing and bookkeeping, considerable money and no end of confusion will be saved all along the line.

The analyses selected for wheat are:

2-10-6	0-12-4
2-10-4	0-12-2
2-12-2	0-16-0
2-12-0

Where no manure is used on wheat land, where wheat is planted late, or where land is not plowed for wheat, select from the first group.

Where plenty of manure is used, or where clover does well and is grown regularly and at short intervals in the rotation, select from the second group.

On sandy soils, where clover fails, or where no manure is used, use the higher potash analyses.

WILL YOUR LAND GROW GOOD CLOVER?

All over the country clover is the foundation of good farming. Land that will grow good clover will ordinarily grow good corn, good oats and good wheat. Of course the growing of clover in itself makes the other crops produce more bountifully, but clover will not grow on poor land. The first requisite for clover is a sweet soil. A sour soil can be made sweet by liberal use of lime, either in the form of ground limestone or burnt or hydrated lime.

If plant food is lacking in the soil it must be supplied before good clover, or any other crop, will grow. Some farmers try to supply this plantfood through the long-time process of adding small amounts of manure and turning under a sod now and then. This plan may maintain fertility but it will seldom add fertility. The small crops grown on the impoverished fields do not supply sufficient humus-making material to get the soil into a loose, mellow condition, and since but little plantfood is available from year to year no progress toward higher fertility is made.

It is poor business to spend years in trying to "bring up" badly depleted soil by cropping and cultural methods alone. There is nothing to build on. It is far cheaper in the end to buy good fertilizer at first and grow crops which will not only pay for the labor expended but will leave humus-making roots and stems in large enough quantity to improve the soil for next year's crop.

After a year or two of this latter sort of treatment most any soil, except the lightest sands or heaviest clays, will grow good clover.

OPPORTUNITY TALKS

Opportunity is talking to you.

She says that one hundred and twenty million people of America are more prosperous than ever before.

She says that these one hundred and twenty million people who had the resources and the courage to be the decisive factor in winning the war are all set, with greater resources and greater courage, to win the victories of peace.

She says that these people, instead of owing Europe five billion dollars as they did in 1914, now have ten billion dollars coming to them from Europe.

She says that America has production and distribution efficiency that would have been regarded as impossible two years ago.

She says that America has in development the greatest merchant marine fleet in the world in preparation to carry her products to markets that are calling for them.

She says that there will be work for everyone, good wages for all, and good profits in every legitimate enterprise.

She says that the greater market at home and abroad will assure high prices for all of the food that can be produced.

Opportunity says to get out and hustle, do your part of the big business achievements, and get your part of the big business rewards.

ONE REASON WHY PRICES ARE HIGH

It's the Fault of the Paper Dollar.

When a man has but $100 in bank and issues three 90-day notes for $100 each, based on the bank deposit as security, the value of those notes soon falls very decidedly. In other words, the average creditor would feel that he ought to have two or even three such notes before he had paper sufficient to equal the value of that $100 in gold that lies in the bank.

This is approximately what has happened with the world's currency. So much paper has been issued in the form of notes, credits, bonds and similar "promises to pay" that its value when compared with actual food and clothing and other necessities has fallen tremendously. We express this same idea the other way around by saying "prices have gone up."

There is no reason to expect rapid retirement of paper promises—war bonds the world over must run for some years yet to come, and private credits cannot be withdrawn soon. Therefore this cause of high prices will probably be with us for some time yet—several years, in fact.

In the case of farm crops, at least, there is another very good reason why prices are high. Many more mouths are to be fed than formerly and this condition also is likely to persist. War devastated fields cannot immediately regain their former productivity. The farmer seems to be secure in the assurance of good crop prices for a long time to come.

WELL-FED WHEAT PLANTS RESIST INSECT ATTACK

Mr. V. V. Clark, county agricultural agent of Marshall county, Indiana, has made some extended demonstrations on the use of commercial fertilizer combined with a good seedbed for wheat as a preventative measure against the attack of Hessian fly and joint worm. He considers the use of proper tillage and proper fertilizers the best method available for counteracting the attack of these wheat pests. Mr. Clark says that his observation is that the well-fed plant is more resistant to attacks by both insects and diseases. Mr. Clark recomends ammoniated fertilizers for use on wheat because it is desirable to have ammonia to force the growth of wheat so that it will be better able to withstand winter conditions.

WORLD RECORDS IN WHEAT GROWING.

The largest yield of wheat ever recorded was 117.2 bushels per acre. It was produced in 1895 in Island county, Washington, on an 18-acre field.

The largest yield of wheat over a period of years of which the world has any record is that of 86⅛ bushels per acre at the Rothamsted experiment station in England. This yield is the average for a period of 60 years. Ordinary unfertilized land in England does not do that well. In fact, the average yield of unfertilized land for the same period of years was only 12⅛ bushels. The extra 24 bushels was the result of an annual application of fertilizer containing nitrogen, phosphoric acid and potash.

TWO CHANCES TO INCREASE THE WHEAT CROP

Growers May Have Both Profits as Well as One.

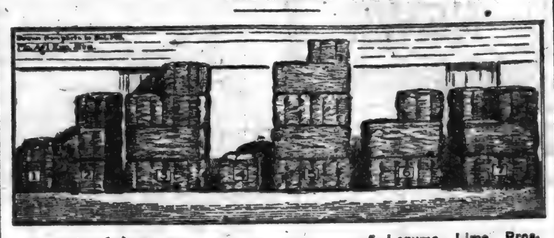
Many wheat growers are overlooking two chances of increasing their wheat crop after it is planted and thereby getting larger acre yields and bigger profits. This extra yield and profit is secured by top-dressing the wheat early in the spring with available plantfood, preferably in the form of an ammoniated phosphate fertilizer. This is a fertilizer carrying ammonia and available phosphoric acid that gives the young wheat plants, weakened by the winter, a sturdy start and furnishes plantfood to make the extra gain. When barnyard manure is used it had best be applied as a thin, even covering or top-dressing early in the winter. Whenever possible use the manure spreader for this work, as hand dressing is not satisfactory because it leaves the manure lumpy and uneven.

Fertilizer applied early in the spring increases the crop yield in two ways, first, by making the stalks and heads already started grow larger and by increasing the tillering or stooling. Every extra "tiller" means an extra head. Only a few extra "tillers" to a plant means several more bushels to the acre. If the wheat is top-dressed late in the spring, that is after it has made a good start, it will not "tiller," hence the only chance to increase the yield is by lengthening stalks and heads, but by fertilising early the chances of increasing yields are doubled.

For spring top-dressing, the broadcaster is better than the fertilizer drill. It covers the ground more rapidly and the inconvenience of keeping the drill disks or hoes out of the ground, or of removing them, is avoided. The ordinary fertilizer drills can, however, be satisfactorily used for top-dressing if care is taken to fasten up the hoes or disks away from the ground, or to remove them.

GROW MORE WHEAT AND CLOVER

Missouri Experiment Station Shows How Fertilization of Wheat Crop Increases Both the Yield of Wheat and the Next Year's Yield of Clover.



1. Legume.
2. Legume, Lime.
3. Legume, Lime, Phosphoric Acid, Nitrogen.
4. No Treatment.
5. Legume, Lime, Prosphoric Acid, Nitrogen and Potash.
6. Manure Alone.
7. Manure and Rock Phosphate.

The illustration above is drawn from a photograph in Bulletin 148 of the Missouri experiment station. It shows the result on the succeeding clover crop of fertilizer applied to wheat. The fertilizer not only increased the yield of wheat, and at a rate to pay for itself and leave a nice margin of profit, but in addition it made a big increase in the clover crop for the next year. A combination of legumes, lime and complete fertiliser produced the biggest gain, even greater than that produced by barnyard manure.

THE ABANDONED FARM MOVING WESTWARD

In the May issue of the Agricultural Review, Prof. R. T. Throckmorten, Kansas experiment station, has the following to say regarding the maintenance of fertility in that state:

"Plantfood to the value of $365,000,000 is being extracted from Kansas soils this year. This plantfood would produce 200,000,000 bushels of wheat.

"Kansas soils are gradually but surely becoming unproductive, and the maintenance of soil fertility is a matter of concern to every farmer, particularly the wheat grower.

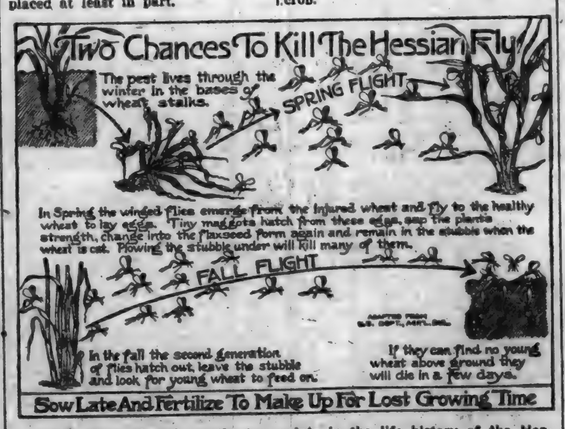
"In the face of the large number of abandoned farms and the rapidly increasing population, it is high time farmers began to do their work more scientifically."

This is a warning which must be heeded—the barrel will soon run dry unless the draining at the spigot is replaced at least in part.

ARGENTINA FIXES PRICE OF WHEAT

The Argentine government has fixed the minimum price for export wheat at $1.55 per bushel. A rate of $35 per ton of 2,240 pounds, equivalent to 94 cents per bushel, from Buenos Aires to New York, has been quoted by the United States shipping board. This would make the price of Argentine wheat at New York $2.49 per bushel. According to International Institute of agriculture at Rome the rate from Buenos Aires to Liverpool is 34 cents per bushel, which would make the price of Argentine wheat at Liverpool $1.89 per bushel. In this connection it is interesting to note that the British government has fixed the sale price of imported wheat at $2.40 per bushel.

It would seem from the above that the American farmer may well anticipate a good price for the 1920 wheat crop.



The illustration shows the two points in the life history of the Hessian fly where it can be destroyed most readily. Late seeding is an essential part of this program for eradication, which in turn necessitates the use of fertilizer, or other means of soil enrichment, in order to get the young plants through the winter in a vigorous condition.

FERTILE SOIL A BIG FACTOR IN CROP PRODUCTION

Rich Soil Increases the Labor Efficiency of the Average Farm Hand.

Back in 1917 the extension department of the University of West Virginia made a census of the state with a view to learning what acreage of crops the average farm hand cared for. They found that on the better-class farms a man averaged to care for 26 acres of crops, 16 acres of meadow and 17 animal units.

Of course the fact that a man cultivates a certain number of acres has really but little bearing on the final question. It is the amount of crop which he grows which really determines his value. Thus he must undertake a partnership with the soil, for it seems that the quality of the soil is even more important than the man himself in attaining the ultimate goal—big crops.

If we consider this average farm hand as applied to the ordinary unfertilized land as it exists at the West Virginia experiment station, we find that he is able to produce from the 43 acres 485 bushels of grain (corn and wheat), and 36,400 pounds of hay, straw and stover yearly. If, on the other hand, this same man were to spend his time growing crops where fertilizer amounting to 743 pounds per acre was applied each year, his total yearly crop production would mount up to 1,338 bushels of grain and 261,000 pounds of hay, straw and stover.

The man working on improved land was able to produce three times as large a crop as the man working on ordinary soil. Not only is there a practical effect through increasing the crop production per man, but there is a very decided moral effect on the man himself. Being human, the farm hand likes to work with thrifty luxuriant crops. He unconsciously puts forth his greatest efforts when he has before him the stimulus of a big yield.

He goes into a slump and gets disgruntled and discouraged with the prospect of a poor scrubby crop. Perhaps, after all, he is only reflecting the attitude of the man he works for.

A Fertile Soil Increases the Hired Man's Efficiency.

Interested in Film Productions to Be Made at Methodist Celebration at Columbus, O.

DR. JAMES E. CROWTHER AND D. W. GRIFFITH.

The support of the motion picture world as represented by D. W. Griffith, well known film producer, was assured the Methodist Centenary Celebration at a conference in Columbus, the celebration being represented by Dr. S. Earl Taylor of New York, Dr. J. E. Crowther of Seattle, Dr. Fred Fisher of New York and Dr. C. F. Reisner of New York.

Mr. Griffith, in addition to promising to make a film of all important features of the Centenary Celebration, strongly urged the use of motion pictures in the advancement of religious work. He spoke strongly of the possibilities of the motion pictures under proper supervision being made to carry a religious message further than any known form of communication.

Dr. S. Earl Taylor, director general of the Centenary Celebration, made the statement that "we want pictures that talk the universal language. I believe the message of peace and good will should be preached to the world through pictures."

"I am glad to know they are going to give motion pictures a practical demonstration at the Centenary Celebration," said Mr. Griffith. "The celebration will give the people in towns and villages a wonderful opportunity to visit the entire world by going no further than Columbus. There will be an extraordinary impression produced by seeing these villages of China, Japan and India, not peopled by amateurish actors, but inhabited by real natives from foreign lands.

"I have been astounded beyond measure at the breadth, extent and scope of the entire scheme as it has been revealed to me by Dr. Taylor, Dr. Crowther, Dr. Reisner and others. I understand the Methodist Church has $140,000,000 and is going to celebrate its success with something more nearly resembling a world fair than anything else to which it can be compared. One would think that a great nation at least is behind the movement. Doubtless, something greater than the greatest nation is behind it—a reawakened ideal and faith inspired to bind up the wounds of a torn and outraged world."

Columbus Can Well Accommodate All Who Attend Methodist Celebration, Officials Say

NO CROWD which has been proposed for the Methodist Centenary Celebration will swamp Columbus, according to Mayor George J. Karb, who has received some inquiries from distant points regarding the ability of the Capital City to take care of the hundreds of thousands of Methodists coming from all over the United States for the Centenary Celebration, June 20 to July 13.

Mayor Karb says: "Columbus has always been equal to any situation. We are not going to fail the exposition crowds, no matter how many thousand there are. Tell them to come to Columbus town. We are ready with open hearts and open doors. Columbus can do it."

James T. Daniels, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, says: "We can easily and satisfactorily accommodate three hundred thousand visitors." Organizing Secretary H. B. Dickson says: "Three hundred thousand my minimum estimate of attendance. Confident Columbus can take care of twice that number."

Collection of Indian Curios at the Methodist Centenary Celebration

WHAT has been pronounced the greatest private collection of Indian curios in America has been loaned to the Methodist Centenary Celebration at Columbus, O., by H. W. Palm, an Indian trader of Ortonville, Minnesota. Mr. Palm is here shown with some of his interesting relics.

Indian exhibitions will have a considerable place in the Celebration. Pueblos will unconcernedly mold pottery before throngs of curious spectators, just as their grandfathers did before the white man invaded their lands. Navajos will weave rugs and St. Regis make basketry—all actually living in their native homes, be they pueblos or wigwams.

NO SEATS RESERVED

First Come, First Served, at Coliseum at Methodist Centenary

At a conference of Director General S. Earl Taylor, Dr. Fred B. Fisher, H. B. Dickson and other members of the Centenary Exposition staff, it was decided that there will be no seats reserved in the Coliseum for "The Wayfarer" pageant presentations at the Methodist Centenary Celebration, Columbus, O., June 20-July 13.

All seats will be available to spectators as soon as the doors of the Coliseum are opened each evening. "It will be a case of 'first come, first served,'" says Mr. Dickson. Season tickets to the exposition grounds admit the bearer once to the pageant in the Coliseum. Single admission fees at the gate require an additional fifty cents for the Coliseum evening feature.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. Many People Poisoned

Scores of people meet death each year by a slow process of poisoning that is going on within our bodies. This poisoning is caused by the liver and kidneys failing to perform their proper function. Poisonous matter accumulates within the body and health declines. The unsightly liver splotches, billiousness, headache and dizziness, bad taste in the mouth, coated tongue, a pain in the back or under the shoulder blade, a tired or achy feeling are some of the most common symptoms of this poisoning. If this poisoning it not expelled and the cause removed the resisting power is finally gone and life pays the penalty. Are you of the heedless class or are you safeguarding your health? If you want health you must keep the liver, kidneys and bowels active. Glando Tonic is what you need to restore this activity and expell the poisons. Keep on the safe side and use a reliable remedy. Glando Tonic is put up in a treatment form and guaranteed to do the work. Ask your druggist for a large $1 treatment. Take it as directed and you will be surprised to know how much poison was stored up within your body. When the liver is inactive a mucus or slime collects within the stomach and bowels which hinders digestion and the assimilation of food. This is called catarrh of the stomach or bowels. Glando Tonic cuts this slime and mucus and removes it. A nauceated feeling is sometimes experienced when this mucus is breaking loose but as soon as it is removed from the bowels, you will feel fine, the complexion clear, the appet te return and you will want to tell others of your wonderful cure.

Glando Tonic is sold by druggists or may be secured by sending direct to the Gland-Aid Co., Fort Wayne, Indiana.

Ford

THE UNIVERSAL CAR

World-wide distribution and the continually growing demand for Ford cars are the best proofs of Ford value. Ford cars are utilities—they are positive necessities—for they have revolutionized modern business, brought country and city together, and opened up new life to the family. The Ford car has become a necessary part of everyday life.

Ford cars are not an experiment. Years of concentration on a single model have produced a motor car of proved value. It is as important in modern life as the mail service or telephone. Behind the Ford car is genuine Ford scervice, by competent mechanics using genuine Ford parts—with regular standard Ford prices. That is the service given by this agency.

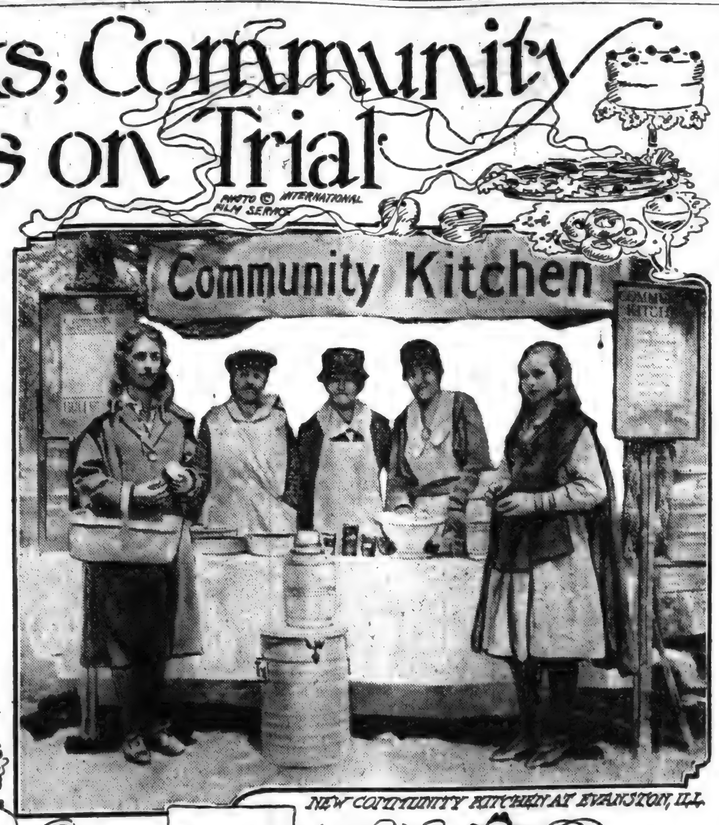
No Cooks; Community Kitchens on Trial



For a man seldom thinks with more earnestness of anything than he does of his dinner.—Samuel Johnson.

We may live without poetry, music and art;
We may live without conscience, and live without heart;
We may live without friends, we may live without books;
But civilized man cannot live without cooks.
He may live without books—what is knowledge but grieving?
He may live without hope—what is hope but deceiving?
He may live without love—what is passion but pining?
But where is the man who can live without dining?
—Owen Meredith.

"Fate cannot harm me—I have dined today."—Sydney Smith.

SIGNS of the times to be seen in all large cities are these: Apartment buildings, delicatessen shops, cheap restaurants, cafeterias, residential hotels.

The old-fashioned home is fast disappearing. People are living in apartments and residential hotels, buying cooked food at the delicatessen shops, eating at restaurants. Why? Well, largely because they have to. The old-fashioned home in a dwelling, with servants and home cooking is still an American ideal. But the increasing lack of servants, especially of cooks, makes the old-fashioned home a burden to people of moderate means and to women who want to do something besides keep house. It is fast coming to the time when only two classes can keep house with any satisfaction: the very rich, who can hire professional servants at high wages; the poor, who do without servants. The moderately well-to-do woman must choose between housework and all other activities. She cannot get servants, because we have no servant class in this country. Working women will not do domestic work when they can get other work, even though the other work pays less.

These conditions have raised a widespread interest in the proposition of community cooking. Notwithstanding the high prices of food and the scarcity of cooks, the American people like good things to eat just as well as ever. The question is where can these good things be had? A large proportion of twentieth century married women cannot cook acceptably and would not cook if they could. A modern city woman who can cook can hardly be blamed for unwillingness to spend all her time in home work. It is an age of inefficiency in restaurant cooking as in most other things and menu prices are even higher in proportion than raw material prices.

Iva Lowther Peters, Ph. D., of the woman's division of the council of national defense, made in 1918 a complete survey of the various co-operative and community food enterprises of this country. It was then believed that if the war continued community kitchens would have to be established in our larger cities to save food and fuel.

England was already running a great many of them, with encouraging results, and Doctor Peters not only studied these, but undertook a thorough investigation of the co-operative movement from the time it was born in the eighteenth century.

As it happened, the signing of the armistice came just in time to make the survey useless to the United States food administration, but it is going to be of great assistance to those individual Americans who are thinking of co-operating with other individual Americans in bringing down the price of eating.

An object lesson is a community kitchen that was opened in 1907 in Carthage, Mo. It was located in a private residence and the various families of the neighborhood came to it for their meals. Each family furnished its own table, chairs, dishes, linen, silver, thus maintaining its own tastes and standards. To provide the original equipment for the kitchen an assessment of $3 per adult and $1.50 per child was made. In the beginning there were 60 members, including 10 or 12 children. For the first three months the price of meals was $3 for an adult and $1.50 for a child per week. After the third month several families stopped coming.

When the number decreased to 50 the price of board was advanced to $3.50 per week. As the kitchen's patronage decreased and the cost of food increased the price of board kept advancing until finally, in 1911, four years after its opening, the kitchen went quietly out of existence.

Most of the community cooking enterprises surveyed by Doctor Peters for the council of national defense tell practically the same story—a brief popularity, a brief decline, then extinction.

But the community cooking enterprises tell one other story and it is this:

The only community cooking enterprises showing unmistakable signs of success are those where the central kitchen delivers the cooked meals to the homes. These kitchens are now being established in several cities.

Chicago and many of its suburban cities have their attention on Evanston, Ill., just now. Evanston is a few miles north of Chicago on Lake Michigan. It has about 30,000 people. It is a city of homes. Many of the men do business in Chicago. Evanston is called the "City of Churches," is the seat of Northwestern university and is what may be called a high-class American small city.

Yes, Evanston is a city of homes. There are streets of dwellings and comparatively few flats are in evidence. There are trees and lawns. The houses look as if they had kitchens—good, big, roomy, old-fashioned kitchens, where things were cooked—"pies like mother used to make" and doughnuts to compare even with those of the Salvation Army.

But the imagination that sets you to sniffing in the hope of catching delectable odors from these old-fashioned kitchens in these old-fashioned homes is a delusion and a snare. The kitchens are there, but they are as idle as a painted ship on a painted ocean. 'Cause why—there are no cooks. There was a time, not long ago, when an occasional cook could be enticed out to Evanston and pampered into cooking. But even that time is past.

So Evanston is going to have a community kitchen and has made a beginning. That's why Chicago and Illinois are watching her with interest.

The beginning was made in the basement of the Evanston Woman's club. At first only lunch was sold and buyers had to fetch and carry. Next in order is an evening meal. Then will come delivery of hot food in containers.

There was a wild rush near lunch time on the opening day by the housemaidless Evanston housewives for the community kitchen. Mrs. James A. O'Dell and Mrs. H. H. Kingsley, chief sponsors for the kitchen, were kept busy for the best part of three hours weighing cake and wrapping up slices of tempting baked ham—the kind baked with cloves and sugar, the Virginia way, you know—and other goodies. The menu included these things:

Potato Soup.
Baked Ham. Corned Beef Hash. Spanish Rice.
Meat Pie.
Potato Salad. Tomato Salad.
Gingerbread. Cookies. Cakes.
Doughnuts.

The proletariat was not in evidence. The premiere of the kitchen might have been the opening of the opera season. Limousines and electrics lined up in front of the kitchen and the beauty and chivalry of the aristocratic village were all present. Among the first to draw up in their electric coupes were Mrs. William S. Carson and Mrs. D. E. McMillan. They departed with a basket containing some tomato salad, gingerbread, baked ham and banana cream pie.

There next drew up in their limousines, with their chauffeurs waiting outside with lips smacking, Mrs. Ulysses S. Grant, wife of Dean Grant of Northwestern university; Mrs. Rufus C. Dawes and Mrs. M. H. Dawes, who departed with full baskets.

In their wake came many more, mostly personages in the Blue Book.

Then the university co-eds, attracted by alluring reports concerning the doughnuts and gingerbread, began to arrive.

Over at Phi Delta Theta house the students had been having many difficulties in the matter of cooks, and had determined to do their own cooking. That very day the Sigma, Alpha Epsilons were guests at the Phi's house. A large quantity of uncooked edibles were procured. After numerous efforts, the only commodities which proved amenable to the culinary treatment of the fraternity cooks were beans. The guests were lukewarm in their appreciation. Following the dinner the dish-washing began. Eight plates were broken. The fraternity house looked like a shambles when it was all over. En masse the youths went to the community kitchen for dinner.

It appears that the community kitchen is offering really toothsome dainties. The tomato salad created a sensation and one enthusiastic purchaser said:

"It looks like slices of tomatoes lying on lettuce leaves, but it is really a tomato gelatin, with chopped celery inside, poured into little molds. There's dressing on top and little balls of cottage cheese with a dash of paprika alongside, and it's good. I know, for I sampled it; I couldn't wait to get home."

The "best cook in Evanston"—Mrs. James Wells—came in and took a lot of it away with her, and then Mrs. James Patten ordered the rest to serve to her Red Cross workers. Bits of comment like this were to be heard everywhere:

"I just couldn't wait; I had to taste this gingerbread."

"Isn't the potato salad delicious?"

"See you tomorrow, Mrs. Kingsley. I'm going to hurry home and eat this hash while it's hot."

"I couldn't wait. I had to bite into this cooky," one woman remarked, crunching into a cooky. "My, but it's good!"

Speaking of the dinner she purchased, Mrs. Dawes characterized it as "delicious."

Mrs. Eugene Garnett said her meal was "one of the finest home-cooked dinners I ever ate. In nutrition, seasoning and all other points it was perfect."

Mrs. Robert D. Cunningham was likewise enthusiastic. "If the success of the kitchen depends on the food, it'll be a huge success," she said. "There isn't a restaurant in Chicago which can offer as fine a home-cooked dinner as the community kitchen here."

Two o'clock found the "community kitchen" pretty much deserted, and the managers of the place checking up on the proceeds of the first day.

"We knew we would be successful because the plan was pretty thoroughly discussed before we began the work," said Mrs. Kingsley, "but we weren't prepared for all the enthusiasm that greeted us.

"I feel sure that the community kitchen will prove a great success," Mrs. Rufus Dawes said. "It will be impossible for several weeks to determine the cost of the meals, cost of operation, and so forth. The work that has been done by volunteers will eventually have to be done by paid workers." Corned beef hash sold for 60 cents a pound, the gingerbread was 5 cents a cake and the doughnuts 30 cents a dozen.

"The greatest problem now is to know how much food to prepare. We are attending personally to every detail of the kitchen so that we may find out what quantities to prepare and just how much to charge.

"The kitchen is really on trial now. If it works well, we may turn it over to a business concern to handle, but we will not make the mistake New York did of not having real home cooking. Mrs. M. H. Kennedy, who is one of the best cooks in Evanston, has promised to stay. One of her helpers is a university graduate, who took a domestic science course—Miss Rachael Madison. Miss Olive Blystad, an Evanston girl, is the other assistant."

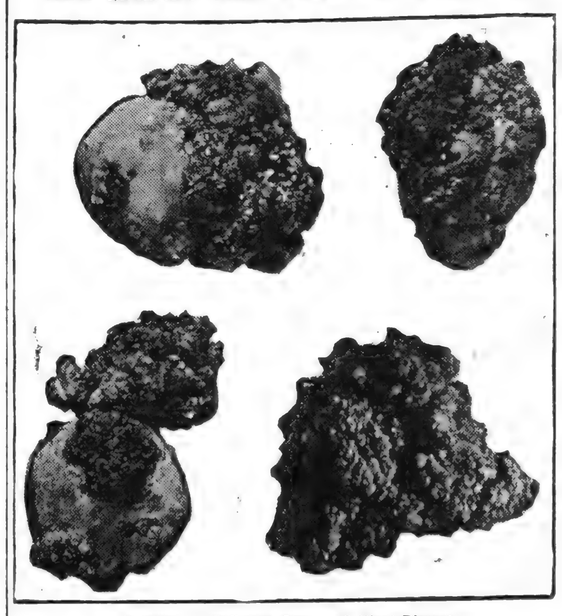
The container that is to be used resembles a glorified dinner pail, built in five compartments and insulated to retain heat for three hours. In the compartments will be placed soup, meat, a vegetable, potatoes and a hot dessert. These will be distributed by auto trucks.

Winnetka is much interested in the plan. Mrs. John R. Dickinson and Mrs. H. J. Orwig of the Winnetka Woman's club visited the kitchen the opening day to see how it worked.

"We need such an institution as much as Evanston does," said Mrs. Dickinson. "If it works out in Evanston we will start one."

Looking at the community kitchen experiment in a broad sense, it is merely one problem of many which every community has to solve. How long will it be before our American communities take hold of these problems which are, in the last analysis, their own and nobody else's?

GROWERS ASKED TO PREVENT SPREAD OF NEW MALADY THAT MENACES POTATO CROP



Potatoes in Different Stages of Wart Disease.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The potato industry is seriously menaced by a malady new to this country—the potato wart disease. Unless it can be eradicated before it spreads to commercial plantings, specialists of the United States department of agriculture say it will cost potato growers millions annually. It is easily recognized and when discovered it should be promptly reported to federal or state agricultural officials.

Like many other plant diseases and insect pests, the potato wart disease was imported from Europe. It is without doubt the most serious potato disease yet discovered in the United States. Unless promptly suppressed it may prove disastrous to the entire American potato industry, which involves nearly half a billion dollars annually.

What to Look For.

Two bright spots reduce the menace of this disease.

Except in its early stages, it is easily recognized; and it spreads slowly.

However, it cannot be detected until the potatoes are dug, as it does not seriously affect the growth or vigor of the vines.

It usually appears in the eyes of the tubers. Spreading from this point of infection, it may gradually envelop the whole potato and render it a spongy, warty mass. It is characterized by the prominent wart-like outgrowths on the tubers.

The warts at first are whitish or light brown. Eventually they turn to a darker shade. After decay starts they turn black. Young warts, when exposed to the light, turn green.

The warty tumors vary from the size of a pea to a walnut; or they may even exceed the size of the potato on which they grow. In the latter case, the warty mass loses all resemblance to a potato. In some hills some of the potatoes may appear perfectly healthy, but the eyes are likely to be infected.

It is through the use of such apparently sound potatoes for seed that the disease is often spread to new localities.

How Disease May Be Spread.

Under ordinary conditions the potato wart disease spreads slowly. It lives in the soil and on the tubers, so one or the other must usually be transported to introduce the disease into a new field or locality. The spores may be carried into clean soil by drainage from infected soil, on the feet of men or animals, by planting diseased potatoes, by planting sound tubers that have grown on infected soil, by the use of manure from animals to which diseased potatoes have been fed, and by garbage into which peelings from diseased potatoes have been thrown.

Preventive Measures.

No method of controlling the potato wart disease has yet been discovered, so every preventive measure must be used to keep it from spreading. The warts should be burned. Diseased tubers must not be fed to live stock without first being boiled. Infested soil should be planted to other crops. Potatoes should not be planted again in infested soil for at least eight years.

Federal and state agricultural authorities are working to prevent the spread of potato wart, but they will need heartiest co-operation from every grower and dealer of potatoes to save the industry from this new menace. Experiments are being conducted to learn, if possible, ways of controlling the malady, and information will be furnished as rapidly as discovered. But potato wart disease is much easier to prevent than to control.

Keep watch at digging time for potatoes with warty growths which are whitish or light brown when young, black and decayed when old. Report promptly all suspicious cases to your county agent, to your state agricultural experiment station or to the United States department of agriculture.

TO IMPROVE SEED POTATOES

Extensive Experiments Being Made in Various States by Government Officials.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

To select strains of potatoes which are best adapted for commercial production, the United States department of agriculture and co-operating state agencies are conducting extensive experiments in seed improvement. Trials are being made in Wisconsin, Minnesota, Iowa, Oregon, Washington, Maine, and also in Louisiana, Texas, Oklahoma and Arkansas. Several strains of the leading commercial varieties now grown in the North are under test, the purpose being to study them carefully under actual growing and harvest conditions in the field, and to select the best strain of seed of each commercial variety. The following year each strain will be grown on a large scale. As the supply of seed stock permits, the seed is to be distributed among growers and seedsmen, and in this way is to be gradually popularized and disseminated. This investigation will be of country-wide significance in improving the future stocks of seed potatoes.

GENERAL FARM NOTES

The wheel hoe makes garden cultivation easy.

Alfalfa is relatively free from diseases and enemies.

Don't quit cultivating now. Plants need the soil stirred now as much as ever.

* * *

Keep the potatoes well cultivated. Much depends on the way the crop is cultivated. The killing of weeds is not the only purpose of cultivation.

PINE MOUSE QUITE HARMFUL

Makes Use of Tunnels Made by Moles —Destroys the Vegetable and Root Crops.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

"Let the mole do the work and get the blame," says the pine mouse as he scurries through a mole-made tunnel to a hill of juicy potatoes, where he eats a self-service meal. And at that, pine mice are not inherently lazy. These pests of the gardener, orchardist and farmer are crafty. Moles burrow tunnels in their search after grubs, insects and worms, and officiate as plain-clothes men in ridding the soil of rascally insects. Pine mice tag after the moles and destroy the vegetables and root crops which the moles free of insects.

I heard her cry out, and barely caught the lantern as it fell from her hand. At first I doubted the evidence of my own eyes, snatching the bit of flaring candle from its tin socket and holding it where the full glare of light fell across the grewsome object. Ay, it was a woman, with lower limbs doubled back from lack of space, but otherwise lying as though she slept, so perfect in preservation her cheeks appeared flushed with health, her lips half smiling. It was a face of real beauty—an English face, although her eyes and hair were dark and her mantilla and long earrings were unquestionably Spanish. A string of pearls encircled her throat, and there were numerous rings upon her fingers. The very contrast added immeasurably to the horror.

"She is alive! Surely she is alive!" The words were sobbed into my ear from Dorothy's lips.

"Alive! No, that is impossible!" I touched the figure with my hand. "The flesh is like stone," I said, "thus held lifelike by some magic of the Indies. What can it all mean? Who could the woman be? It is love or hate?"

"Not love, Geoffry. Love would never do this thing. It is hate, the gloating of revenge; there can be no other answer—this is the end of a tragedy."

There was nothing, not a scrap of paper, not even the semblance of a wound exposed. The smile on those parted lips had become one of mockery; I could bear the sight no longer, and rose to my feet, clasping Dorothy close to me, as she still gazed down in fascination at the ghastly sight.

"We will never know. The man who could tell is dead."

"Captain Paradilla!"

"Who else could it be? This was his schooner, and here he alone could hide such a secret. There is nothing more we can learn, and the horror unnerves me. Hold the light, dear, while I replace the lid of the chest."

It required my utmost effort to accomplish this. I was glad to have the thing hidden, to escape the stare of those fixed eyes, the death smile of those red lips. It was no longer a reality but a dream of delirium; I dare not think or speculate—my only desire being to get away, to get Dorothy away. In absolute terror I drew her with me to the open door—then stopped, paralyzed; the half revealed figure of a man appeared on the cabin stairs.

"Stop! Who are you?"

"Watkins, sir. I came below to call you. There's sumthin' bloomin' odd takin' place out there in the fog, Captain Carlyle. We want yer on deck, sir, right away."

CHAPTER XXXI.

The Boat Attack.

He waited for us just without the companion, but my eyes caught nothing unusual as I emerged into the daylight. I could barely see amidships, and on either side hung the impenetrable bank of cloud, leaving sea and sky invisible.

"What is it, Watkins? Where are the men?"

"Forrard, sir, a-hangin' over the starboard rail. Thar's somethin' cursedly strange a-happenin' in that fog. Ole was the first ter hear the clatter ov an oar slippin' in a rowlock. Then, sir, while we was a-listenin' we both caught sound ov a Spanish oath, spoke as plain as if the buck was aboard."

"A lost boat, likely—shipwrecked sailors adrift in the fog; perhaps our other quarterboat. No one hailed them?"

"No, sir; I told the men tar keep still till I called you."

The crew were all gathered at the rail, staring out into the mist, whispering to each other. I pressed my way in among them. We may have been clinging there a minute or two, breathlessly listening. Then a voice spoke directly in front of me out from the dense fog.

"Try the port oar, Pedro; we must have missed the d——n ship."

I straightened up as though struck, my eyes seeking those of Watkins, who stared back at me, his mouth wide open in astonishment.

"You heard that?" I whispered. "Do you know who spoke?"

"Do I? Dead or alive, sir, it was Manuel Estevan."

"Ay; no other, and alive enough, no doubt. Lads, come close to me and listen—they must not hear us out there. By some devil's trick the Namur has followed our course, or else yonder are a part of his crew cast away. They clearly know of us—perhaps had a glimpse through some rift in the cloud—and are seeking to board with a boat party. 'Tis not likely these devils know who we are; probably take us for a merchant ship becalmed in the fog and liable to become an easy prey, if they can only slip on us unseen. How are you, bullies? Ready to battle your old mates?"

"Those were no mates o' ours, sir," said Watkins indignantly. "They are half-breed mongrels, and no sailors; Estevan is a hell-hound, an' so far as my voice goes, I'd rather die on this deck than ever agin be a bloody pirate. It that the fight words, lads?"

The others grumbled assent, but their muttered words had in them a ring of sincerity, and their faces exhibited no cowardice. One only asked a question.

"I'm fer fightin', sir," he said grimly, "but what'll we use? Them lads ain't comin' aboard bare-handed, but damn if I've seed a weapon on this hooker."

"Dar's three knives, an' a meat cleaver in der galley, sah," chimed in Sam.

"We'll do well enough; some of you have your sheath knives yet, and the rest can use belaying pins and capstan bars. The point is to not let them get aboard, and, if there is only one boat, we will be pretty even-handed. Pick up what you can, and man this rail—quietly now, hearties, and keep your eyes open."

It proved a longer wait than I expected. Unable to withstand the inaction any longer I turned and took a few steps aft, thinking to gauge our progress by the wake astern. I was abaft the cabin on the port side when Dorothy called my name—a sudden accent of terror in her voice.

The alarm was sounded none too soon. Either fortune, or skill, had served those demons well. They had succeeded in circling the stern of the Santa Marie, unseen and unheard by anyone aboard. Even as she shrieked the alarm, a hand was at her throat, and she was struggling desperately in the merciless grip of a half-naked Indian.

Yet at that they were too late, the advantage of surprise had failed them. A half dozen had reached the deck, leaping from the rail, the others below clambering after their leaders, when with a rush we met them. It was a fierce, mad fight, fist and club pitted against knife and cutlass, but the defenders struck like demons incarnate. I doubt if the struggle lasted two minutes. I heard the blows, the oaths, the cries of pain, the dull thud of wood against bone, the sharp clang of steel in contact, the shuffling of feet on the deck, the splash of bodies hurled overboard. Each man fought for himself, in his own way. I thought only of her, and leaped straight for her assailant with bare hands, smashing recklessly through the hasty guard of his cutlass and gripped the copper devil by hair and throat. I knew she fell to the deck beneath our feet, but I had my work cut out for me. He was a hell-hound, slippery as an eel in his half nakedness, strong as an ox, and fighting like a fiend. Yet I had him foul, my grip unbreakable, as I forced his neck back against the rail, until it cracked, the swarthy body sliding inert to the deck. Whirling to assist the others I found no need. Except for bodies here and there the deck was clear; men were struggling in the chains; two below in the boat were endeavoring to cast off, and Schmitt, with Estevan helpless in his arms, staggered to the side and flung the shrieking Spanish cur overboard out into dark water. I heard the splash as he fell, the single cry his lips gave, but he never again appeared above the surface. Above the bedlam Watkins roared out an order.

"That's it, bullies! that's it! Now let her drop! We'll send them to hell where they belong. Good shot; she landed!"

It was the hank of a spare anchor, balanced for an instant on the rail, then sent crashing down through the frail bottom of the boat beneath. The wreck drifted away into the fog, the two miserable occupants clinging desperately to the gunwales. I lifted Dorothy to her feet, and she clung to me unsteadily, her face yet white.

"Watkins, have you figured up results?"

"Two of our men are cut rather badly, and one hasn't come to yet from a smart rap on the head."

"None got away?"

"Not 'less they swum, thar's six dead ones aboard. Ever hook tar the water, mostly because they had to. The only livin' one o' the bunch is that nigger 'longside the wheel, an' nuthin' but a thick skull saved him."

"Then there were eleven in the party. What do you suppose has become of the others aboard the Namur?"

"I dunno, sir; they might be a waitin' out there in fog. Perhaps the nigger cud tell you."

I crossed over to where the fellow sat on a grating, his head in his hands, the girl still clinging to my sleeve, as though fearful of being left alone. The man was a repulsive brute, his face stained with blood, dripping from a cut across his low forehead. He looked up sullenly at our approach, but made no effort to rise.

"Look yere, you black villain," roared Watkins, driving the lesson home with his foot, "don't be a playin' possum yer. Stand up an' answer Mister Carlyle, or yer'll git a worse clip than I give yer afore. Whar is the bloody bark?"

"Pounding her heart out on the rocks yonder," he said civilly, "unless she's slid off an' gone down. To the west, maybe a mile or so."

"What about the crew?"

"They got away in the boats, an' likely mostly are ashore. We were in the last boat launched, and headed out so far ter get 'round a ledge o' rocks we got lost in the fog. Then the mist sorter opened an' give us a glimpse o' yer topsails. We didn't expect no fight, once we got aboard."

"Expected to find something easy, of course? Perhaps it would have been if—what is it you see out there, Simms?"

The seaman, who was standing with hollowed hands shading his eyes, staring forth into the swirling drapery of fog, turned at my call and pointed excitedly.

"There's a bark aground yonder, sir; and it looks like the Namur!"

Even as I crossed the deck to his side the wreaths of obscuring mist seemed to divide, as though swept apart by some mighty hand, and there in the full glow of the sun, a picture in a frame, lay the wrecked vessel. Others saw it as I did, and gave vent to recognition.

"Damned if it ain't the old hooker!"

"She got what was coming to her all right mates."

"And she's lousy with treasure!"

"Come here, Sam! That's the last of the Namur."

CHAPTER XXXII.

The Last of the Namur.

The vessel was plainly a total wreck, rapidly pounding to death on a sharp ledge of rock. Both masts were down, and, lifted as the bow was, it was easy to perceive the deck was in splinters where falling spars and topmasts had crushed their way through. The bows had caught, seemingly jammed in between rocks, the stern sunk deep, with cabin port holes barely above reach of the waves. Not a living thing appeared on board, and, as the fog slowly drifted away, my eyes could discern no sign of any boat, no evidence of the crew, along the wide sweep of water. A voice aroused me.

"What was it you said, Jack, 'bout treasure on the old hooker? Why not get it afore it's too late?"

"It's thar, all right, Ole," and I knew the speaker to be Haines. "Ain't it, Mr. Carlyle?"

"Yes, lads, there must be money on board, unless those fellows took it with them in the boats. I know of fifty thousand pounds stolen in Virginia, and no doubt there is more than that. The bark is liable to slide off that rock any minute and go down like a stone. What do you say, bullies? Here is a risky job, but a pocket full of gold pieces, if we can get aboard and safely off again. Who'll go across with me?"

There was a babel of voices, the men crowding about me, all else forgotten as greed gripped their imaginations.

"Stand back, lads! I cannot use all of you. Four will be enough. You'll not lose anything of what we bring back; it'll be share and share alike, so fall, to, hearties."

I paused an instant to speak to Dorothy, seated on the flag locker, explaining to her swiftly my object in exploring the wreck and pledging myself not to be reckless in attempting to board. I read fear in her eyes, yet she said nothing to dissuade me.

I slipped down a rope and dropped into the boat, taking my place with a steering oar at the stern, and we shot away through the green water. The Namur proved to be a more complete wreck than our distant view had revealed, and lying in a more precarious position. It was no pleasant job getting aboard, but ordering Haines to accompany me, and the others to lie by, I made use of a dangling backstay, and thus hauled myself up to a reasonably secure footing. The fellow joined me breathless, and together we perched on the rail to gain view of the deck.

It was a distressing, hopeless sight, the vessel rising before us like the roof of a house, the deck planks stove in, a horrible jumble of running rigging, booms and spars, blocking the way forward. There were three bodies tangled in the wreckage within our sight, crushed out of all human resemblance, and the face of a negro, caught beneath the ruins of the galley, seemed to grin back at me in death. Every timber groaned as the waves struck and rocked the sodden mass, and I had no doubt but that the vessel had already broken in two.

Bigger and Heavier Hen Fruit.

It is thought by naturalists that the eggs of domestic hens of the present day are larger and heavier by nearly a third than those of the hens of the ancients. Eggs differ a good deal in weight, the average weight being about two ounces. A good egg is made up of ten parts shell, 60 parts white and 30 parts yolk. The white of an egg contains 86 per cent water. The shell contains about 2 per cent animal matter and 1 per cent of the phosphates of lime and magnesia, the rest consisting of carbonate of lime. Half the various specimens of snakes lay eggs. Instead of shell the covering of the egg is a tough, white, leathern substance. The largest egg of any bird today is the ostrich egg.

LESSON FOR JULY 13

BAPTISM.

LESSON TEXTS—Matt. 28:18-20; Acts 8:34-40.

GOLDEN TEXT—For as many of you as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ.—Gal. 3:27.

ADDITIONAL MATERIAL—Matt. 3:13-17; Acts 2:37, 38; 19:1-7; Col. 2:12; I Peter 3:18-21.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus Christ Baptized by John.

JUNIOR TOPIC—The Baptism of Jesus Christ.

INTERMEDIATE TOPIC—The Pledge of Christian Discipleship.

SENIOR AND ADULT TOPIC—Significance and Importance of Christian Baptism.

I. The Apostles' Commission (Matt 28:18-20).

1. The authority of Jesus. (v. 18). God gave him all authority in heaven and on earth. As mediator and coming king he possessed all authority. This authority extends over all the material world, angels, wicked men, devils, and his own people. God highly exalted him and gave him a name which is above every name (Phil. 2:9). There is no other way of salvation, for the entire matter of redemption is in his hands (Acts 4:12). Since God has so highly honored him it is extreme folly to expect to be saved while disregarding him.

2. The obligation of the apostles (vv. 19-20).

(1) It was to teach, that is, make disciples of all the nations (v. 19). They were to make known to the whole world that Christ had died to save sinners and that God had committed to Jesus the redemption of the world. Those who are Christ's disciples are bound to proclaim him to others.

(2) Baptize those who believe (v. 19). This is the divinely appointed way of making a public confession of faith in Christ. The disciples must publicly take a stand for Christ. The application of water symbolizes the purifying effect of the blood of Christ and solemnly dedicates to the service of God. This baptism must be in the name of the Father, Son and Holy Ghost, showing that the believer has been brought into definite relationship to each member of the Holy Trinity.

(3) Teach the disciples obedience (v. 20). Profession is not enough, it must issue in obedience. Faith must result in works. To call Jesus "Lord" and do not the things which he says profits nothing.

3. The all-sufficient promise (v. 20). The Lord had told the disciples what would happen to them after he had gone away. He made it plain that perils of all kinds awaited them. Though the difficulties were great nothing mattered so long as they had the presence and fellowship of the all-powerful Savior and Lord.

II. The Baptism of the Eunuch (Acts 8:34-40).

1. Philip preached Jesus Christ to him (v. 35). At the invitation of the eunuch Philip joined himself to the chariot and found the eunuch reading from the fifty-third chapter of Isaiah. Beginning with this Scripture he preached Christ. He did not preach Christ as a great teacher, but as a savior who had suffered and died instead of the sinner. He preached him as one who had offered himself as a ransom for many. The fact that the eunuch, a great statesman, needed an interpreter of the Scriptures, even such a plain passage as the fifty-third chapter of Isaiah, shows the absolute need of a preacher. The printed page is valuable, but there will always be the need of a preacher. The gospel needs to be experienced before one can be a witness of its saving power.

2. The eunuch requesting baptism (v. 36).

When Christ is truly preached men naturally desire to confess him in baptism. In many quarters baptism has been unduly emphasized, but in others it has been disregarded. It is highly important that an intelligent understanding of its meaning be possessed; for that of which Jesus Christ gave an example and a command is highly important.

3. Philip baptizing the eunuch (v. 38). Having secured from the eunuch the proper confession Philip baptized him. It is faith in Christ that saves, but those who have genuine faith desire to seal it in baptism.

4. The eunuch rejoicing (v. 39). Confession of Christ brings joy. Those who obey the commandments of the Lord can go on their way rejoicing.

Jesus Saves.

As a child walking over a slippery and dangerous path cries out, "Father, I am falling!" and has but a moment to catch his father's hand, so every believer sees hours when only the hand of Jesus comes between him and the abysses of destruction.—Cuyler.

Wise in Time.

"Nine-tenths of our wisdom lies in being wise in time," says a great statesman. As far as results are concerned, the wisdom that comes too late is often little better than folly. "If only I had thought of it when the chance offered, I might," is the prelude to many of our useless regrets.

Self Distrust Causes Failure.

In the assurance of strength there is strength; and they are the weakest, however, strong, who have no faith in themselves or their powers.—Bovee.

The DAIRY

MILK STRAINING IMPORTANT

Utensils and Strainer Cloths Should Be Thoroughly Washed and Then Sterilized.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Strainer cloths containing 35,000,000 bacteria per square inch have been found in use on dairy farms.

The average strainer cloth, of which about 36 square inches is in contact with the milk, is likely to contain fully a billion bacteria if it is not washed and sterilized after each milking.

If the cloth is folded, the number of bacteria is likely to be still greater.

Milk produced under conditions where utensils were not sterile was found to contain more than 666,000 bacteria per cubic centimeter.

When all utensils were sterilized, the average bacterial count was only about 31,000 per cubic centimeter or less than one-twentieth as many.

Bacteria in milk are not necessarily injurious to health, but they reduce its keeping quality. Certain kinds of bacteria, if too numerous, also affect its palatability. For the production of clean milk the department of agriculture urges strict sanitation in every dairy operation.

Utensils and strainer cloths should be thoroughly washed with warm water and washing powder, then rinsed in clean water and sterilized by boiling or steaming for five minutes. After sterilization, the utensils, including pails, cans, strainers, and strainer cloths, should be hung in a clean place where they will be protected from flies and dust. Milk as it leaves the udder of healthy cows is clean and pure and may be kept so by following the methods outlined.

CANS BETTER THAN BUCKETS

Much More Convenient for Handling Milk and Cream in Transferring to the House.

Milk and cream from even a few cows can be much more conveniently handled in regular milk cans than in the shallow pans and wide-mouthed buckets commonly used.

Cans are convenient for collecting the milk at the barn and transferring it to the house.

These cans may be bought in various sizes. For handling cream and skim milk where separators are used, or even where cream is set to sour for butter making, the "shotgun can," is very convenient. It can be easily covered and set in water and is convenient to handle.

SYSTEM OF CROP ROTATION

Successful Dairymen Will Have One Market or Cash Crop Besides Profit From Dairy.

The most successful dairymen have a system of crop rotation that enables them to have one market or cash crop, besides the profit of the dairy. The increased fertility that is brought on to the farm from the use of concentrated feed stuffs more than offsets the amount of fertility removed by the sale of the dairy products. Another factor is that the same help required to properly conduct a dairy can find time outside of the routine dairy work to care for a profitable market or cash crop.

Tank for Dairy Herd.

When figuring on a tank for the dairy herd, allow for about 100 pounds, or 20 gallons, for each cow daily.

Making a Kicking Cow.

Most times it is the calf that is handled roughly that makes the kicking cow.

Suitable After All.

This young Frenchman had learned his English in France and found that it was often quite different from that used in the United States. After he had been over here a little more than a month his host asked him to substitute in his place at his card club. And he accepted.

When he entered the clubroom he tried as usual to make a speech which would be both complimentary and explanatory. "Ladies and gentlemen," he began, "I come not as a regular but as—"

The word "substitute" would not come to his memory. He knew that "volunteer" was not the suitable one. "I come not as a regular, but as a—and then came one—as a cavalier," he finished blandly.

GOVERNMENT ADVISES WHEAT GROWERS

How to Avoid Hessian Fly.

"It should be borne in mind that the most practical and effective methods of controlling the Hessian fly are identical with the best methods of producing the maximum yields of wheat. It does not seem to occur to the average farmer that it is possible for him to fight the Hessian fly by the process of good farming, involving thorough cultivation, good seed, and a rotation of crops. It has been said, and with truthfulness, that outbreaks of this pest are more often the result of poor farming than otherwise. The most serious objection to the most practical and effective method that can be employed to control this pest in the field—namely, late sowing—is that there is danger of so delaying the growth of the plants that they do not become sufficiently advanced to enable them to withstand the winter. The farmer is thus placed, as it were, between Scylla and Charybdis, and must risk the ravages of the Hessian fly on the one hand or the freezes of winter on the other.

"Much of the delay in the growth of late-sown plants in the fall can be eliminated by paying close attention to the preparation of the soil and to the quality of the seed. A thoroughly vigorous wheat plant will not only withstand a slight attack of the Hessian fly but it frequently occurs that such a light attack is rather beneficial than otherwise, for the reason that the killing of the first shoot that is thrown up from the kernel forces the plant to tiller, and in rich soil the result is to produce more grain; but if the soil lacks fertility and has been poorly prepared, this slight attack that vigorous plants overcome is fatal to weak plants, because of the badly nourished condition of the plants. The best advice that can be given is to begin the preparation of the field in the fall precisely as though it was expected to sow at a very early date, but instead of sowing use the disk harrow and the roller, even after it appears to be a waste of labor to till the field further.

"When a finely pulverized, compact seedbed has been secured, the seed should be selected, and this should be done with the point in view that unnaturally shriveled or otherwise imperfect kernels cannot produce healthy wheat plants. When the kernel sprouts it at once sends fibrous roots down into the soil from which to draw nourishment for the young plant, and if little or no nourishment is secured the wheat plants are put into somewhat the condition of stunted calves, pigs or other farm animals which are underfed.

"Wheat plants cannot secure prompt and ample nourishment if the roots must make their way about among clods due to poor preparation of the soil, or in soil that lacks in fertility. The farmer, then, should begin the preparation of his soil with the object of delaying the sowing of the wheat and afterwards of pushing the growth of the plant to the utmost until the beginning of the cold weather. There are farmers who grow wheat continuously year after year but who rarely lose a crop on account of Hessian fly attacks, and even more rarely does the pest originate in their own fields."—Circular 51, U. S. Department of Agriculture.

FERTILIZE LIBERALLY

Says Professor Ages.

"I am convinced that the average individual loses his chance for the largest net income from land by failure to fertilize liberally. When one lacks capital it is perhaps a serious matter to run up a big bill for fertilizers, but when labor and seeds are to be risked it is poor business not to have enough plant food to make a good crop. Poor land does not get one anywhere—at least in the direction he wants to travel."—Alva Ages, in National Stockman and Farmer.

ENGLAND MUST INCREASE WHEAT YIELDS

According to the editor of the United States Experiment Station Record, Director Russell of the Rothamstead (England) experiment station says that "the English farmer's task in the future will be to increase his yield." But he further states: "We must strengthen the straw, improve the tillering, regulate to some extent the development of grain and control the pests. Until these are all solved we cannot hope to get much further with increased wheat yields."

The interesting part of this is that so good an authority sees the necessity of still further increasing the English yields of wheat per acre. In this country, although we produce less than one-half the English yields per acre, some of our would-be agricultural economists tell us that we have solved our production problems, have even already given too much attention to production. So long as American farmers produce only about 14 bushels of wheat per acre while England produces for an average of ten years 32.8 bushels of wheat per acre, it is ridiculous to suppose that, while in competition with English farmers, we have no further production problems calling for solution. The great American agricultural problem is greater soil fertility and greater yields per acre.

THE WHEAT THAT DOES NOT WINTER-KILL

Every winter takes its toll of the wheat crop. Some winters destroy more, some less, but always there are thousands of acres of wheat plowed down each spring because so many of the wheat plants have been heaved out and destroyed. The causes of heaving are two. The wheat may have been sown late or grown poorly in the fall, so that there is but a scant covering for the ground. Frost gets in and out comes the plant, roots and all. The wheat which makes poor top growth also makes a poor root growth, generally for the same reason—the soil is poor. A good root growth is as vital to the life of the plant over winter as is a good top growth. It serves as an anchor.

Unfertilized: Small Roots, No Tillers.

If the wheat is sown late and is not well and properly fed it grows slowly and winter catches it unprotected. The plant shown was drawn from a sample dug, washed and pictured on the same day as the one shown below. Incidentally the wheat plants were both sown on the same day. The difference is that the small and weak plant was not fertilized and the big husky plant was grown on a soil made rich by an application of high-grade fertilizer. The small plant was like all of its fellows. The big one was part of a mass which covered the soil and filled it so completely with roots that the frost had little chance to get in and no chance to do damage.

HOOVER EXPECTS BIG EXPORTS OF AMERICAN GRAIN

Europe Needs Huge Shipments.

After surveying Europe's grain needs and possible sources of supply for 1919, Mr. Herbert Hoover gives figures which show that there will be need for every bushel America can spare.

Europe will have to import some 850,000,000 bushels of wheat and rye from the 1919 crop, and Mr. Hoover counts on approximately 450,000,000 bushels of this from the United States. When we recall that we exported only 270,000,000 bushels from our 1918 crop it becomes evident at once that even with a bumper crop this year every extra bushel will find a ready market across the water. This, of course, means continued good prices.

Swat the Hessian Fly With Fertilizer.

The proper use of fertilizer at seeding time will bring wheat through in vigorous condition even though planted late to avoid the Hessian fly.

INCREASING WHEAT YIELDS

What the Ohio Experiment Station Has Learned.

Wheat yields are distressingly low in the United States—lower than in any of the other big wheat-producing countries except Russia and India. This fact did not attract much attention until we began to need wheat very badly and until the price of wheat went to $2.00 or more per bushel. Farmers then began to ask, "How can we grow more per acre?"

The answer lies in reversing the condition which brought about the low yields. Fertility must be restored.

The Ohio experiment station has worked on this problem of increasing wheat yields for many years, and they have found that by the use of commercial fertilizer they can bring the yield up to respectable proportions—where it will pay a profit. The average yield of unfertilized plots on land which is typical of much of this country was 10.7 bushels per acre. A profit is hardly possible with a yield like that, even when the price of wheat is where it is today. When fertilizer was used to return the soil to something like its native fertility, the average of all yields was easily brought up to 24 bushels per acre. In many cases the yield was more than that, but the average of all was 24 bushels.

When we remember that no more time is consumed in plowing and fitting the land and but little more for harvesting the 24-bushel yield as compared with the 10-bushel yield, we can see how the profit mounts up as soon as we begin to grow better wheat.

Last Friday morning, Mrs. Geo. Wade was severely bruised about her left hand and shoulder, caused by an explosion of the cook stove. For weeks she had been putting trash into the stove. Friday morning she lit it to take off the chill and almost instantly the stove exploded. Upon investigation it was learned that she had put some old paint into a paper and put it into the stove, and being wrapped in the paper, gave it more force. The stove door and lids were blown open. Mr. Wade and the neighbors heard the explosion and run to see what had happened, when she was found covered with blood. Her hand is swollen considerable but is getting along fine. Dr Sheffer reports that her injuries are the result of the concussion and not that she has been burned.

Such Is Life.

It happened the other Sunday at one of the downtown churches—the christening of a pair of twins. All went well up to the moment when the rector asked, "and what is the child's name?"

The father drew himself up proudly and answered:

"Pershing Foch Haig Marne Mons Lloyd George Wilson Jones."

The rector gasped. Then, taking a deep breath he turned to the mother, who was holding the other child. "And the name of this?" he asked.

The meek little woman smoothed her dress nervously and almost whispered "Maud."

Western Canada's "Horn of Plenty" Offers You Health & Wealth

Western Canada for years has helped to feed the world—the same responsibility of production still rests upon her. While high prices for Grain, Cattle and Sheep are sure to remain, price of land is much below its value.

Land capable of yielding 20 to 45 bushels of wheat to the acre can be had on easy terms at from $15 to $30 per acre—good grazing land at much less.

Many farms paid for from a single year's crop. Raising cattle, sheep and hogs brings equal success. The Government encourages farming and stock raising. Railway and Land Companies offer unusual inducements to Home Seekers. Farms may be stocked by loans at moderate interest. Western Canada offers low taxation, good markets and shipping; free schools, churches and healthful climate.

The KITCHEN CABINET

I think he conquers all who wins content.
Take what you may
Of proffered good: accept life as it stands
And make the most of its swift-fleeting days.

FISH AND WAYS OF COOKING IT.

Select fish with firm flesh, clear eyes, red gills, scales bright and free from any unpleasant odor. As soon as it is caught or bought it should be scaled, cleaned and well washed. After cleaning place on a large plate in a cool place until it is ready to be cooked.

To boil fish, wipe it carefully, dust well with salt and wrap in a cheese cloth four inches longer than the fish. Place in a kettle of boiling water, add a teaspoonful of salt, a bay leaf, a sprig of parsley, a slice of onion and a bit of celery. Cover the kettle and let it just simmer ten minutes to the pound. Lift out carefully and turn the fish upon a folded napkin on a hot platter. Garnish with slices of lemon and sprigs of parsley and serve with a drawn butter sauce.

Planked Whitefish.—One may have a delicious planked fish at home which may be served to perfection, if one has a gas or coal range. Secure a two-inch plank made from hard wood, oak, hickory or maple, a groove running around the plank two inches or less (in from the edge), will hold the juices from flowing over. Have the fish split down the back and place it skin side down on the plank after heating it so hot that the hand cannot be held an instant upon it. Season the fish with salt and pepper, baste with butter and place in a hot oven to bake thirty minutes, basting two or three times. When the fish is done, take it from the oven, garnish with parsley and lemon slices and send to the table on the plank, place on a tray a little larger than the plank. The longer the plank is used the better flavor it gives to the fish. Scrape the plank to remove any charred wood and carefully cover it when not in use, and it will last for years. If one wishes to roast the fish before an open fire, the ideal way, tack the fish on the board and stand it before the fire.

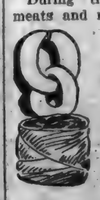
Frying Small Fish.—The old saying is that "small fish should swim twice, once in water and once in oil."

Perch, smelts and trout may be cooked in deep fat, putting the fish in a frying basket. Dip them after being well cleaned, salt and peppered, in egg and corn meal, then put them into hot fat which will brown a small cube of bread in one minute. Cook five minutes, drain on brown paper and serve.

If you've anything good to say to a man,
Don't wait till he's laid to rest;
For the eulogy spoken when hearts are broken
Is an empty thing at best.

HOT WEATHER DISHES.

During the warm weather cold meats and meat loaves are popular, as they may be prepared the day before using, keeping well for several days on ice.



Jellied Veal.—Wipe a knuckle of veal and cut it into pieces, put it into a kettle with two quarts of water, bring slowly to the simmering point and simmer for two hours; then add two onions, one blade of mace, one bay leaf, twelve whole cloves, six pepper corns, half a teaspoonful of ground allspice and simmer one hour longer. Take out the knuckle, carefully remove the bones and put the meat into a square mold. Boil the liquor until reduced to one quart, strain, add a quarter of a cup of good vinegar, and salt and pepper to taste, pour it over the meat and set away to cool over night. When cold turn it carefully out of the mold.

Veal Loaf.—Chop three and one-half pounds of veal and a half pound of ham, both uncooked; add to them one cupful of bread crumbs, one teaspoonful of salt, one teaspoonful of onion juice, half a teaspoonful each of pepper, sage, cloves and allspice, mix thoroughly with two well beaten eggs and press into a pan to mold. Turn out on a baking pan and brush with beaten egg and bake in a slow oven for two hours, basting three or four times while baking with butter and boiling water.

Italian Cheese.—Take one pound of veal, one and one-half pounds of calf's liver, half a pound of ham, one small onion, half a teaspoonful of sage, two tablespoonfuls of chopped parsley, one-fourth of a box of gelatine, two teaspoonfuls of salt, one-fourth of a teaspoonful of black pepper and a dash of cayenne. Wash the liver, cover with boiling water and let stand five minutes, then drain and dry. Chop the liver, the veal, the ham (all uncooked) very fine; then add the sage, parsley, salt, pepper, cayenne and onion grated. Mix well. Grease a mold and press the meat tightly into it, cover and steam three hours. Remove the cover and pour off the broth and add to it the gelatine which has been soaking in cold water to cover for half an hour.

As ships meet at sea, a moment together, when words of greeting must be spoken, and then away into the deep, so men meet in this world; and I think we should cross no man's path without hailing him, and, if he needs, giving him supplies.—Henry Ward Beecher.

MORE SALADS.

Sweet salads make a most dainty dessert, which is easy to prepare and much more wholesome in hot weather than puddings and heavy desserts.

Banana With Raspberries.—Peel small bananas and cut in halves lengthwise, spread with raspberry jam or the fresh fruit crushed and sweetened, lay on a lettuce leaf and serve with a sour cream dressing or with a simple French dressing.

Cottage Cheese Salad.—Shape small flat cakes of nicely seasoned cottage cheese, make a depression in the center with a spoon and fill with any favorite jelly or jam. Serve on a plate or fresh lettuce.

Dutch Salad.—Arrange well washed and drained lettuce in a bowl. Pour over three or four tablespoonfuls of hot bacon fat, season with salt and pepper, then add a tablespoonful or two of hot vinegar. Serve sprinkled with bits of fried bacon or minced ham. Onion may be added to this salad, or not, as the taste dictates.

The average boiled dressing is spoiled by the addition of too much mustard. It is safe to cut down nearly all proportions of mustard in most recipes one-half and in many three-fourths. One-fourth of a teaspoonful of mustard is sufficient to season an ordinary recipe for salad dressing. Mustard is highly irritating, as one knows when it is used as a plaster for the skin, so it is reasonable to suppose that the delicate membrane of the digestive tract is also irritated by its use.

Simple Russian Salad.—Arrange a bowl of crisp lettuce and heap chopped, seasoned tomatoes on the lettuce. Serve with any desired salad dressing.

Cottage Cheese Salad.—Take a pint of cottage cheese, add two tablespoonfuls each of shredded chives and minced parsley, or green peppers, season with salt, add one-half cupful of salad dressing and four cupfuls of shredded lettuce. Heap the cheese on the nests of lettuce and serve at once.

Prune Salad.—Arrange cooked prunes in the form of a flower by cutting them in halves, and arrange on lettuce. Put a spoonful of thick boiled dressing in the center and serve with the boiled dressing, if more is needed.

Nature is man's best teacher. She unfolds
Her treasures to his search, unseals his eye,
Illumes his mind, and purifies his heart,
An influence breathes from all the sights and sounds
Of her existence; she is wisdom's self.

SUMMERY SALADS.

There is no dish which "touches the spot" equal to a fresh, crisp, green salad.

String Bean Salad. — Take one quart of cooked and chilled string beans, add two tablespoonfuls of chopped onion, one half teaspoonful of salt, a dash of cayenne and a few dashes of paprika, cover with olive oil using two spoonfuls of oil and one of vinegar and let stand for two hours. Line a bowl with lettuce, put in the beans and pour over the dressing. Serve well chilled.

Tomato Aspic on Shredded Cabbage.—Cook two cupfuls of tomato and one onion for twenty minutes, add one teaspoonful of salt and two of sugar and when well dissolved, strain. Soak four teaspoonfuls of granulated gelatin in one tablespoonful of water and add to the tomato. Pour into small molds or cups and let stand until firm. Serve on finely shredded lettuce with mayonnaise or a boiled dressing.

Boiled Dressing.—Take two eggs well beaten, add two tablespoonfuls of vinegar and two tablespoonfuls of water, two tablespoonfuls of butter, two teaspoonfuls of salt and half a teaspoonful of mustard with a dash of red pepper. Cook over hot water until smooth and thick.

French Dressing.—Put into a bowl, three tablespoonfuls of olive oil (corn oil will do, but lacks the flavor), one tablespoonful of vinegar, one half teaspoonful of salt and a few dashes of paprika. Beat with an egg beater until thick.

Tomato With Onion and Cucumber Salad.—Cut thick slices of ripe, red tomatoes, or if small, cut in halves. Heap on each slice a mixture of chopped onion and cucumber well seasoned and mixed with French dressing; finish with a spoonful of thick boiled or mayonnaise dressing on top. Three good sized tomatoes will serve nine; the amount of onion and cucumber can be used to suit the taste. Celery may also be added using but a bit of onion for seasoning.

Evansville Restaurant Proprietor Says, "Pepgen Is the Greatest Appetizer in the World."

"I have taken four bottles of Pepgen and I can't say enough good about it," declares Wm. A. Mueller, restaurant proprietor, 228 S. Water street, Evansville, Ind. "Yes, I enjoy every meal I eat just like a hungry schoolboy. Before I took Pepgen my appetite was poor. My kidneys were also out of order. I had a constant pain across my back. When I got up in the mornings I had no ambition. Pepgen put new life into me. By the time I finished the first bottle I felt stronger. After the second bottle the pain in my back had disappeared. The third and fourth bottle completely restored my stomach to normal. Pepgen also relieved my little daughter of stomach trouble. It is a safe medicine for children because it does not contain alcohol or strong drugs."
